SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

On Monday, the 25th of May, Calcutta was very much gayer than usual, for there was a grand review and sham fight on the great maidan or plain (called the lungs of Calcutta) in honour of her Majesty's birthday. There was a force of 2,000 men on the ground. The Hurkaru says that "the roaring of the big guns, the rattling fire of the musketry, the clouds of dust and smoke, the prancing of steeds, and the consternation of the riders, with a hot sun overhead, combined to show what a very unpleasant thing a real battle must be." In the afternoon the Barrackpore and Calcutta Clubs played at hockey on horse-back. At night there was a grand ball at Government House.

Mr. Cecil Beadon, the Lieutenant governor of Bengal, being absent from Calcutta, Sir Charles Trevelyan presided over the annual exhibition of the Medical College. The insubordination of the students, and their complaints, which the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has pronounced groundless, frivolous, and vexatious, are very gently touched upon by Dr. Chevers, the Principal, in his annual report.

It is reported that the King of Burmah has been murdered, but the report has not been confirmed by any trustworthy intelligence from Burmah.

Instead of an account of the death of Dost Mahomed Khan, we have intelligence from India of the death, on the 5th of May, of Sultan Ahmed Jan, at Herat. There seems to be some suspicion of his having been poisoned.

We noticed in our last the little affair of Piffard and Morgan. Mr. Morgan, the Judge, told Mr. Piffard in court to hold his tongue, and this in a most offensive manner. Mr. Piffard sent a military friend, Capt Francis, to ask for an apology. He did not intend to ask for what is called "satisfaction." Mr. Morgan refused. The case was referred to a full court. It was decided that Mr. Piffard was not guilty of contempt of Court, but of "misconduct as an advocate." He was called upon to make an apology, which he did. Capt. Francis was also called upon for an apology, and he, too, complied. The Chief Justice said the Court was satisfied, and that nothing that had passed could or ought to affect Mr. Piffard's character or prospects. As to Captain Francis, he was bound to say that nothing in his conduct had been inconsistent with the character of a man of honour, an officer, and a gentleman. The only party much to blame, we think, seems to have been Mr. Morgan, who was unnecessarily imperative and offensive in his tone and manner; but authority leans to authority, and he escapes scot free. The weakest goes to the wall.

There has just been a libel case decided in the High Court of Calcutta, in which the Englishman prosecuted the Bengal Hurkaru for a misrepresentation of some matter connected with the Englishman's payments for exclusive telegrams. This happened in 1862. Mr. Mead was then editor, and wrote the articles complained of. The case went against the proprietors of the Bengal Hurkaru, who were obliged to pay 500 rupees damages, besides costs, and to apologise into the bargain.

Travelling in India is not perfectly safe now. There used to be throughout the country a wholesome dread of any collision with a European. The Thugs, who spared no one else, spared the white man. Even British females could travel from one end of the land to the other in great confidence. But the natives have grown bolder, perhaps, since the mutiny, as they have been more accustomed to face Europeans in fight. An officer of the Queen's 90th Regiment, on his way from Bengal to visit his brother in Bombay, was attacked near Deewas by robbers, who took everything from him, even to the coat upon his back. He was also severely wounded. The outrage occurred about 80 miles from Indore.

The death of Mr. W. Grant, B.A., editor of the Mofussilite, is announced in this mail

He died at Simla on the 20th of May. He had been compelled by illness to suspend his editorial labours, and attempt to recover his health by change of air.

The British ship Patterson, Captain Lamble, bound from Bombay to London, was totally lost just outside the harbour of Bombay on the 5th of June. The ship sprang a leak. The captain put her head round, and tried to get her back to Bombay, but she filled so rapidly that it was impossible to save her. No lives were lost, but no part of her cargo was saved.

The decision of Sir M. Wells in the case of Rundle v. the Secretary of State is a very important one. It seems to settle the question of jurisdiction as regards Government British officials in the Mofussil. The old Supreme Court had jurisdiction over all British subjects in the interior, but the High Court can only affect British subjects who reside in Calcutta; and as the time for suing for personal wrong is limited to one year after the act of offence is committed, it would be easy for an official to keep himself from the City of Palaces during that time, and so set the High Court at defiance.

A report has been received at Alexandria of a revolution in Madagascar on the 12th of May, and of the assassination of King Radama II. His widow is said to have been proclaimed Queen of Madagascar. Fears are entertained of a civil war. The Missionary Society will call this bad news, for Christian conversion had latterly gone on most prosperously, but this great political disturbance will interrupt all religious meditations for some time to come.

Mr. Holloway, of the Madras Civil Service, has been permanently appointed to a seat on the Bench of the High Court of Judicature at Madras. He is pre-eminently well qualified for the post.

The out-turn of the Bengal opium districts for the present season, to be brought forward for sale in 1864, will be about 27,000 chests of Patna and 200,000 of Benares. This is the largest crop gathered since 1855. Prices cannot fall so low as Rs. 1,250 a chest, which is the average fixed by Sir C. Trevelyan in his Budget for 1863-64.

Dr. Orin, deputed by the Italian Government to inquire into matters connected with the rearing of the silkworm and the manufacturing of silk in India, recently passed through Lahore en route to Cashmere.

The report of the Kurrachee Chamber of Commerce for the year 1862-63, states that the total value of the trade of that port for the year was 5½ million sterling against about 3 million the previous year: an increase of 86½ per cent.; upwards of £1,300,000 of this increase is due to the export of cotton, of which staple not a single bale was exported two years ago.

The steamer Bombay Castle, which capsized in the graving dock at the Bombay Dockyard, was righted in the dock on June 1. The damage she has sustained is found to be not very serious. No lives were lost.

By news from Cabool to 13th May it appears that Dost Mahomed had sent a messenger to Shah Nawaz Khan, the present ruler of Heerat, asking him if he would ratify the terms agreed upon by the late Sultan Ahmed Jan. The reply was that he had written to the King of Persia on his father's death, and, on the receipt of an answer from the Shah, would communicate his intentions with regard to the treaty to the Ameer. The Prince of Meshed was on his way to Heerat, having left his troops at Ghorian, to console with Shah Nawaz Khan on the occasion of his father's death.

The ship Morayshire has arrived in Bombay laden with Armstrong guns, and is landing 110-pounders.

This day appears in the Times a report of a trial of interest to Indian readers, but too long to transfer to our columns this week. There were two cross actions between the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Navigation Company v. De Mattos. It referred to a contract for coals. The judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench is in favour of the company in both actions.

BENGAL.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

The popular comedy of "Much Ado about Nothing" has been played out, and Mr. Justice Morgan has the satisfaction of reflecting that if, unlike Nelson, he has never had a Gazette to himself, he has, at least, had the whole Calcutta Bench to himself for a whole day. To the learned judges themselves it must have been quite an agreeable recreation, in place of being employed, as is usually their unhappy lot, in reversing on appeal Mr. Justice Morgan's decisions. Two mild apologies were the sole fruits of that day's work, but a third was still more due by Mr. Justice Morgan to the Bench, the Bar, and the entire English community in India, for creating and maintaining such an unfortunate scandal. Accustomed for the best years of his life to brow-beat native vakeels in Mofussil Courts, Mr. Justice Morgan appears to have imagined that he could with equal impunity insult a member of the English bar in open Court. Admitting, as is alleged, that Mr. Piffard's remarks were occasionally irrelevant, or that he sometimes repeated himself, Mr. Justice Morgan should have contented himself with intimating to counsel in a courteous, or even in a sarcastic manner, that he was wandering from the point. But nothing could justify or excuse his own forgetfulness of the dignity of the bench, and of the demeanour of a gentleman. He admits that he "shouted out" "Hold your tongue, sir!"—an expression we had fondly imagined was confined to women of a shrewish temper in the humbler walks of life, and by them even chiefly addressed to a sobbing urchin under their absolute control.

It is a matter of regret that Mr. Justice Bayley did not act with greater decision at the moment, and prevent the matter from going any further. But in all likelihood that learned judge never conceived the possibility of such a huge, if hollow, mountain being made out of such a very tiny molehill. He probably attached but little consequence to an exchange of angry words between two irascible gentlemen, or he may even have taken it for granted that Mr. Justice Morgan, when his passion subsided, would hasten to apologise for his temporary aberration of judgment and good feeling. If this were so, he clearly did not make sufficient allowance for his colleague's temper and natural or habitual discourtesy. It is still more to be regretted that Mr. Eden did not accept the office of peace-maker, but he seems to have been unable to shake off the impression that Mr. Piffard was bent on the duello. The mere fact that the gentleman who finally did undertake to act was of the military profession, was, we suspect, the main cause of the foolish rumour that went abroad of his being the bearer of a hostile message. There is nothing more certain, however, that military men are far more pacific than civilians where their own honour is not concerned, and in the present instance it is universally agreed that a more discreet and amiable person could not be found than the gentleman who undertook the task of conciliation at the request of an old and valued friend. It was, perhaps, a mistake to call upon the irate judge while labouring under the pangs of digestion, but Mr. Justice Morgan himself does not appear to have entertained the slightest idea that Captain Francis intended to convey to him a hostile message on the part of Mr. Piffard. What, then, was the offence committed by Captain Francis? Where and in what manner was he guilty of contempt of court? Is it a contempt of court to ask a gentleman to express his sorrow for having made use of words calculated to wound the feelings of another? But that was the head and front of Captain Francis' offence, and we rejoice to find that neither Sir Mordaunt Wells nor Mr. Raikes allowed their judgment to be obscured by a vain notion of upholding the dignity of the bench. Those two learned judges simply consulted their common sense and general knowledge of the world, and declined to see anything wrong in an act that was certainly well-intentioned, and which in almost any other case would have proved successful. The public, we feel assured, will agree with the Chief Justice in the opinion expressed by his Lordship that there was nothing in Captain Francis' conduct which should affect his professional position and prospects.

As regards Mr. Piffard himself, we trust that this unpleasant episode will induce him to condense his reasonings, to eschew repetitions, and to avoid interruptions of the Court. But this lesson will have been dearly purchased at the cost of so much time and temper, and the agitation of our European society throughout India.—Bengal Hurkaru, May 28.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF THE SCHOONER "SPHYNX."

In fulfilment of our promise last week, we proceed to furnish our readers with as full an account connected with the missing schooner Sphynx as the circumstances which have yet transpired enable us to do. We have already adverted to the departure of this vessel from Mauritius, in command of Captain Puren, and with Mr. Duverge as chief officer, having on board 3,700 sovereigns as a remittance to Messrs. Regnaud and Sons, of this port, for a cargo of oil. While the agents here were anxiously awaiting the arrival of the schooner, which was considerably overdue, they were somewhat startled by the receipt of the following telegram:—

"From Colombo, from Captain Duverge, schooner Sphynx, to Cochin, to A. Regnaud.

"Arrived off this port on the 8th, short of provisions. Went on shore to purchase. Instructed mate to remain off the port till my return. Vessel gone away, having 3,700 sovereigns on board for you. Think crew must have murdered the mate. Make enquiries on the coast. Telegraph should she arrive, and send me instructions. 18th April, 1863."

The agents were naturally thrown into a state of anxiety and confusion by observing the absence of any allusion to Captain Puren, and Mr. Duverge assuming the title of commander, they immediately flashed a message to him, enquiring what had become of Captain Puren, and received the following reply:—

"From Colombo, from Duverge, to Cochin, to A. Regnaud.

"Heard nothing further of the Sphynx. Ceylon Government has sent instructions all over India to look after her. Left Captain Puren on board. Shall come to Cochin by first vessel. 15th April."

It will be observed that in the last message he dropped the prefix of captain to his name. Not being satisfied with the inconsistent statement of Mr. Duverge, and being somewhat suspicious at the allusion to murder, Messrs. Regnaud and Sons addressed a telegraphic message to the Collector of Customs, Colombo, soliciting information, and bringing to his notice that Captain Puren was the commander of the vessel, and Mr. Duverge but a mate; in evidence of which fact, letters to the address of Captain Puren, written after his departure from Mauritius, were awaiting his arrival, and bills of lading signed by him were in Messrs. Regnaud's possession. To this communication the following reply was returned:—

"From Colombo, Collector of Customs, to Cochin, Messrs. A. Regnaud and Co.

"The master of the schooner Sphynx wanted me at this port on the 10th inst. to purchase provisions. While he was on shore the schooner disappeared, and as there were £3,700 in sovereigns on board, he says that the crew has carried her off, and requests that she be detained if she reach your port, of which information is required. Duverge states that he is master of the schooner, that he signed the bill of lading for the money, and that Puren (Puren) is the mate. Duverge leaves this for Cochin on the 18th. 16th April."

Suspicious which only had suggested themselves, now grew stronger, and pointed to something having occurred to Captain Puren and the vessel. The precipitate assumption of murder and barratry by Mr. Duverge, the moment of the alleged disappearance of the vessel, would not have naturally emanated from a sailor, alive as he must be to the numerous contingencies which would protract a vessel's return to port. Meanwhile, the authorities here communicated with Madras and Calicut, notifying these particulars with a view that every precaution may be exercised should the vessel find its way to the Indian coasts.

On the 28th, the man who had wrapped himself with so much mystery, made his appearance in Cochin, and having called on the agents of the vessel, was brought before the authorities, and the following declaration was made before Mr. Cullen, the joint-magistrate, and the master attendant:—

"The deposition of Mr. Louis Astyanax Duverge.

"I was first officer on board the British schooner Sphinx. We sailed from the Mauritius on the 25th of February, 1863, bound for Cochin. The vessel was commanded by Captain E. Puren. The crew consisted of four sailors (apparently Africans); a steward (a native of India); an apprentice who was the son of the captain; the boatswain (a mulatto from the Seychelles), and myself. I am a native of Mauritius. We had contrary winds. At last we reached Peros Banhos, an island in 6 degs. south lat. We had in some water there, we then proceeded on to Colombo; we encountered contrary winds. At Colombo the captain sent me on shore in a fishing boat; the vessel was then about three miles off the shore. He gave me £20 and told me to purchase provisions, &c.; I purchased some provisions and sent them off. I remained on shore to make further purchases. Before the boat which I sent off reached the vessel, the vessel went on the shore tack, and put out to sea. They must have seen the boat on board the Sphinx. The boat was near the Sphinx. She tacked and stood to sea. There were 8,756 sovereigns in gold in the vessel, in four bags. Two of the crew at the Mauritius took the bags of sovereigns from a boat and placed them in a case. They were nailed up in a case under the captain's bed in the cabin. I cannot account for the non-appearance of the vessel. We were not in want of provisions or water when we called at Colombo. I merely went on shore to get fresh provisions. I never told anyone that I was the captain of the Sphinx. We reached Colombo on the 8th of April, 1863."

Our readers will easily imagine the astonishment of the agents, as well as of the authorities here, at this declaration, so diametrically opposed to Mr. Duverge's statement before the collector at Colombo—and Duverge was somewhat sharply interrogated by the master attendant, but his replies were so replete with improbabilities and contradiction as to elicit opinions of a serious nature in respect to the fate of the vessel and treasure. Amongst other misstatements he flatly denied the assertions contained in the telegram from the Collector of Customs, Colombo; and with reference to his own telegrams, he maintained they had been drawn up by Messrs. Schultz of Colombo, and that he did not understand their purport. The agents here, therefore, thought it proper to refer his denials to the collector and Messrs. Schultz, and the following were the answers returned by them:—

"From Colombo, from Fryer Schultz and Co., to Cochin, to A. Regnaud.

"Your telegram received. We send you by post copy of Mr. Duverge's protest, sworn before a notary, in which he distinctly calls himself master of the Sphinx, and Eugene Puren chief mate, 29th April."

"From Colombo, from Collector of Customs to Messrs. Regnaud and Co.

"Your telegram received and laid before Government. Duverge made the statement sent to you, on oath before the magistrate, and, in consequence, Government communicated with the Indian authorities at his request. Messrs. Fryer Schultz and Co. in some measure supposed (supported?), and may have been imposed on by Duverge. He said that he landed to purchase provisions—6th May."

After he had given his declaration before the joint-magistrate, Duverge remained in Cochin for nearly three days, and we are told that he was placed by the joint-magistrate under the surveillance of the late acting inspector of police. So active, however, was the vigilance of the police, and so prompt and trustworthy their information, that neither they nor the joint-magistrate possessed the remotest knowledge of his absence from Cochin until the agents of the vessel discovered that he had absconded, and the direction of his movements was ascertained by the return of the boat that conveyed him to Chowghat.

What followed reminded us of the old adage of shutting the stable door when the steed had been stolen. Prompt measures were adopted to arrest the progress of Duverge, and the telegraphic wires were employed with almost unprecedented activity; but alas! a little too late.

Whilst the local authorities and the vessel's agents were conjuring up every surmise to account for the mysterious conduct of Duverge, so pregnant with the darkest suspicions, they were electrified by the receipt of a letter from him from Tellichery, throwing us still further into a vortex of perplexity and doubt, although in all probability it is incipient confession of darker scenes yet undiscovered. The entire truthfulness of the narrative cannot be relied upon.

He admits that barratry had been committed on the money, and that Captain Puren paid him 1,200 sovereigns as his share, which he asserts he left on board, though this latter statement appears to us very problematical. It would also appear from this letter that Captain Puren, whom Duverge criminally in no measured degree, had buried his share of the spoil in the island of Peros Banhos, when the vessel touched there from the Mauritius; and that the Sphinx is now on her way to that island to exhume and perhaps criminally appropriate the treasure.

Duverge further states that he is on his way to the French settlement of Mahi, and that his ultimate destination is France where he is proceeding "to die." His reason for absconding from Cochin is alleged to be the fear of being arrested, as some native had disclosed to him, for a bribe of 10 Rupees, that such a measure had been contemplated by the master attendant in conjunction with Mr. J. Regnaud the agent.

Without pretending to any great depth of knowledge of magisterial routine, we cannot help remarking that it appears to us quite marvellous that, with all the surrounding circumstances calculated to raise the gravest suspicion as to the criminality of Duverge, the man should have been permitted for several days to walk about Cochin as freely as any of its innocent citizens, and ultimately to embark in a cabin boat in broad daylight despite the professed surveillance of the police, and leave the place with as much publicity as if he were on an excursion of pleasure. It must be remembered when Duverge left Cochin the authorities were in possession of all the particulars we have detailed here, excepting the last telegram and the letter from Tellichery, and if they were unable to proceed upon that information, they were equally powerless to act when they did, which was before the later communications arrived.

Every praise is due to Messrs. Regnaud and Sons for their untiring exertions to bring this matter to light, and we believe they are under the impression that they were not properly supported by the authorities. Our best acknowledgments are due to them for placing at our disposal the documents which have enabled us to give these details to the public.

Duverge being a British subject, we think he may be claimed from the French Government by international law; but as crime unhappily has often a successful career for a time, he may bid adieu to the shores of India as he has done to Cochin—thanks to the vigilance of the police.—Cochin Chronicle, May 9.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CALCUTTA MEDICAL COLLEGE FOR THE SESSION, 1862-63.

More than one material change in the primary staff of the college has taken place within the session which has just expired. Death has removed one from our small circle, and sickness has been busy amongst us. We have had to lament the decease of one of our colleagues, professor William Crozier, F.R.C.S., whose distinguished career terminated on board the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Simla, on the 19th of November last. At the commencement of his professional career, Mr. Crozier was the first who obtained, under professor Owen, the studentship of comparative anatomy in the Royal College of Surgeons in England. Having laboured there for three years—during which he enriched the college museum with a great number of preparations, he claimed, by privilege of his position, an appointment in the Bengal army. In India, he maintained that character, as a comparative anatomist and laborious student of nature, of which he laid the foundation at home. In June, 1857, he succeeded Mr. Walker here in the conjoined duties of Professor of Physiology and Comparative Anatomy and Curator of the College Museum. It affords me melancholy satisfaction to be in a position to record the fact that, in a conversation which I had with him shortly before he sailed for England, that very eminent zoologist, Professor Walker, assured me that he considered Mr. Crozier the fittest person in Bengal to become his successor. His confidence was not misplaced. Mr. Crozier laboured among us, undeterred by the inroads of mortal disease which it would seem were long apparent to every one but himself, for five years, acquiring among the students the character of an able and popular instructor, and, among his brother professors, that of a worthy gentleman and esteemed friend.

His place has been, most appropriately, filled by Dr. Joseph Ewart, a man who, although young in years, has, by the aid of remarkable talents and extraordinary industry, become old in professional learning and experience. His power has been shown in the fact that, before the expiration of the session, he succeeded in completing the lectures which Mr. Crozier's sudden removal left unfinished. In performing his task, he had to compose and deliver no less than eighty-five lectures, each occupying an hour. The result naturally is that he is, at present, seeking restoration of health out of the deadly climate of Bengal.

Dr. Wilson, our Professor of Midwifery, has been compelled to obtain leave to England on medical certificate. The temporary vacancy is most worthily and satisfactorily filled by the appointment of Dr. Edmonstone Charles, of the Presidency General Hospital.

On the 1st May, 1862, Dr. Smith, a medical gentleman highly esteemed in this city, was appointed Professor of Dentistry in the College.

"Of my own difficulties since I assumed the very responsible and trying duties of Principal in April last, shortly before the commencement of the past session, I shall say but little here. With the aid of my colleagues, I have, I believe, nearly succeeded in overcoming those difficulties. The welfare of an educational institution like this, and, still more, that of a great public hospital, must always depend, mainly, upon the maintenance of an unbroken system of punctuality, diligence, and subordination to legitimate authority, justly, mildly, but most strictly exerted. The students and the school subordinates have learned that laxity, indolence, wilfulness, and insubordination are here, invariably, visited by serious displeasure, and, when needful, by punishment. They must also have perceived very clearly that all their merits are appreciated with warm and friendly sympathy, and that industry and good conduct will always meet with prompt recognition and certain encouragement.

"Each step on the path of every man through life is beset with painful difficulties; these are always best encountered by him who, in early youth has been narrowly watched and strictly guided by those who, thoroughly anxious for his welfare, place constantly before him, not only by precept but practically, the rule that he must fear to do evil and learn to do good. It is admitted by all that, in this country, parents generally treat their children with such laxity and over-indulgence as greatly to embarrass the duty of their teachers in disciplining them for that arduous life-struggle in which no favour or indulgence whatever will be conceded to them; in arming them for that long conflict for honourable existence in which they will meet with none but unsympathising competitors and stern judges. The line of my duty, as Principal of this College, clearly is to endeavour not only to make our students masters of the science of medicine, but also to render them men capable of performing the various duties attendant upon the practice of that noble science with humanity, strictness, punctuality, fidelity, truth, honour, and integrity, which no man can by any possibility do if, during his pupilage, he is allowed to be lax, indolent, and easy, dilatory in the execution of every order, neglectful in his watch over the sick, irregular in his attendance at lectures, indifferent to the authority of his seniors and superiors. Upon this, by no means novel line of conduct, I entered immediately I obtained authority within these college walls, and it is my positive intention to pursue this course, with all my might, as long as it shall be the pleasure of Government to entrust me with this great responsibility—in the full conviction that a lax, indolent, ill-informed, and loose principled physician is one of the greatest curses that can be inflicted upon suffering humanity. We cannot be wholly responsible for the after career of our students; but should it ever happen to any of them to be called to the bar of society with the citation, 'You have failed in your duty to your sick; you have not treated them with kindness, sympathy, tenderness, care; you have not visited them punctually; you have not prescribed for them with due caution; you have not handled and dressed their wounds with that regard which was due to their great sufferings and to their helpless confidence in you. Was this what your professors taught you in the medical college?' Should they, I repeat, be thus challenged by the inexorable scrutiny of society, their master, their consciences will be compelled to suggest, as the true answer, 'No, these were the things which our teachers never ceased to warn us against, by example, by instruction, by persuasion, by entreaty, sometimes by threats, sometimes by punishment, from the very first day of our medical pupilage up to the very last.' It may be they will add, 'Now that the inevitable verdict of public opinion is about to go forth and declare our ruin, we begin to perceive that, when our teachers appeared most stern in condemning the venial faults of our youth, now grown into the crimes of our manhood, their conduct was, in reality, most paternal. We then regarded all our errors as trifling "misfortunes," we looked upon reproof as mere unsympathising unkindness, and upon punishment as unmitigated cruelty. We now see that these were merely the force of friendly hands—striving to drag us from this precipice, to which, even then, they perceived we were heedlessly advancing.'

"I am happy to be able to announce that this year two native gentlemen have presented themselves for examination, and have been found qualified for the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the Calcutta University. One of them, Baboo Mohendrololl Sircar, graduated in this College in 1861 with great credit, and is now established as a medical practitioner in this city; the second, Baboo Jugobundo Bose, entered the public service in 1856 as a sub-assistant surgeon, and has for some years been attached to this school as second demonstrator of anatomy. During this year, also, Baboo Chunder Coomar Dey had the degree of Doctor of Medicine publicly conferred upon him by the Vice-chancellor of the University."

The successful students were called up in succession and presented by Sir C. Trevelyan with the various prizes awarded to them, consisting, for the most part, of books selected as far as possible with a view to assist their further education. The gold medals were not forthcoming, being, as on the occasion of last year's distribution, unfinished. Sir C. Trevelyan addressed the assembled students, and recounted briefly the history of the college from its foundation, characterising the difference which existed between its position to-day and twenty-five years ago. He urged the students to bear in mind that their success in life, after leaving the watchful eye of their Principal, depended mainly upon themselves, and he warned them that although many had completed their course of study in that college, and were about to enter upon the public service, much had still to be learned, for medical science was always growing, and the most accomplished English physicians admitted that there was always something to be learned. In alluding to the spirit of insubordination shown by the Bengali class, Sir Charles characterised the measures adopted by the principal to enforce order and discipline as uniformly conciliatory, and highly calculated to impress the students with the deep interest felt in their welfare, not only by Dr. Chevers and his colleagues, but by the Government. He urged the students to remember that to submit to discipline was a primary necessity, and concluded by expressing a hope that the institution would continue to maintain its high character as the first hospital in India in point of extent and efficiency. On resuming his chair Sir Charles was greeted with loud cheers.—Bengal Hurkaru, May 28.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ACTIONS AGAINST GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS.—The decision of Sir M. Wells in the case of Rundle v. the Secretary of State in Council, is one that calls for the most earnest attention on the part of the public, not only on account of the importance of the decision as affecting all who have claims against the Government, and who, being residents of Calcutta, intend to embark in speculations in land in the interior, but also on account of its bringing forward the fact that henceforth the officials in the Mofussil are no longer subject to the control of the Queen's Court in Calcutta. In the course of his argument, Mr. Cowie, the Advocate-general, suggested that the intention of the Legislature, on the amalgamation of the Courts, was to withdraw from the Calcutta Court its formerly exclusive jurisdiction over British subjects, officials in the Mofussil, as all the Courts had become Queen's Courts; and as there existed no longer the Company's Court in contradistinction to the Queen's. But the answer of the counsel on the other side would appear to be founded in common sense—namely, that there is no real change in that respect, because the judicial officers of the Mofussil Courts can be removed or transferred by the head of the local Government in the event of their decisions not giving satisfaction to the authorities, while the judges of the High Court are independent of all control save that of the Queen herself. Our readers outside the ditch will feel less comfortable than they used to do when we inform them that no action will now lie in the High Court against any Government official for any oppressive conduct unless that official happens to come to reside in Calcutta; and as our Legislature, by Act XIV. of 1859, limits the time for suing for personal wrong to the space of one year after the act is committed, the chance of the official coming within the jurisdiction in that time is small, indeed. If it be thought that the judicial or other officers be still subject to the Criminal Jurisdiction, and that they can be indicted for wrongful acts, that also seems a point of considerable doubt. The Code of Criminal Procedure prevents any such officer being indicted, save with the permission of Government, and it is a question of some nicety whether, although the Criminal Jurisdiction remains the same under the new charter, that Act may not qualify the power of enforcing the criminal procedure. We shall recur to this on a future occasion. We have delayed so long in taking up the question, because, without competent legal opinion on it, we could hardly trust to our own reading of so objectionable a state of the recently revised constitution of the High Court. In the meantime, if Sir Mordaunt's view of the law as affecting the Secretary of State be correct, it is right that we should draw the attention of our readers to it in order to induce them to agitate for a reform and a restoration to the High Court of that power over the Government which the late Supreme Court possessed. It is strange that the law officers of the Crown should avail themselves of such an objection; but having done so, and having succeeded, the next question is, what is to be done? It must be clearly understood that where a dispute arises between the Government and private individuals as to land, or as to commissariat, or other contracts beyond the limits of the town of Calcutta, the only forum for the determination of the case is the local Court of the particular pergunnah. The judge must in that case often be the person to decide on a matter in which he was one of the parties concerned. The Home Legislation never could have contemplated this. We cannot help thinking that as Government House is the dwelling-house of the spirit of the Secretary of State in Council, he, though absent in body, should be held to be, and was, by the Legislature, or rather those who prepared the Charter, intended to be considered to be a resident for the purposes of jurisdiction.—Hurkaru, May 26.

CALCUTTA GOSSIP.—Things are inane pleasant here just now. There is little to displease or ruffle, and the journals are full of readable trifling emptiness. The editors must not be blamed, for there is really nothing noteworthy stirring, and were they even gifted with inventive faculties, the regard the tribe have ever exhibited for the truth, and nothing but the truth, would forbid their exercising them. You cannot, therefore, expect very important, or very interesting, matter from your correspondent, and yet, without re-hashing aught the journals have appropriated, it is his to send you a sensible epistle of the usual dimensions. There was a rumour that Sir Charles Trevelyan would leave Calcutta for the provinces as soon as the financial exposition had been got through. Well, it is now the 10th of May, and on the 30th April the Budget speech was spoken,—yet is Sir Charles still in Calcutta. It is, however, I have heard, his intention to leave for the Neilgherries in August, whither Lady Trevelyan will have preceded him in July. The sojourn at the Neilgherries will be followed by a tour through the North-Western Provinces, very probably in company with Lord Elgin. In the interim, between now and August, the financier's attention is likely to be chiefly directed to the formation of those commissions which are to remodel our great public establishments and departments after the most approved English fashion. The first department taken in hand will be the financial, concerning the dangerous circumlocutory condition of which I informed you in a former letter. Being a critical case, the operations will very likely be performed under the financier's own eye, and by the two great practitioners now on their way from England, Messrs. Whiffen and Foster, who, with the best man for such work the department can furnish, will form the commission of reorganisation. Who the "best man" in the financial department is I have not yet heard, and shall not presume to guess. Messrs. Whiffen and Foster are of great reputation as regards the peculiar duty they have been selected for, and we may, therefore, expect some tangible benefits from their importation. I presume their plan will be the simple one of first estimating the (necessary) work each department has to perform, and then selecting for the execution of that work the smallest requisite establishment of well-paid, thoroughly efficient, trained officials. If so, a large percentage, if not nearly all, of the subordinate East Indians and natives now employed in the public offices will in time find themselves ejected therefrom, and replaced by "gentlemen" of "education and energy" from England. This change will improve the working of the public departments, and in time make them model departments, but he will be but a purblind statesman who brings it about! Eradicate circumlocution, and small sinecurism, and incompetency, from the public offices by all means; but rather than the impression should get abroad that the policy and desire of Government is to employ as few natives as possible, let us still, in order the people may have no fresh cause to hate our rule, even continue to employ ten or twenty, or if need be, more natives, to do the work one smart European clerk would perform without over effort. No feeling more detrimental to English interests in India could by any possibility be generated, than the feeling that the service of the State had been so re-cast as to exclude natives therefrom. Better even that Government should pay establishments of trained office men from home in addition to its present establishments, than that such a poisonous impression should become rife, to rattle the hearts of the people against their rulers. It may be, however, that notwithstanding Mr. Laing's plan for importing "assistants" is now being acted on, Sir Charles Trevelyan will so arrange his changes that neither East Indians nor natives will be able to see any grounds for thinking they have been unfairly or illiberally dealt with. It is to be hoped it will be so, but I am afraid one palpable result of this imported reorganisation will be, that the native community at large (leaving aside the humbler European and Eurasian classes in India) will have come to be of opinion that, to obtain employment under the Government of their own country, they must have been born cadets of English families, with some sort of interest at the India-house. It will not suffice that what is now about to be done is only what has been done, or is being done, in England. In England there is no difference of colour, nor are there jealous conquered races to scan through the mists of their own prejudices—prejudices engendered by subjection—every act of a Government which, though they cannot call it foreign, is assuredly not indigenous.

DELHI, May 18.—A European swindler was captured here a few days ago. It appears that he arrived at the Dak Bungalow, and was at once surrounded by "all the Delhi jewellers," pressing him to buy their wares. He, nothing loth, made a good selection, and gave a cheque for the amount like a man. Feeling the heat oppressive and thirst unquenchable, he sent an extensive order for brandy and sherry to a respectable Parsee firm. The goods were supplied, and a cheque given at once for the amount due; but, owing to some slight difference in the signature—the initials or some other part of the cheque—an inquiry took place, which resulted in the issue of a warrant for the apprehension of the traveller. Forthwith marched the police to the Dak Bungalow, but the bird had flown; and as a report reached the police that the delinquent had selected the cool garden as his hiding-place, they proceeded thither, and, in the cool shade sleeping, came upon a whole company (more or less) of European soldiers, who had evidently drowned their disappointment at finding no water in the canal in spirits. They were too formidable looking for the "peelers," so a file of their comrades were summoned; and the "happy lot" taken to the guard-house. Meanwhile, Mr. Ghooose (deputy superintendent) and his goslings procured lanterns, and, by a lucky chance, looked under the stage of the Institute Theatre, and there, crouching in a corner, sat the culprit, who was also taken possession of, and, after a preliminary examination, will have to stand his trial at Calcutta. The prisoner is said to have brothers in "the services," and to be highly respectable.

GREAT HAIL STORM.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, writing from Lucknow under date the 12th instant, gives the subjoined account of the severest hail-storm "it has been his lot to witness in this country after a residence of some years":—"The day had been very warm, everything outside from the effects of the deadly sickening heat appeared locked in a death-like lethargy; towards sunset heavy banks of clouds came up from the north west, and at dark flash after flash of lightning lighted up the horizon; about nine o'clock a breeze, accompanied by a few heavy drops of rain, cooled the still air, which increased in strength till it blew a perfect hurricane, accompanied by hailstones. The noise and din of the falling of the stones was something fearful. I hope you will not think I exaggerate, when I state that some of the hailstones picked up were upwards of four pounds weight. My servants collected enough to put in a blanket, and I had iced water till the morning of Saturday. I hear in some places in the city huge lumps of it were found till Sunday. Every frame of glass in the door and windows looking north has been broken. Three natives have been killed, and every house more or less has suffered damage. In cantonments, roofs of houses have been blown away, and some horses of the 19th Hussars picketed outside on the plain broke loose, and some were not recovered till three or four days ago. Of course the damage done to the fruit-trees is very great. Every mango and peach tree is bare, and all the melons smashed. The storm lasted about half an hour; the thermometer falling from 90 degrees to 70 degs. Singularly, the storm seems to have passed over a space of ten miles in breadth only, as at Moroon, the old cantonments, it was not felt, neither on the Cawnpore road beyond Alumbagh. The hail stones were so heavy that any person unfortunate enough to have been caught in the storm must have been severely injured." We should think so, indeed, even though the cold current of air which generated them had been close to the heads of the stricken, and four pounders few in number. If any one doubts this, let him try the experiment of having a scale full of iron or leaden weights—a fair proportion of two and three pound weights among them,—emptied over him at the height of say two or three feet, and then calculate, according to the law of the acceleration of falling bodies, what the effect of them must be when hailstones fall from a considerable, not even to say a great altitude, as they usually do, aggregating from small beginnings ere they reach the earth. The Summacher Hindustani, referring to the natural phenomenon, states that he has "heard of the loss of life and limb in many instances, and of the destruction of many elephants, camels, and cattle, and of much property," as a result of the great hailstorm. We should like to hear more about the "destruction of life" in the elephant and camel line, because those animals can bear a great deal of pounding, from above at any rate, and we doubt whether the hailstones, which spared most human beings, damaged them very much. If they did so, how happened it that the horses merely broke loose, ran away, and were recovered—being subject to the same visitation?

THE IDOL PARISNATH.—The Surrogees (Jains) having taken their odious little idol "Parisnath" to the newly-erected temple at Pahargunge, near Delhi, outside the city, are now anxious to take him back with all pomp, splendour, and publicity, to the great tribulation of the other Hindoos, whose religious feelings would be severely hurt by the pageant. It is forty years since this indecent tomfoolery was indulged in, and on that occasion there were bloodshed and great tribulation for the worshippers of "Parisnath." The same tumasha is now threatened, and will probably take place if the idol be permitted to pass through the streets exposed to the public gaze; but, with the view of averting the danger, "the authorities" have given their consent to let the procession return with the idol concealed; a compromise which, it is hoped, will please both parties. The native papers in the Surrogee interest state that the pageant is not only to be public, but that two companies of European troops are to escort it! And it is highly probable that this story will be believed. I ought to have mentioned that the Jain temple, where "Parisnath" sits on his throne, is about the richest of all temples in these parts. It was dismantled during the re-occupation of the city in 1857, but the Surrogees being wealthy men, principally bankers and jewellers, have contrived to restore it to its former splendour. But it is now no longer to be gazed on by the vulgar. Not even the shoeless sight-seer may gain admission; nothing less than a Lieutenant-Governor and his personal staff being permitted within the sacred pile. To such "truckling" there is no parallel, and the Surrogees of Delhi, Muttra, and elsewhere should be taught a lesson in season—a lesson they seem to have forgotten since 1857.

A NEW OVERLAND COMPANY.—If it were necessary for us to show how great is the amount of employment derivable by any well-managed steam-ships whose owners are willing to convey passengers to and from Europe at reasonable rates by the Overland route, we should have no great difficulty in doing so by referring to the numerous correspondents who address us on the subject. Considerable interest has been shown in the proposition put forward and shortly to be placed before the Calcutta public, by the British and Eastern Steam Navigation Company. If it be determined to supply the want which the mighty P. and O. Company ignores, being that of a large number of persons of limited income, who desire a means of proceeding Overland at a lower cost than the Leadenhall-street dignitaries can condescend to listen to, it need not fear any lack of support. But, inasmuch as all experience has shown that no advantages which can be offered to the public of the present day are more readily appreciated than those which afford increased travelling facilities, we read with satisfaction a letter which appeared in our correspondence columns a short time since. The writer suggested the possibility of arrangements being made with Cunard's owners, by which their steamers which now ply between Liverpool and Alexandria, and convey passengers under a management allowed to be of the first class, at £20 per head, might be utilised. If such arrangements could be effected—and we have no doubt but that with very little difficulty they might be—one great barrier to an immediately available means of cheap communication would be removed. From the world-wide fame earned by the Cunard Line, we have but very little doubt that they would further such a scheme to the utmost of their power, and we all know what that power is and how far it has always been wielded, not for the advantages of the hour, but for those certain to be obtainable prospectively whenever the British or American public is met in a liberal spirit. Our correspondent suggested whether or not it would fall within the province of the British India Steam Navigation Company, who now seem bent on searching for and improving any available route offering pecuniary temptations. It appears to us a question well worthy this or any other company's consideration. It is immaterial who comes forward to reap a profitable harvest by conveying the class of passengers who, unable to pay the extravagant rates charged by the P. and O. Company, are willing to pay full rates to enable them to reach England overland. Through bad management, or libelled good management, the P. and O. Company is evidently unable to do this. It appeals to its poverty, shows the casual observer it has never been able to pay more than 10 per cent., and asks whether the public would desire that an aristocratic body, revelling in its Leadenhall-street palace, and doing everything in princely style, should have the means of maintaining its dignity reduced? The charitable public might not ask such a thing; but others might say, "Frame your princely accounts in a different form, and your pleas of poverty will excite ridicule, and in all probability provoke an inquiry—'How have the two steamers just launched been paid for, unless out of dividends?'" As it is the P. and O. Company is happy in its own policy, and shows no sign of any desire to meddle with less pretentious schemes. For this reason the present is an auspicious moment to try whether there does not exist a large number, in India and Europe, who would appreciate a service of steamers on the overland route conducted on liberal principles. It has been often shown that travelling facilities extended, multiply travellers. The India of to-day is well able to support more companies than one. How many passengers go round the Cape only on compulsion, and when it is calculated how many steamers would be required to convey them to Suez, no fear need be felt that two or three lines of steamers, with small fleets, would overdo the trade. When the steamers are on the route the trade will speedily follow; for how many in India toil on, unable to absent themselves for the requisite time of a visit to Europe via the Cape, who would take a furlough if time and means permitted? If this be the case now, what will it be in ten years, with the influx of Europeans now seeking India as a field for colonisation? The time is favourable, the capital is obtainable, the support is to be found; and we trust before long to see an opportunity afforded to all classes in India of reaching England overland for something approaching to a reasonable charge.—Englishman, May 28.

MEMORIAL WELL AT CAWNPORE.—The Englishman states that Baron Marochetti is engaged on the Monument which Lord Canning promised to erect over the Memorial Well at Cawnpore, within the screen designed by Colonel Yule.

MAHOMEDAN LOYALTY.—Our Mahomedan fellow-citizens, says the Bengal Hurkaru, have stolen a march upon us—at least so far as words go. In our last number we published the addresses of congratulation offered by the Mahomedan community of Calcutta to her Most Gracious Majesty and to their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and we may rest assured that these expressions of loyal and kindly feeling will be highly prized by the illustrious personages to whom they will in due time be presented. We gladly avail ourselves of this opportunity to bear witness to the progress of liberal and enlightened sentiments among the respectable classes of Mussulman residents in this city. They are at last awakening to a consciousness of the fact that exclusiveness is a sign rather of weakness than of strength, and that by standing aloof from their fellow-men, who happen to disagree with them in points of faith, they are injuring themselves far more than their neighbours. They have ceased, too, to admire the foolish saying of the Caliph Omar, that whatever books differ from the Koran are pernicious, and that those which agree with it are superfluous. In other words, they begin to recognise the change that has come over the human mind since the commencement of the present century, and to accept it with resignation if not with alacrity. Much of this improved tone and feeling, we suspect, is due to the enlightened and persevering exertions of Moulvie Abdul Luteef Khan Bahadur. That gentleman appears to be holding a series of conversazioni at his private residence, during which papers are read, written in the purest Persian and Urdu, and devoted to subjects of general interest and importance. The use of history, the rise and progress of navigation and commerce, the discovery of America, the turning points of civilisation, and the principles of Mahomedan law, have already been discussed by persons competent to treat such subjects in a sound and practical manner, and to the unmistakable gratification of the Moulvie's numerous guests. We sincerely trust that he will not permit any temporary disappointments to discourage him. He has entered upon an arduous path, but one that may lead to incalculable benefit to his co-religionists, and which will certainly secure to him the respect and sympathy of all good citizens. The task he has taken in hand can only be accomplished by slow degrees. It must be the work of time to remove the prejudices of ages; but if he can be content to toil on patiently in laying a broad and deep foundation, his name will live fresh in the grateful memories of his fellow-countrymen, long after he himself has been laid in the dust and gathered to his forefathers.

THE "PEARL."—We hear that our colonial steamer is to proceed to Negapatam immediately after her arrival at Jaffna, to bring over some coolies for the railway works. The delay thus caused will not exceed two days; and essential service will be rendered to the enterprising contractor. From Galle we learn that the lantern to the light-ship intended for the Basses was lighted on Thursday night; and spectators describe it as being very brilliant. As that vessel was not quite ready for her destination, the Pearl has been delayed at Galle much longer than was intended. She sailed, however, on Saturday afternoon with the light-ship in tow.—Colombo Observer.

THE LIVINGSTONE EXPEDITION.—We regret to see by the Bombay papers that orders have been received at the Cape from the Imperial Government for the recal and break up of the Livingstone Expedition. The only ground on which this resolution has been arrived at is the necessity for economy. "The home authorities, while highly applauding the enterprise and zeal of Dr. Livingstone and all his officers, and while fully appreciating the interest of the geographical discoveries achieved, do not think that these are practically of sufficient importance to justify the continuance of the heavy outlay required for them. They have accordingly ordered that the Expedition should return home as soon as possible, that the Pioneer steamer shall be given up to the Admiral of the station, and that all the accounts shall be closed by the end of the year."

TOMPIONS.—A very curious—and, as no one has suffered, a very amusing—incident and court-martial, have just come off in Fort William. Some days ago, one Terence O'Laughlin, a bombardier of Artillery in the garrison, when about to fire the one o'clock gun, forgot to withdraw the wooden tompion previous to applying the port fire; and the consequence was that Terence sent the said tompion flying slap into the screw steamer Golden Fleece, which was lying at her moorings just opposite in the river. Fortunately no one was hurt; but Terence was put upon his trial, found guilty, and reduced to the rank of a gunner. The brigadier commanding in Fort William, considering that Terence was not guilty of wilful negligence, but simply of forgetfulness, which might occur to any one, remitted the sentence, and let Terence off. This is by no means the first time that a fire of tompions has been known to occur. Many years ago, on a festive occasion, the British representative at Naples went on board a frigate anchored in the Bay, accompanied by a large party, amongst whom were a considerable number of ladies. On the consular party putting off from the shore the British frigate fired a fitting salute; when, not a single tompion having been withdrawn from the guns, a whole broadside of these missiles showered upon the approaching boats, fortunately without striking any one, but with a great splash of water, and much fright. The boats put back to the shore, and when the salute was over, and the smoke had cleared off, the party again set out for the British frigate.—Bengal Hurkaru.

ABOLITION OF THE EMBARKATION OFFICER AT CALCUTTA.—We hear that the Government has ordered the abolition of the appointment now held at the Presidency by Lieut.-colonel Cox, of her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry, Assistant-quartermaster-general Embarkation officer, Calcutta. This is a wise stroke of economy, as the appointment is an expensive one to the public throughout the year; whilst, during half that time, the embarkation officer has little or nothing to do. With the services of an additional officer of the Quartermaster-general's department during the cold season, or the six months in which troops arrive from and embark for England the work hitherto performed by the embarkation officer can be easily and satisfactorily carried on; and a considerable saving will thus be effected by the abolition of an appointment which sprang out of the necessities of the mutiny, and has long ceased to be wanted.

THE PEARL OYSTER.—It has been proved in Europe that the edible oyster bears removal to a spot favourable for its increase, and in France most productive beds have thus been created. Dr. Kellaart, in a work on the pearl oyster of Ceylon, states that that also bears removal without injury. Mr. Silver, the collector of Tinnevely, has accordingly induced Government to sanction the establishment of an oyster nursery in the harbour of Tuticorin, on a bank of sand within the island about 3½ miles in length from east to west, and a quarter broad, with a depth of water from 3 to 7 feet. This is to be walled round with loose coral until it is formed into a basin, the edges rising three feet above high water-mark. Over the bed of this basin live coral is to be regularly spread. Dr. Kellaart is of opinion that the number of eggs contained in one oyster of five or six years of age cannot be less than twelve millions. The total number of oysters fished during the pearl fishery of 1861 only amounted to 15,875,400. The quantity of young oysters obtained each year from the nursery will be abundant to stock banks sufficient for each year's fishery.—Friend of India.

DR. PATON.—Flowers were sprinkled on Nero's tomb, and the apotheosis of Dr. Paton may be found in the columns of the Mofussilite. "Like most men in office," observes our facetiously sarcastic contemporary, "he does not like to be 'bullied' or attacked in ribald terms by a parcel of indiscriminate mongrels, who have the power and the privilege to attack any official whomsoever they please. From an experience of many years we are enabled to state that we never brought to Dr. Paton's notice, quietly and consistently, any grievance that was not immediately remedied. India owes much to the present Director-General of Post-offices. He was the first man to organise and carry out horse dawk travelling in this country, and this enterprise was conducted in a manner far superior to any other such enterprise conducted by private companies. Dr. Paton was the first man who conceived the idea of the Government bullock-train. What was the advantage to the public we need not state. In all matters connected with postal affairs there has not been any man in India who, in point of acumen and ability, could approach Doctor Paton." Is this intended for genuine praise, or is it a biting satire in the disguise of fulsome panegyric? In any case, we suppose we may consider ourselves as belonging to the "parcel of indiscriminate mongrels, who have the power and the privilege to attack any official whomsoever they please." The last clause is somewhat obscure, but is apparently intended to mean that "indiscriminate mongrels," no matter whom they please, are entitled to attack any official. We certainly did express our satisfaction on hearing that Dr. Paton was about to leave this country for this country's good, but we have since learned that our self-gratulations were premature. The redresser of the grievances of our "quiet and consistent" contemporary—if we are correctly informed—instead of retiring from the Service, proposes to content himself with a six months' leave of absence, at the expiration of which he will return refreshed in mind and body, and rejoicing like a giant to run his course. We can only say we are sorry for it. And the cup of disappointment is rendered still more bitter by the severe reproof administered to the Indian Press by its dulce decus et tutamen established at Meerut. "It is a bad trait in the character of the Indian Press," quoth he, shaking his venerable head, "that so many members thereof, when they hear that a man in office is about to retire from the scene of his labours, have no scruples whatever in stripping the hide and picking the bones of his reputation, as do vultures on the carcass of a camel in the desert." For our own part, however, we distinctly repudiate all design or desire to stripe Dr. Paton's hide—as that high official's epidermis is irreverently termed—neither have we any wish to pick the bones of his reputation, seated the while, as is the custom of vultures, upon the carcass of a camel in the desert. But is it really the case that men in office, when about to retire from the scene of their labours, are liable to have the bones of their reputation picked by vultures on the carcass of a camel? What a singular fact in natural history! But this is not the only surprising piece of intelligence for which we are indebted to our Meerut Mentor. He informs us that the London Review has "a chapter on 'Wives and Angles.'" Was he thinking of the old pun of Pope Gregory, Non Angli sed Angeli, when he confounded the angels with the angles? Or does he mean to insinuate that angels are angular beings? Or is it simply "a bad trait in the character of the Indian Press" that it abounds in typographical errors? After all, the mistake is not so bad as one that crept into a proof corrected by Professor Craik—thanks to an intelligent printer, who extended "the invasion of England by J. C.," into "the invasion of England by Jesus Christ"—the blunder actually escaping the notice of the learned Professor.—Bengal Hurkaru.

AN ORDER has been issued transferring the administration of the local funds of the Punjab from the office of the Judicial Commissioner to the Public Works Department.—Lahore Chronicle.

MAJOR GENERAL CUNYNGHAME, C.B., AND MAJOR GENERAL LORD G. PAGET, accompanied by their respective Aides-de-Camp, arrived at Kussowlie on Tuesday, the 5th instant, en route to Simla, whence General Cunynghame will proceed after a few days on his tour of inspection to Kangra and Dhurmsala, where two companies of H.M.'s 19th Regiment are quartered. Lord George also returns in a few days, to inspect the Regiments at Subathoo, Dughshai and the 10th Regiment quartered here. The Commissioner of the division, Sir H. Mowat, is also away at the gathering of Chiefs of Simla. The Black Watch at Dughai gave a dinner on Friday to their late Adjutant, Captain Wood, who has lately been promoted to an unattached company; his health was proposed by Lieutenant Colonel Presley in an able speech.

LIEUT. COL. T. SHAKESPEAR.—The command of the 8th regiment N.I. has been given to Lieut. Colonel Talbot Shakespear, Royal Staff Corps. Though this officer's merits are deserving of preference, we are not a little surprised to find Sir C. Wood's late order, regarding staff corps officers being appointed to the command of line regiments in supersession of regimental officers, set aside, especially in this case, as Captain Angelo, the officer superceded, was appointed to the command by Sir Sydney Cotton, under whom he had gone through the prescribed examination and had been strongly recommended by Sir Sydney and Brigadier General Haly. He had moreover held command for six months and recruited the greater part of the regiment, and had served long with the corps, and at the first outbreak of the mutiny had been instrumental in keeping the corps together, when deputed to remove two of its companies from the Govindgurb fort. The late General Nicholson's opinion of this officer's services on the occasion of the destruction of the Sealkote mutinies at Trimmoo Ghat and at Delhi, and the fact of his having been mentioned in despatches for gallantry in action should have been a good claim.—Delhi Gazette.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAMS.—We are constantly in the habit of receiving telegrams from Galle and Bombay, informing us of the arrival and departure of ships. They come to us gratis, and we are much obliged to the Government for them. To some they may appear of no importance, but to others, who have relations and friends on board the vessels, whose arrival and departure are communicated to us, they are extremely interesting, and we shall continue to publish them from time to time, so long as the authorities may think proper to send them to us. Now, we wish to know why the Government in India does not monopolize telegraphic communication, just as does Austria and other continental powers? We shall be happy to pay the Government whatever it may demand for messages sent officially, and be prepared as other members of the press ought to be obliged to do, to deposit a certain sum, monthly, or half-yearly in advance. It was a great hardship to the press when the Government snapped off, so abruptly, the telegraphic communication which used to bring us the latest news from England and elsewhere. Private telegrams are all very well, but recent experience has taught us to regard them with extreme distrust. By doing what we suggest, the Government will not only considerably increase its revenue, but confer a great boon on the public.—Mofussilite.

MAJOR GOOD AND HIS RACKET COURT.—SIMLA, April 30.—I believe you are aware of the fact that Simla would not be Simla were it not for an annual sensation in the shape of a scandal or a row. Last year we were treated to the gambling scandal late in the season; this year we have commenced early, and, as a matter of course, the principal actor in the fracas I am about to narrate is that hero of a hundred squabbles, Major Good. The affair is now so notorious, and is, moreover, so amusing, that in default of other news I give you the details of the case, the accuracy of which you may rely upon. When the mutiny broke out in 1857 Major Good was owner of the Simla Racket Court, and had a quarrel in it with Lord Frederick Hay, which rose to such a pitch that a round robin was circulated through Simla, urging the necessity of expelling Major Good as a public nuisance. After that affair he sold the property, and up to this last week everything went on smoothly. The late owner, however, put up the property for sale by public auction; and as it is a valuable estate, comprising the racket-court, assembly-rooms, and theatre, it was knocked down to Major Good for Rs. 17,000 and odd. As soon as it was known that the purchaser was Major Good, all sorts of funny events were foretold, and all were unanimous in predicting that we should sooner or later have a typhoon. The seers were only too prophetic, for the storm burst within the two first days of the re-opening of the racket-court. Major Good issued orders to a European servant of his to permit no one to play without paying in advance. A party of gentlemen were playing, when this individual walked in and demanded if payment in advance had been made; to which the reply was given that no such rules had been in force hitherto, and throwing down their racket-bats, they declined further play. The next day a party of gentlemen, some of them officers of rank in the army, visited the racket-court, acted up to the Major's stringent rules, and commenced playing, when Major Good made his appearance, and a fracas commenced. I am not aware whether the gallant Major addressed his audience in Latin, as Lord Dufferin did the Finlanders, but what I know he did say was something to this effect:—"This is my racket-court, and my property, and nobody shall play here but those whom I choose to allow to do so. You, sir," addressing Captain Clarke, 7th Dragoon Guards, "shall not play in my racket court." You may fancy the indignation of the assembly at this very uncalled for display of oratory. Your readers should be told that a short time back Captain Clarke was one of the stewards of the races where Major Good entered a horse, and as his horse didn't win, he was very much chagrined. Captain Clarke and five other officers of the 7th D. G. voted against Major Good, and, in order to mark his high sense of such an offence, he has given orders not to admit Captain Clarke, nor the other gentlemen who have been so unfortunate as to incur his displeasure, to play in his racket court. Such a deliberate insult offered to one of their body was, of course, promptly resented; the money paid was, I believe, got back; and the whole party left the place to concert measures of defiance as well as punishment. The news spread like lightning, and a compact, I am told, has been entered into that no gentleman in future is to play rackets in Major Good's court, and a committee has been formed to build another racket court at once near the club; whilst Major Good has been "cut dead." It is unanimously agreed that Good's conduct was most unwarrantable; whilst others say that he purchased the racket court merely out of spite, so that he might deprive those whom he disliked from playing at their favourite game. On this principle it is argued that, as proprietor of the assembly rooms and theatre, he may forbid whom he likes attending a public ball, or play, or concert. The consequence has been, that his racket court and his assembly rooms have been scouted as well as himself, and arrangements are being made to secure other premises for a ball-room. People cannot but feel amazed at such suicidal folly, for one would naturally suppose that Major Good did not lay out so large a sum merely to gratify his spleen by depriving the public of their amusements. An old military man as he is, too, might have known that an affront offered to one of their class would certainly be taken up as an insult to the whole. It is a very pretty quarrel as it stands, but it remains to be seen who will get the best of it, and how Major Good will like being sent to Coventry.—Times of India.

EXAMINATION ON CIVIL SERVANTS.—Changes are projected in the rules for the examination of civil servants still at college, such as to induce them to attain higher proficiency in the oriental languages. The reform is needed. Nothing is so remarkable as the almost complete absence of oriental scholarship among officials of the present day. Besides Mr. Muir, who is unsurpassed as an Arabic scholar, and whose "Life of Mahomet," like his brother's Sanskrit works, casts a lustre on the service, we look in vain for a scholar with even local reputation. Wilkins, Colebrooke, Harrington, H. H. Wilson, Prinsep, H. Elliot, and Hodgson find their successors only in the educational department or among the missionaries in Edward Cowell, Roer, Ballantyne, Hall, and Haug; in Drs. Caldwell, Wilson, Murray, Mitchell, and Loewenthal. Among the competition civilians there are Boden Sanskrit scholars, pupils of H. H. Wilson and Goldstucker, who should study to redeem their service from reproach and to give clat to their class. The objection to bookworms must not be carried so far as to kill scholarship.—Friend of India.

SIR ARTHUR COTTON'S PROJECTS AND PROPOSALS.—Sir Arthur Cotton is a sanguine man when, in his address to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, he talks of his Behar and Oudh irrigation projects, the former of which is to supply the highest houses in Calcutta with water, and the latter of which is to forward to Calcutta all the produce of Rohileund. But we must remember that he has reason to be sanguine. He has actually accomplished on the deltas of the three Madras rivers—the Godavery, Kistna, and Coleroon—what he promises to do for Orissa, Behar, Oudh, and Rohileund, through the East Indian Irrigation Company. But Sir Arthur Cotton has himself to blame as much as Government if he is treated as a Cassandra. Did he not offer to revive in Orissa more than its former prosperity if he had only a million of capital, and then, shortly after, on being asked to revise his estimates, declare he would require two millions, as though crores of rupees were so many billiard balls? And this, too, in a province whose whole revenue is only fourteen lakhs a year! Sir Arthur Cotton's mistake is the serious one of always under-estimating the cost and over-estimating the profit. Hence, though a hydraulic engineer of whose genius and character India has reason to be proud, he is always treated with suspicion. Sir Arthur Cotton, in his long career, has added at least a quarter of a million to the land revenue of Madras, and does not himself possess one rupee beyond his retiring allowances as a colonel of engineers. But India will only become a byword if he is, from an excess of noble enthusiasm, to delude the English capitalist to his ruin by extravagant promises. What, we may ask, has the Madras Irrigation Company done? The Government of India will give Sir A. Cotton the most liberal assistance in his three projects in Orissa, Behar, and Oudh, but let him be as sure of his estimates as that great hydraulic engineer Hawkshaw would be. Sir Arthur Cotton's proposal, however, to separate all expenditure on reproductive public works from the rest of our finances, is worthy of consideration. His complaint that the success of such hydraulic works as those of the Godavery canals is hidden, by mixing up their proceeds by land revenue, is not unfounded. It is undoubted that, by these works, he has converted an unpeopled, sandy desert into a prosperous, land tax-paying district with an enormous trade. Let Government take this one work as a test—computing its cost and income hitherto, and henceforth devoting all its proceeds beyond 5 per cent. on the capital to the completion of the works. The experiment should be tried in this case, because there can be no doubt that the increase in land-tax is owing solely to the water. We must, for purposes of economy, if for no other reason, look on India as an estate on which we are spending some ten millions every year, and of this more than half, or public works and railway interest, is from current revenue. Are we getting a return for all this, or are we likely to get an adequate return in the future? If what belongs to capital or debt, and what should properly come from current revenue, were clearly discriminated, we would cease to pursue works obviously unprofitable, while we would not starve those which are clearly remunerative.—Friend of India, May 14.

REMOVALS.—The Oudh Gazette states that Major Crosse, district inspector of musketry, has been remanded to his corps, H.M.'s 18th Connaught Rangers, agreeably to orders received from the Horse Guards. Captain G. Cavanagh, acting instructor of musketry to H.M.'s 10th Hussars, has also been removed from his appointment.

PRIVATES ACCUSED OF MANSLAUGHTER.—The six privates belonging to H.M.'s 54th Regiment, who were sent into Meerut under escort to be tried by court-martial on a charge of wounding some natives (not murdering a native as previously reported), have been sent back to their regiment. The court, after trying one of the prisoners, expressed its opinion that the evidence was not of such a character as to warrant a conviction on the charge preferred against them. The facts of the case, as given by a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, are these:—"The prisoners went out for the purpose of shooting pea-fowl, and during their wanderings came upon a native village, the inhabitants of which charged them. The prisoners finding that their lives were in danger, faced about and fired a volley of small shot into their opponents, wounding several in the legs."

DACCA, May 23.—Dacca was once blessed with a Municipal Committee, which guarded all the filth that could be amassed in the city, until in an evil hour they interfered with a portion of land belonging to a native proprietor, and got threatened with an action for damages. This led the committee to meditate on their status, and finding that it was not a legal one, the members hurriedly dissolved partnership, and left the magistrate ex-officio heir to the red carts and dirty bullocks supposed to be used for the conservancy of the city. In accepting the resignation of the committee, and acknowledging in an indirect sort of way that perhaps they acted prudently in resigning, the Lieutenant-Governor has proposed to the inhabitants either to accept Act XXVI. of 1850, or have a Bill introduced into the Legislative Council for the conservancy of the city. The question is to be determined in a meeting which the Officiating Commissioner has called for the 4th of June next, when all objections against Act XXVI. of 1850 will be answered, and the advantage of submitting to its operation be explained in a speech which the commissioner has prepared, or is about to prepare, for the purpose. We know that the taxation imposed by the municipal commissioners, appointed under this Act, on the town of Serampore, has been pronounced illegal by the judges of the High Court, but that was not because the commissioners have no power to impose a tax, but because they had no right to substitute a house-tax, and an exorbitant one into the bargain, for the old bazaar-tax. Our officiating commissioner, however, seems to think, that if we make our municipal arrangements in conformity with Act XXVI., we need not have any additional taxation, and that the chowkedary tax, which has already been in existence for years, may be made to supply all the funds required for municipal purposes. The determination to which we come will, in due course, be communicated to you. We are to have gay doings here on the 25th instant, in honour of the Queen's birthday, the birthday of the Princess Helena, and the marriage of the Prince of Wales. We club the three things together, and have one ball and supper in celebration of all. By this means we economise both loyalty and money. Mr. Stephen, the deputy-magistrate of Manick-gunge, intends to give the inmates of the lunatic asylum a great feed on the occasion, so that whilst we have dancing at one end of the town, we may have something similar, though not so scientific, at the other. But different people have their different ways of enjoying themselves, and there is no accounting for tastes. A rather plucky arrest was made the other morning in a village two or three miles from Dacca by Mr. Ritchie, one of our deputy-magistrates. An English petition was sent to the magistrate, telling him that at the village of Atti there was a man confined in fetters by his uncle, who adopted this means to bring his refractory nephew to consent to some iniquitous arrangement respecting the latter's landed property. Without any intimation given to any of the native amlah or hangers-on of the magistrate's court, Mr. Reynolds, the magistrate, gave private orders to Mr. Ritchie to proceed to the uncle's house and ascertain the facts of the case. Mr. Ritchie went off accompanied by a policeman, and by dawn one morning reached the house, and requested that the door should be opened. The usual excuse of the zenana being within was urged, but in vain. Ten minutes were allowed within which the door was to be opened, and at the expiration of that time the deputy magistrate threatened to break it open. The ten minutes expired, and the door was broken open. It conducted into a court-yard, at the further end of which was another door, which being forced led into a second court-yard, at one corner of which was a flight of steps communicating with apartments in a second story. As Mr. Ritchie looked about him the clanking of chains caught his ear, and running up the steps he came into a room, where, true enough, there sat a man with fetters on his feet, connected by means of a massive iron chain to an enormous iron anchor. Beside the prisoner sat the uncle's gomashita, threatening to throttle this victim of villany each time he attempted to call out. And this is the Mofussil, only two miles outside a Sudder station like Dacca. The Englishman's statement respecting the removal of the Rajah of Jynteah to Dacca turns out to be a mistake. The Dacca News will tell you that there is no Jynteah Rajah, and that the persons whom the Government wanted to remove were the Kyngors or Chiefs who have married the female relatives of the late Rajah. Nothing throughout the Jynteah revolt has transpired to throw suspicion on their loyalty. On the contrary, they materially aided the Government in persuading their people to return to their allegiance; but it is feared that their presence in Jynteah, by keeping alive the remembrance of their former independence, will tend to keep the people restless and unsettled. There has been a pretty little case for the sessions at Mymensing. The collectorate was robbed by a hanger-on of the courts of upwards of two thousand rupees. The money-bags were lying about one day when a shower of rain came on. The people of the streets rushed into the cutcherry for shelter. In the confusion, a bag containing Rs. 1,000 was made off with. Elated at his success, the thief sought a favourable opportunity for abstracting another bag the following day, but this time the money being missed almost immediately, and the hanger-on being missed simultaneously, suspicion fell on him; he was pursued, and overtaken with the money-bag in his hands! And this is the Mofussil, too! The man, I am happy to say, has been tried and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. The first of last April marked the setting in of the stormy and rainy season throughout our Eastern Provinces. Our latest advices from Assam mention the 1st of April as the day on which Nature began to revive, and disease among men and murrain among cattle to decrease. I wish you would wield your potent pen in exposure of the disgraceful practice of giving hush-money and rum to the savages of the frontier to keep them from troubling our territory. The Bhootias came down to the valley the other day, and squabbled with the authorities for more rum than we were engaged to furnish; and now another hill tribe, the Doplabs, have come down for the tribute and rum due to them. Why does the British Government humble itself to these despicable savages? Do you know what the hill tribes generally of our frontier think respecting this? The belief is universal among them that Assam belongs not to the British, but to the Bhootias and neighbouring tribes, who allow the British to occupy it on condition that they pay them an annual tribute, which must consist partly of money and partly of rum! Indeed the whole Government of our Eastern non-regulation districts has been miserably mismanaged. We have not cared to make the wild tribes understand the true position and our relation to them; we have, on the contrary, from a mistaken peace-policy, avoided as much as possible all occasion of offence, whether the ground of offence was reasonable or unreasonable, and these savages, taking the money we intend as a sort of compensation for the loss of some of their privileges occasioned by our occupation of the valleys, give out, and perhaps themselves believe, that we fear their power and seek to keep them quiet by humbling ourselves to them. I had well nigh forgotten to give you notice of the progress our city is making in the matter of native female education. We have two schools of the kind now established; one has been in existence for upwards of a year, and is aided by a grant from the Government. The other is a female normal school, a Government institution very recently got up, and intended to train adult females for the work of zenana instruction. The former school was recently examined by the ladies of the station, who are said to have been pleased at the intelligence of the pupils, many of whom are the wives and daughters of the wealthiest of our native gentry. Both institutions deserve to succeed, as we have no doubt they will, if the grant-in-aid school is made as much independent as possible, and if the Female Normal School is carefully looked after by the inspector of the division and his committee of lady visitors.

COLOMBO.—We (Colombo Observer) are glad to learn that the revenue derived from the sale of crown lands is steadily progressing. For the last few years the receipts from this source averaged £40,000 a year. But we have good reason to believe that a large increase will be shown in 1863, particularly in the Central Province, where the demand for land, both by Europeans and Natives, appears to be very great. The difficulties formerly experienced in obtaining land in small allotments by the native inhabitants have been entirely removed, and great facilities are now afforded to those who are anxious to purchase lands. We have received from Kandy the following abstract statement of a sale held at the Cutcherry on the 13th May, which seems highly satisfactory: amounting as the out turn does to about £4,500. It will be seen that an allotment at Badulla was sold for £5, and one at Matella for £4 an acre, respectively; the former being purchased by a native. Until the last few days the weather had been most favourable for shipping operations at this port, but the quantity of coffee forwarded does not yet fulfil our anticipations. The total quantity at this date is 520,512 cwt., an increase of 64,620 over the export at the same period of last year.

JAIL MANUFACTURES.—In the Punjab the healthy practice prevails of holding annual exhibitions of all articles manufactured in the ten jails of the province. The last exhibition took place on the 1st instant at the Lahore central jail. The Chronicle states that the exhibition was somewhat superior to last year's display. There was exhibited a magnificent carpet made in the Lahore jail and intended for England. It is about fourteen feet square, of a neat dark pattern, of excellent texture, and cost only 80 Rs. One of the most interesting objects exhibited was some glazed pottery from the Rawalpindie jail, consisting of cups and saucers, jugs, basons, preserve jars, and other useful articles. There is too little variety in the articles manufactured in the jails of the lower provinces, but in the Punjab all official works con amore.

VICTORIA CROSS.—The Victoria Cross is to be conferred on Captain R. H. M. Aitken for his many acts of gallantry during the defence of the Lucknow Residency; and on Lieutenant C. A. Goodfellow, of the Bombay Engineers, for carrying off the body of a wounded soldier under a sharp fire of matchlocks from beneath the walls of the Fort of Beyt on 6th October, 1859.

SANATORIUM.—The Mussorie correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that Budraj is almost certain to be chosen as a Sanatorium for European troops. "The Commander-in-Chief has minutely inspected the spot, and has ordered a report on its eligibility for a station for Europeans to be sent in. It possesses many recommendations which can hardly be overlooked."

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—A plateau at Lovedale, Ootacamund, has been fixed on as the site of the Madras Lawrence Asylums. The buildings are at present intended for 200 boys and 100 girls, with a hospital for both. The plans are to be revised so as to meet the probability of 400 girls requiring accommodation, since the Secretary of State has given his assent to the amalgamation of the Madras Military Orphan Asylum, both male and female, with the Lawrence Asylum. Sending East Indian children to live on the hills is a strange commentary on Sir C. Wood's refusal to allow East Indians to enter the medical service because of their alleged inability to stand a cold climate.

INFANT MARRIAGES.—The Lahore Chronicle, in an article exposing the evils of infant marriages in India, makes a good suggestion, that no one be allowed to bring a suit for damages or expenses of any kind on a contract of infant betrothal. The writer states that if a man meets with a sudden reverse in his fortunes and wishes to raise a little money, he has nothing to do but to make out, by an array of easily fabricated and not easily contradicted evidence, that his son was ever so many years ago betrothed to the daughter of another man, and that he has broken his contract. He sues him for damages and perhaps with success. Another man's daughter is betrothed and married during infancy to a boy, who does not find himself able to support a wife for some time. The parent of the girl sues him for the cost of keeping her during the delay. We see the evil in the case of Christian converts, who, betrothed when heathen infants, are not safe in marrying from the want of a clear law to free them if their betrothed will not join them.

FIRE.—The office and dwelling-house of Mr. Wilkins, assistant settlement officer of Shikarpore, in Sind, was burned down on the 1st instant. The fire is thought to have been the work of an incendiary. Government have lost property valued at five lakhs of rupees, and Mr. Wilkins some Rs. 5,000.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. J. MASKELL.—The Madras Daily News mentions the case of an East Indian, Mr. J. Maskell, one of the town magistrates, who during a visit to England has completed his educational course at the Middle Temple, and will bring with him a certificate of qualification for the bar. Not having, however, completed his full legal terms, he will have to return to England at some future day should he desire to be actually called to the bar.

BISHOP OF MADRAS.—The Bishop of Madras held his first visitation of the diocese on the 23rd April. There has been no visitation for the last six and a half years. Some thirty of the clergy attended morning service in the cathedral. At afternoon service the Registrar read out the names of the clergy of the diocese, those present replying, when Bishop Gell delivered his primary charge, which occupied an hour and a half in delivery. The charge is described as able and interesting. It dealt, says the Madras Athenaeum, with the missions in Tinnevely, Tanjore, &c., the work carried on by the Continental and Colonial Church Society, and the two large missionary societies, the S. P. G. and the C. M. S., and with the work of education going on in the diocese. He adverted also to those topics which are now agitating the religious world, in a most sensible manner. He advised his clergy what books to read with reference to the "Essays and Reviews," and the Colenso Question, and dealt fairly with the subject of the plenary inspiration of Scripture, the discussion of which has lately occupied the religious portion of the Madras world.

COTTON IN INDIA.—In Cuddapah last season a ton of Egyptian, in default of American, cotton seed, was distributed among the peasantry. Government freed 500 acres from land assessment for this purpose. The result shows that the climate of Cuddapah, without irrigation, is too arid for Egyptian seed. The proportion of cotton to seed of the Egyptian is taken at nearly one-third, whereas of the indigenous it is only one-fourth. It parts easily from the seed, whereas the country fibre adheres very tenaciously. The collector lectures Manchester, asserting that Government have done everything, and the ryots are ready, but in spite of a certainty of short American supply for two years to come, and distress, the most obvious step of supplying the seed by those who want the staple has not been taken.

GIRLS' SCHOOLS IN MADRAS.—The Madras Examiner publishes statistics which, if accurate, are valuable, showing the state of female education in the Southern Presidency. In 44 aided schools there are 2,077 girls. In 80 schools unconnected with Government there are 4,906 girls. This shows 124 schools with 6,983 girls. Of the latter 3,650 are Native Christians, 1,953 Hindoos, 30 Mahomedans, and 1,296 others. Five of the schools with 304 girls are under native management.

CHINCHONA.—The Madras Government expect to be able in 1864-65 to sell about 100,000 Chincona plants at four annas each at the Government plantations, Ootacamund. Every planter in a hill settlement should apply. Strange to say the plants flourish even in the Botanical Gardens of Calcutta.

BOMBAY.

THE REBEL HOONDEES.

The Bombay Saturday Review complains that we have made a "misstatement" with reference "to the hoondees found on Mahadeo Rao." Having sent abroad throughout the country an elaborate account of this man's treason, for the creditable purpose, it would almost seem, of connecting one of the native members of the Bombay Legislative Council therewith, and having suppressed every circumstance connected with the story necessary for its right understanding, the Reviewer now complains of the "terms" in which the exposure of his untruthfulness has been made. He appeals to the public for sympathy, and for protection from the Times of India, and from its "violent language." Well, there are two parties claiming sympathy in the case. There is Mr. Sunkersett on the one hand, who has been held up to the country as a secret agent of the Nana; and there is the reviewer on the other. Well, who is the legitimate claimant of our sympathies? Mr. Sunkersett, whom the reviewer has attacked with a mala fide plain to the comprehension of a child, or the reviewer smarting under the castigation he has received? It was no wrong, we are to understand, to Mr. Sunkersett, for the reviewer to suppress every fact in the history of these hoondees, material to a right understanding of them, but it is a cruel wrong to the reviewer to lay bare the "spiteful" and "dishonest" manner in which he dealt with the case. He now says apologetically, "all that we did, was to call attention to the facts." He should have said, "all that we did was to suppress the facts." Perhaps he will be good enough to tell his readers, in to-day's issue, how it was, that in giving a professed history of this trial, he omitted all reference to the following facts:—

1. That no living man was concerned in the plot, but the prisoner on the one hand, and Captain Nuttall's police on the other.
2. That the man in whose name the hoondees were granted, was a policeman doing duty as a soucar.
3. That Captain Nuttall believed so fully in the genuineness of these hoondees himself, that neither he nor Mr. Hart took any steps whatever to ascertain their worth.
4. That the series of bloody edicts, and commissions paraded at the trial, were written under the directions of the policeman Guzarshing.
5. That the prisoner was made to bear an impossible relationship to the Peishwa in the story got up by the police.

Not a hint did the Reviewer give of any of these matters to his readers. He so stated the case, that the impression went abroad everywhere, that the police had discovered a terrible conspiracy in the Southern Maharatta Country, of which "the Nana's cousin had been the prime mover; and that certain bona fide hoondees had been found upon his person implicating Mr. Sunkersett and others." We appeal to the public, if that is not what he did. He is now grieved, and calls aloud for sympathy, under the charge of having sent abroad so "studiously uncandid and disingenuous" an account of the trial. Against this "violent language" he pathetically protests, and would have his readers understand, that we have even dared to call the Judges of the High Court, before whom the case came on appeal, a set of "idiots." It is almost needless for us to point out that we did nothing of the kind. The real nature of the conspiracy was as well understood by the High Court as by ourselves, and hence the commutation of the sentence. We have raised no question whatever, as to the justice of the sentence passed upon the man. He is properly, we think, condemned by the Court to transportation; but what has the passing of this sentence to do with an inquiry into the worth of the hoondees upon Mr. Sunkersett? Uneasy in the companionship of Captain Nuttall, who is pretty widely felt to have stultified himself in the case, the Reviewer is anxious to have it understood that our exposure of his own dishonesty is a reflection upon the judges of the High Court! We venture to think upon the whole, that Mr. Sunkersett has more claim upon our sympathy than his assailant, in spite of the "violent language" levelled at him.—Times of India, May 30.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DREADFUL ENCOUNTER WITH A TIGER.—I regret to have to record another frightful tiger accident. It appears that Captain Curtis, 6th Dragoons, Captain Bradford, Sillidar Cavalry, and another gentleman, were out on a shooting excursion in the vicinity of Sehor, where they fell in with a tiger which had previously been wounded by some other sportsmen, and was in a state of furious madness. Captain Bradford raised his gun, but it unfortunately would not go off. At the same moment the brute caught sight of the party, and giving a hideous roar, charged down upon them with the utmost ferocity, singling out Captain Bradford, who was in the act of scrambling up a tree; the tiger made a dash at him with a tremendous bound, and caught and dragged him to the ground. Poor Bradford having raised his hand to protect his head, the brute seized his arm, crunching it between his terrible jaws as if it had been so much rotten wood, breaking and splintering the bone, and lacerating the flesh in a most frightful manner. Meantime his companions were not idle; but as they were afraid of hitting their friend if they fired at any distance, advanced boldly up to the brute and poured shot after shot into him, till at last he was rolled over by the eleventh bullet. Ferocious to the last, the brute never relinquished his hold, and fell dead in the act of aiming a blow with his enormous paw at the head of his victim. Poor Captain B. was carried into Sehor in a pitiable condition, mauled all over, and it was found necessary to amputate his arm at the shoulder joint. By last accounts he was in a very precarious state. The tiger was of monstrous size, and said to be the largest ever seen in these parts. The following extract from a private letter gives some additional particulars regarding the above.—Mhow, 21st May. I returned to camp the night before last, after the most unfortunate shikar trip I was ever on. I was ten days with G—, during which I never once discharged my rifle, nor did he his! The explanation of this is, that we were disappointed in our elephant. Had I known that there was to be no elephant, I would never have gone out, as in the thick Gonekutch jungles you can do no good without an elephant, to say nothing of the great extra risk. We saw two tigers, one of which got up twice in the midst of us when beating on foot, there being no tree near for us to get into. We should have got this tiger, a very large one, as he broke into the open within forty yards of us, but for a man of Bargree, who, just as G— and I (we were standing together) had each covered him, ran forward exactly into the line of fire, so that we should have blown his head off had we fired. A few moments afterwards the beast mauled one of our beaters very badly; but he was doing well when we left, and I hope will recover. After this we determined to go back to G—'s head quarters, and make another attempt to get the elephant, and then return to Gonekutch. We failed in getting it, and did not think it worth while to go back without, but decided on looking up some tigers near Shahjapoor. We did get a tigress out one day. She got up not far from G—'s tree, and I saw him put his rifle to his shoulder, but immediately afterwards take it down again, the intervening bushes preventing his getting a shot. Two other tigers which G— had known of for months at villages near Shahjapoor, and one of which pulled down a wood-cutter a few days previously, were not found at home, and as I said before, I came back without ever having fired a shot. It is perfect madness beating on foot for tigers, and one is often so cramped in a tree that a tiger might pass underneath you without your being able to fire. From an elephant is the only gentlemanly way. You have heard, I dare say, of poor Bradford's accident. He and Curtis had left the Goona party, and were on their way into Augur when they heard of a very large tiger in the bed of a river, and went after him. They both stationed themselves in trees, on different sides of the river. Bradford was on a branch of a tree on the bank, and fully ten feet from the ground. The tiger, after being hit by a native, came past him, when he gave him both barrels of his rifle, certainly hitting him with one, if not both. The tiger looked up, and jumped into the fork of the tree, about four feet from the ground, and proceeded to creep along the branch towards him. Bradford had still a double barrelled tube gun, and aiming between the eyes, pulled the trigger, but, as ill luck would have it, some twigs of the trees got entangled with both hammers, and prevented their falling. Bradford seeing this, and the tiger being close on him, dropped from the tree into the bed of the river, the tiger slightly clawing him as he did so, and made for some water. The tiger crept down after, and followed him, and Bradford's foot slipping on crossing some rock, was on him in a moment, seized him by the arm dragged him into the water, and then worried and half drowned him. Curtis saw all this from his tree, and though in terrible alarm lest he should kill Bradford, fired three barrels at the tiger; when he dropped Bradford, and stretched himself down alongside of him. A man of Bradford's then fired, and on his hitting the beast, he got up, and went to a bush ten yards off (striking Bradford as he went off), and there lay down, when Curtis killed him. This occurred some sixty or seventy miles from Augur. Curtis sent a sowar for a doctor, and got Bradford carried on a charpoy to meet him. His arm (the left) was completely smashed, and he suffered so much that he kept entreating Curtis to cut it off with a knife; had he done which of course he would have bled to death. Beaumont met them thirty miles from Augur, hours after the accident, and at once took the arm off at the shoulder joint, into which a fang or claw of the tiger had penetrated.—POONA, May 28. Poor Bradford shot at a tiger from a tree, and lodged two balls in him, when the wounded beast climbed the tree. Bradford came down the other side, and took refuge in a tank; but the tiger followed and mangled him badly, fracturing his left arm, which has been amputated at the socket. He was in danger for some time, but the last accounts say he is doing well. We have been favoured with another account of Captain Bradford's encounter with the tiger near Dilanpoor. We rejoice to find that the announcement of Captain Bradford's death was a mistake. According to the last accounts he was doing well, in spite of the dreadful injuries he had received:—"On the 10th inst. Bradford and Curtis, of the Inniskillen Dragoons, were at Dilanpoor, about 50 miles north of Augur, where they got news of a large tiger in the bed of a river. Bradford took up his position on the branch of a low tree about nine feet from the ground; three feet below him was another branch, and the tiger was to be beaten towards him. The beast had scarcely commenced, ere the tiger broke cover, and made towards a matchlock man, who turned him towards Bradford with a bullet. When about fifty yards off, Bradford fired his first gun, both bullets taking effect. No sooner was he hit, than the infuriated beast charged, roaring and growling to the foot of the tree, when Bradford pointed his second gun; but, as bad luck would have it, a twig caught under both hammers, and the gun would not go off. In a moment the tiger sprang on the first branch of the tree, and raising himself on to the second, would have been on Bradford, had he not leapt to the ground, and made for a pool of water not far off. At the edge he tripped and fell, and ere he could recover himself, the tiger was on him, and both rolled into the water together. Bradford, with a presence of mind which saved his life, lay quiet and didn't struggle, but suffered the brute to crunch his arm from wrist to shoulder, till Curtis, who was on a tree some sixty yards off, had fired three shots, the last of which seemed to take effect, for the tiger left Bradford and lay down some thirty yards off, where he received a finishing shot from a plucky shikarrie. A messenger was at once despatched to Augur for Dr. Beaumont, and Bradford was put on a charpoy and carried all night in that direction. At about thirty-six miles from Augur he was met by the doctor, who saw at once that immediate amputation at the shoulder joint was the only chance of saving the poor fellow's life. Under a tree, and with a charpoy for a table, the operation was performed. Bradford, with the courage for which he is distinguished, bore up most bravely, and though his life was at one time despaired of, yet at the date of my correspondent's letter (the 25th inst.) he was progressing favourably."

LOSS OF THE SHIP "PATTERSON."—The British ship Patterson, Captain Lamble, bound from Bombay to London with a miscellaneous cargo, was totally lost on Friday morning, the 5th inst., outside the harbour of Bombay. The Patterson, an American built vessel, of 1,040 tons register, was taken out to sea on Thursday afternoon by Pilot Tucker. He left her about 4.30 p.m., and the vessel proceeded on her course. About ten o'clock, p.m., the Colaba Light House, distant from fifteen to twenty miles, and bearing E. N. E., a leak was suddenly discovered. The well, on first being sounded, gave a depth of water of five feet, but the leak gained so rapidly that at two o'clock in the morning she had to be abandoned. Immediately the leak was found to be of so formidable a nature Captain Lamble gave orders for putting the ship about and returning to Bombay, but finding that the leak was gaining upon him, and that she would likely founder in a short time, he directed the lifeboats and other boats to be got ready, and the men to get into them. Before the captain left, the ship was a complete wreck, having heeled over on her beam ends, and apparently fast sinking. The captain had time to save his sextant and chronometer and a few personal effects, and the crew a few articles of clothing, with which they landed at the Apollo Bunder yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. Captain Lamble is quite at a loss to account for the leak, the ship having, on her voyage to Bombay and during her stay in harbour, been remarkably tight. It is to be regretted that the vessel is not insured, and we hear that the captain is a part owner, and is likely thereby to suffer. Immediately the news of her loss reached Bombay, Messrs. Nicol and Co. despatched the tugs Pehlwan and Sirdar, and Capt. Forman the screw steamer Telegraph, to the scene of the disaster. The wreck was fallen in with about 20 miles S.W. by S. of the lighthouse, completely turned over, with only her bilge discernible. Attempts were made to cut away the masts for the purpose of righting her, but we believe without success. As the ship is completely water-logged, and the south-west monsoon has set in there is little chance, we fear, of saving either vessel or cargo, the latter of which alone is worth £150,000. The chief officer, second mate, and the crew of the vessel, who have lost a great portion of their effects, are now located in the Sailors' Home.

LIEUTENANT PENGOELLEY AND THE MUSCAT CASE.—That an English journalist in India should undertake the defence of an accused and absent officer is no more than what the public has a right to expect and require. But that an English journalist should have recourse to special pleading, and a wilful misrepresentation of facts, is calculated not only to injure the cause he advocates, but to throw infinite discredit upon journalism in general. It is, therefore, with sincere regret that we observe the attempt made by the Times of India to justify the very dishonourable conduct of Lieutenant Pengelley, in reference to the younger brother of the ruler of Muscat. Our weekly contemporary, the Indian Empire, had stated with perfect accuracy that—"The Prince of Muscat consented to an interview with his brother at a place called Seeb, a town on the coast about twenty five miles from Muscat. Syud Toorkee had agreed to come to this place, under the protection of a pledge of security which had been granted to him by Lieutenant Pengelley, and which ran thus:—"The British agent agreed to be responsible for the safe custody of his Highness Syud Toorkee from Sohar to Seeb, and during such time as might be necessary in attending a conference with the British agent." Upon this the Bombay paper asserts that "it is not true to affirm that Lieutenant Pengelley gave the man (the man being H. R. Syud Toorkee, a younger son of the late Imam of Muscat) a safe conduct to and from an interview with the Sultan. The safe conduct had simple reference to an interview 'with the British agent.'" A more disgraceful perversion of facts we have never met with. In the annual report of the administration of the Bombay Presidency for the year 1861-62, it is clearly and explicitly stated that "Lieutenant Pengelley, the British Agent, sought by mediation and advice to prevent a resort to hostilities, which would involve the tribes of Oman in a civil war, and eventually obtained the consent of the Sultan to an interview with his brother. It was arranged that the meeting would (Anglice, should) take place at Seeb, a town on the coast about twenty-five miles from Muscat. Syud Toorkee had agreed to meet his brother at this place under an "Aman," or pledge of security for his safe return to Sohar. This Aman was granted by Lieut. Pengelley in the following words:—"The British agent agreed to be responsible for the safe custody of H. H. Syud Toorkee from Sohar to Seeb, and during such time as might be necessary in attending a conference with the British agent. The Sultan promised to treat this pledge with the same respect as if emanating from himself." It is true there is a certain vagueness in Lieut. Pengelley's expressions, but there cannot be any doubt as to his meaning, unless he deliberately intended to lure the young Prince to his ruin—and even the Times of India would hesitate to put in such a damnable plea as that. If the "Aman" had any signification at all, it must have been that his Highness's safety was guaranteed during his interview with his Royal brother, and for a reasonable time afterwards to enable him to return to his own territories. But our contemporary says:—"The man came down to see Lieutenant Pengelley, and at the close of the interview was told that he was free to return. He was warned expressly that if he determined to stay and meet the Sultan, his safety would depend entirely upon his complete submission to the Sultan's demands. He was thus warned explicitly, and more than once. He decided to stay, and Lieutenant Pengelley's safe conduct became, in that officer's eyes, a dead letter thereafter. It was an error of judgment for Lieutenant Pengelley so to treat it; but nothing more; and now that officer has left India, bearing a character for uprightness and integrity altogether unimpeachable, we think that these attempts of the Press to fasten the worst construction possible upon his error are not quite creditable." This, also, is a mis-statement of facts. His Highness did see the British agent, who promised to use his influence with the Sultan in favour of the young Prince, but unfortunately the latter took fright, and not only did not appear at the appointed time, but meditated flight during the darkness of the night. Lieutenant Pengelley thereupon informed him that his office as mediator had expired; and the Sultan, to whom this notification was somehow made known, interpreted it as a withdrawal of the Aman, and accordingly took immediate steps to arrest his brother. As to Lieutenant Pengelley's unimpeachable character, we need only observe that his conduct was severely condemned by the Government, and himself summarily removed from a post in which he had brought such discredit upon the British name.—Bengal Hurkaru, May 21.

CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF BOMBAY.—The trustees of the cathedral have published their second report. It was submitted to the Government in November last, with a request that his Excellency the Governor in Council would grant a proportionate sum of money in aid of the proposed works in the event of his approving them; and in March, 1863, the trustees received a favourable reply. The Government authorise the trustees to expend in the current year the sum of Rs. 20,000 upon the execution, at the cost of Government, of any work they may choose first to be done; to obtain a design for iron rails to surround the yard, and, when approved, to put them up; and to furnish at once seats and chairs for the congregation. When the trustees first appealed to the Christian public they proposed to raise Rs. 3,000, and more than Rs. 6,000 were contributed, and it transpired that, had they proposed more extensive works, there were willing hearts to give liberally; and now they confidently hope that the contribution of Government will be met by such a sum from their fellow churchmen, as will enable them to accomplish their designs. Since the report was sent up to Government, a member of the congregation has signified his intention of presenting a stone font as a "Thank offering." The metal gates for the west entrance from the porch have been ordered from Messrs. Cox and Son, the design for which was highly approved by all who saw it. The cost of them will be about £200—Rs. 2,000. The screen to be placed before the organ having made no progress, it was thought best that new designs should be procured, and these are at present under consideration. With respect to the proposed works the trustees will be happy to receive pencil designs from any competent ecclesiastical architect, who may be good enough to send them, and are prepared to employ the best professional skill in or out of the service in the execution of these works.

THE ATTACK ON LIEUTENANT HAIG.—Lieutenant Haig, of her Majesty's 90th Regiment, at a place near Deewas, in the territory of his Highness the Maharajah of Scindia, twenty-eight miles north of Indore, was attacked, it is said, by a band of dacoits, eight in number, and severely wounded. Though he was unarmed, and thus completely at the mercy of his assailants, he nevertheless succeeded in disarming one of them, and wounded several of the others with the weapon he obtained, but was only saved apparently by the timely arrival of some chokedars, when the dacoits took to flight. Our contemporary also refers to an outrage of the most insulting character committed a few months ago at Jhansie on two British officers, by Sindia's troops, for which, it is said, the Government of India took no prompt steps to get redress. If this be so, it is a grave dereliction of one of the first duties incumbent on the Supreme Government; and if followed by a few more such outrages unredressed, may lead to the worst consequences. Any Viceroy in India who does not make his rule respected and feared in every corner of the country, and who does not secure to every Englishman, whether in the Government service or out of it, a safe conduct through any native State he may have occasion to pass, in a quiet, orderly manner, is unfit for his high office. If we are supine in demanding redress for outrages, our dilatoriness and forbearance will be construed into weakness, and insolent and violent attacks on Europeans would soon be rife enough in all conscience. Promptitude and firmness on the part of the Indian Government in all such cases is the only safe course; and such a course is perfectly compatible with a proper respect for the rights of native powers. The British Government makes the person of an Englishman inviolate from outrage in every country in Europe. The Governor general has it far more in his power to effect this in India, and he would be inexcusable in doing less. Lieutenant Haig's case would, we presume, be promptly reported to the Supreme Government by the political agent at Indore, and we cannot doubt that prompt action would be taken when the case was fully laid before it.

YOUNG BOMBAY.—The Parsee gentlemen who have been making a tour of India were entertained by their brethren in Mhow, where a somewhat remarkable speech was made by a Parsee, in proposing the health of "The Cama Family." He satirised Young Bombay who confound reform with wearing a cocked hat, a cut-away coat, and English shoes; or with talking of great things, in round sentences, about chastity and morality, "which they more often preach than practise." The Cama family have practised what they preach. Their exertions in the cause of female education show this. The speaker went on to say, "will any one here say that the social position of our wives is not disgraceful? How do we treat them? As slaves—worse than slaves. Do they share in our enjoyments? Here we are at this very moment with a repast before us which the most epicurean European might well envy—and have we a single lady present to share in our festivity? Can we call ourselves civilized beings, when we can regale ourselves in this way without thinking for a moment of our wives and daughters? I am afraid, gentlemen, that the position we have attained in European eyes of our civilization is not deserved, and will never be deserved until we follow, in a body with a clear heart, the Cama family, who have been the foremost to break the great barrier which superstition, narrow mindedness, and selfishness has raised against the liberty of our partners."

DEATH OF LIEUT. SHERREN.—We deeply regret to announce the sudden death of Lieut. Frederick C. Sherren, deputy assistant commissary in charge of the commissariat department at Khandesh, by apoplexy. This melancholy event took place at Dhoolia on Wednesday last. Sherren had served the State for upwards of thirty-five years, and during the height of mutiny in 1857 and 1858 he was in charge of the Poona commissariat stores, and rendered meritorious service to the State in enabling the troops to move at the shortest possible notice. His loss will be greatly deplored by the State as well as by his friends and relatives.

Final Order—Abolition of the Indian Navy.

By COMMODORE JOHN JAMES FRUSHARD, I.N., COMMANDING H.M.'S INDIAN NAVY.

Office of the Commodore Commanding H.M.'s Indian Navy, Bombay, April 25.—With reference to G.O. of April 10, commanders of all vessels of the Indian navy ordered to be prepared to be put out of commission are authorised to discharge seamen on the same terms as ordered for the Ajdaha.

The commodore commanding has to intimate for the information of the officers of the Indian navy that after the 30th inst. all officers are at liberty to go where they please, but they must let Government know where they propose to draw their pension, and to report their departure to the Sec. to Govt.

April 29.—In compliance with G.G.O., No. 22, of the 22nd inst., my broad pendant with the pendant of all H.M.'s vessels of the Indian navy in harbour are to be struck simultaneously after the flag at the castle flag-staff has been saluted from the shore.

Bombay, 30th April.—On this the last day of his authority, the Commodore commanding desires the officers and men, each and all of the Indian navy, to accept his hearty thanks for the manner in which their several duties have been performed during the past year. During which time circumstances had unavoidably affected the discipline of the service.

A great number of officers and seamen have at different periods been attached to the flag ship as supernumeraries awaiting their discharge from the service, consequent upon their vessels being put out of commission, and the Commodore commanding is proud and grateful to be able to state that at no period of its existence as the Indian navy has there been less cause of complaint of officers or men of the service, and in bidding them farewell, he desires their acceptance of his best wishes for their future welfare.

To the different officers of the dockyard, Captain J. W. Young, C.B., assistant superintendent, dockmaster, officiating Indian naval storekeeper, master builder, and the chief engineer and inspector of the machinery, the Commodore commanding offers his best thanks for the manner in which their duties have been performed.

J. FRUSHARD, Commodore,
Commanding H. M.'s Indian navy.

Exchanges.

The subjoined G.O. has been promulgated from the Horse Guards by Adj. gen. Sir James Yorke Scarlett, K.C.B., in reference to exchanges:—

"H.R.H. the Field Marshall the C. in C. is pleased, with the concurrence of the Right hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council, to announce that exchanges will be permitted between officers who have entered the new line regiments from the general lists or from the cadres of European regiments of the Indian army and officers of cavalry and infantry respectively of corresponding rank, now of the Indian army, without reference to the presidency to which they may belong. Officers of the new line regiments, of the classes above described, wishing to revert to their former positions in the Indian service, will submit their applications to the adj. generals of their respective presidencies on or before the 12th of October, 1863, after which date no application will be received and no exchange will be permitted. These applications, if supported by the C. in C. in India, will be entertained according to seniority and to the numbers and rank of officers of the Indian army desirous of joining the new line regiments, whose names may be received from the Secretary of State for India. Officers of the new line regiments permitted to exchange under this order will revert to the positions which their names still occupy in the lists of the Indian army. Officers of the Indian army will enter the new line regiments under this order, as the junior of their grades in each case.—By command, &c."

EXPERIMENTS WITH EGYPTIAN COTTON SEED IN THE CUDDAPAH DISTRICT.

From A. WEDDERBURN, Esq., Acting Collector of Bellary, to W. HUDLESTON, Esq., Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Madras, No. 54, dated Bellary, the 9th April, 1863.

I have the honour to forward a Memorandum regarding an experiment made [in Cuddapah district] with upwards of a ton of Egyptian cotton seed, which I procured from Madras in last autumn, and distributed to the cotton-growers of Cuddapah district. It will be noticed that the experiment would have been made, in preference, with American cotton, and the object of forwarding the said Memorandum, which was drawn up after I gave over charge of the district and was en route for Bellary, is to show the importance and feasibility of making an experiment on a large scale at the present time with an improved staple.

MEMORANDUM.

1. Narsojee, of Jamalamadugu sowed ten acres with Egyptian seed, 12 lbs. to the acre, in September last. The season was very good; abundance of rain at the proper time. The plants shed their leaves when a span high, having been attacked with the worm, but recovered. The crop is estimated at 1,500 lbs. of seed cotton, or 350 lbs. of clean cotton; half of the seed only is considered to have germinated; 35 lbs. per acre is not much of a crop, but the cotton appears to be good, white and clean. The crop was not irrigated.

2. The Tahsildar of Jamalamadugu sowed half an acre, and the produce was 40 lbs. to the acre. This crop had one watering.

3. V. Narapa sowed half an acre. Produce per acre 40 lbs.

4. T. Linga Reddi half an acre. Produce per acre 40 lbs.

5. T. Soobanna sowed half an acre. Produce per acre 40 lbs.

6. A. Rajaya two acres. 35 lbs.

7. Balreddi 30 acres, which failed.

8. C. Chenchi Reddi 30 acres; one-eighth germinated.

9. B. Beddaia 30 acres; failed, and was ploughed up and sown with indigenous.

10. W. Sunjivi Reddi one acre. Produce per acre 30 lbs.

11. Bala Kamalia sowed two and a-half acres; watered four times.

12. Abai, &c., sowed in November one and a-half acres; watered five times.

13. Nagireddi sowed on 28th December a quarter of an acre; watered twice; as yet not ready.

14. Tarsildar of Pulivendla sowed in September ten acres; failed for want of rain; 10 lbs. an acre.

15. Nagireddi five acres, 15 lbs. an acre.

16. Ram Reddi six acres, 10 lbs. an acre.

17. Latchi Reddi three acres; withered from drought.

18. Peddarangappa (September) 30 acres; not ripe; estimated 5 lbs. per acre.

19. C. Venkat Reddi 30 acres; not good from want of water.

In short, in Pulivendla Talook 100 acres and upwards; Jamalamadugu, 200; Podatoor, 200; or upwards of 500 acres were sown with Egyptian cotton as an experiment, there being no American cotton seed to be had at Madras. The season was for cotton a good one, the September rains having been copious; and the result of the experiment appears to be that the climate of Cuddapah is too arid for the Egyptian plant, unless accompanied by irrigation; still it was a manifest improvement on the indigenous.

The deputy collector Royappah sowed four and a-half acres in garden land in November, it has had five waterings besides the rain; it grew more than three feet in height—average, 60 pods to the tree. Soil mixed, rich, assessed at 14 rupees per acre; estimated produce, 25 lbs. to the acre. If the crop be gathered without loss from disease it will be worth, at 12d. per pound, 175 rupees per acre, and return a large profit.

The proportion of cotton to seed of the Egyptian is taken at nearly one-third, whereas of the indigenous it is only one-fourth. It parts easily from the seed, whereas the country fibre adheres very tenaciously.

A preference is distinctly stated by the deputy collector to exist in favour of the American cotton over the Egyptian. Seed should, therefore, be supplied to the ryots, who freely paid the carriage of the seed, but they cannot get American seed without some one to help them to it. Some tons of the best American seed should be sent out to be distributed to the ryots by those whose interest it is to be supplied with staple. The recent trial of Egyptian has done much to encourage the ryots. Its careful cultivation as a garden crop seems to promise an adequate return if the prices keep up, but a cotton which will not require artificial irrigation is more suited for extensive cultivation.

Experiments on so large a scale as 500 acres would not have been made but for the liberality of Government in allowing remission of assessment on land devoted to improvement of the cotton plant. This remission being to continue for four years more, it is a favourable opportunity for the trial of American cotton on a large scale, which, after so large a trial, will soon spread over the district.

If, instead of sending pictures of fibre and agricultural advice—such as deep ploughing, when the instrument in use is more of the nature of a harrow in its effect, and when no cattle could draw heavy ploughs, and advising a free use of manure, which the ryots would have been too glad to have done had any one supplied them with it—the Cotton Supply Committee had forwarded some tons of American seeds, and instructed their agents to buy the crop, a very practical result would have ensued. I do not know how Government is to get American seed, but I state the want. Government have done everything, and the ryots are ready; but in spite of a certainty of short American supplies for two years to come, and distress, the most obvious step of supplying the seed by those who want the staple has not been taken. I would recommend the supply of American seed by Government as most important for the improvements of the local manufacture of turbans and waist-cloths. The new staple will pay in this country, and the weavers and consumers will be grateful to Government. Head-cloths woven of Egyptian cotton were particularly admired.

THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT AND THE NATIVE PRESS.

THE Indian Government has done a wise thing in appointing a sort of Official Reporter on the Native Press. The appointment is not to have the character of a censorship, or to be regarded as a check upon free printing. Scarcely a year now passes in India that does not bring the governors and the governed into closer connection and a better mutual understanding. The Government has already invited advice and solicited intelligence from all classes of the European community, and now, as it has been hinted to them, that the vastly-increased native press is remarkable for its free comments on public matters, and teems with demonstrations of native feeling, Hindoo and Mahomedan, it has been thought advisable to connect with the duties of Bengali Translator to the Government the duty of watching over the native press, and furnishing reports to Government of all that may be found in its columns that it may be useful for the Government to be made acquainted with. The object is not so much to discover and check treasonable designs and discussions as to obtain information on all public questions in which the interests of the natives are directly involved. The reporter is not to regard himself as a spy or informer. It cannot be expected that the members of Government should themselves find time to read the native papers, and, indeed, very few of them could do so, even with the aid of a dictionary. It was Lord William Bentinck who set the example to all Indian Governors of consulting the people. He disdained to be guilty of the arrogance and presumption of too many of his predecessors, who, considering themselves perhaps heaven-born administrators, thought they stood in no need of any information or assistance from the millions whom they were to rule. It is calculated that the different native papers now published in Bengal aggregate a circulation of about two millions, and every single copy has perhaps at least ten readers. Many of them are written with very great ability, and show an amount of good sense and useful information that ought not to be despised by any Government. The Probakhur especially is remarkable for its temperate tone in politics and its literary merits. This paper was started in 1830, and is still issued daily. It is a pity that the English papers in Bengal do not employ able translators and transfer the best native editorials to their own columns. The Times of India has set the example, and published many highly interesting translations from native papers published in Bombay.

"DISINTERESTED BENEVOLENCE IN BEHAR."

The Friend of India has an article under the above head. It refers to the fact that some five or six years ago the then Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, Sir Frederick Halliday, issued a proclamation throughout the province of Behar to the effect that though it was very desirable that an Industrial Institution should be established in Patna, no wealthy native would be expected to subscribe as a matter of courtesy to Government. They were warned that if they expected to gain a name, or to attract the notice of Government by their subscriptions, they would be very much out of their reckoning, for it was not the part of Government to countenance such selfish objects. The natives in their secret hearts no doubt thought the Lieutenant-governor displayed great sagacity in so well reading their nature in the recognition of pure selfishness under the disguise of philanthropy, but they have to reconcile in the same person so much sagacity in one way and so much ignorance and folly in another. For if his Honor read native nature correctly, as selfish and ostentatious, how was it that while strongly desiring their subscriptions, he should not be aware of the wretched impolicy, and avoid the gratuitous and needless candour, of telling selfish people that they would gain nothing by gratifying his wishes? By no code of morality, however rigid, would the Lieutenant-governor have been condemned for leaving the natives in such a case to their own impulses, and allowing a truly worthy object to be gained by their voluntary assistance, let their motives be what they might. Such warning was perfectly Quixotic and absurd, and, indeed, quite inconsistent with the Lieutenant-governor's previous proceedings in other cases in which he had done his best by official influence to induce the natives to contribute to the advancement of great public objects. A subordinate officer had the courage to protest against the proclamation "as opposed to reason, common sense, and human nature." The Government was told that as "disinterested benevolence was a thing unknown to the native mind," if the principle of the Lieutenant-governor were to be always acted on, there would be an end to all future subscriptions from natives for any good public purpose whatever. We take these facts from the Friend of India, which adds that the Government now again wants money at Patna for the erection of a College, and Mr. Cecil Beadon, the present Lieutenant-governor, has not hesitated to set aside Mr. Halliday's proclamation, and his officers are actively canvassing the landholders for subscriptions. The rich natives of Bengal are generous in their own families and to their own poorer relatives; but it is with great difficulty that they can be persuaded to contribute largely to any object of public utility, and if any motive can urge them to be open-handed on such occasions it is the hope of standing well with the Government or of making a burrah nam, or great reputation, as public benefactors. They rarely do "good by stealth," or "blush to find it fame." It is different with the rich Parsees of Bombay, who seem naturally charitable and munificent, and do an immense deal of good with their wealth both privately and publicly.

THE CRAWLEY CASE.

THE Army and Navy Gazette, a periodical edited, as is widely known, by a very able and eloquent writer, who made his reputation as "Our Own Correspondent" in the columns of the Times, objects to this case being tried in England, as many others have done, on the ground that it will be "enormously inconvenient and expensive." No doubt it will be. But if, under the civil law, justice is invariably more or less inconvenient and expensive, and in most cases "enormously" so, we ought not to grumble if, under military law, justice should for once in a way, and on a very extraordinary and exceptional occasion, be as costly and troublesome as in the civil courts. Besides, in this military trial, though some inconvenience may be caused to individuals, they will not be affected by the expenses, which will fall unfelt upon the nation that can well afford to pay very heavily for justice when any principle is at stake which involves the common interests of large bodies of British subjects. In such cases justice is cheap at any price; and we are proud and happy to know that it is obtainable in this free country (though with some trouble and expense) even when the highest authorities in the land might be disposed to withhold it. We fully admit that to change the venue to this country must be attended with serious difficulties; but if we are determined to have justice in a case like this we must be prepared for serious difficulties. The fact is, that they are not to be evaded in any way. The case is already prejudged in India, and the public at home are not willing to leave any of the arrangements for the trial to Sir Hugh Rose or Sir William Mansfield, who are now themselves more or less parties concerned. Some of the principal witnesses are now in this country, and they could not be sent out to India except at considerable cost to the State, and, perhaps, after all, the cheapest and easiest plan would be to expedite the return of the Inniskilling Dragoons to England, as their term of Indian duty has almost expired. It may become necessary to send for Sir Hugh Rose and Sir William Mansfield. This may be highly inconvenient and expensive; but in a case like this the country ought to hesitate at no inconvenience or expense, however great. The character of our institutions is at stake. We must not allow foreign Governments to say that British subjects can be maltreated with as little impunity as the subjects of a Continental despotism, nor must we permit any British subject to feel that British law cannot shelter him from oppression or revenge his wrongs. If this great and gallant and magnanimous nation is ever ready to sacrifice thousands of precious lives and expend any amount of money to revenge an insult or redress an injury to the humblest British subject from a foreign Government, why should we hesitate at what must be, after all, but a comparatively moderate expense or inconvenience to avenge injustice to a British soldier when his rights as a British subject have been wholly ignored, and he has been treated with an amount of tyranny and cruelty that brought him to the grave by some of our own official authorities, under whose command and in whose charge we have placed so many of the brave defenders of our Queen and country?

No one pretends that every petty military squabble or irregularity in a distant colony or dependency should be brought for judgment to this country, or that this exceptional case should be made a general precedent. That would be monstrous, and, indeed, utterly impracticable; but when a British subject has been brought to his grave by the illegal and tyrannical and inhuman conduct of high official authorities, it is clear that the case ought to be regarded as a matter of great national interest, and be treated accordingly, without any anxious reference to convenience or expense. The Army and Navy Gazette suggests that a Commission of three officers, with such a man as General Lawrence or General Rumley at the head should be sent to Mhow, but we do not believe that the result of their inquiries and their published judgment would be as satisfactory as that of a solemn and careful trial by a regular court-martial, whose proceedings would be jealously watched by the public at home, and by the whole British press.

THE MADRAS MEDICAL COLLEGE.

WE are very sorry to find, from the reports of the several professors attached to the Madras Medical College, that that institution is by no means in so flourishing a condition as the noble sister institution in Calcutta. The Professor of Anatomy says his class is composed of lads very unequal in both general intelligence and aptitude for study; the Professor of Medicine hints at "respectable mediocrity" being as much as can be expected from young men who have entered on medical studies not from choice but necessity; the Professor of Surgery "does not consider the progress of his students commensurate with the opportunities they have enjoyed and the time and care bestowed upon them;" the Professor of Midwifery says of his pupils that their general intelligence and industry are, "upon the whole, very moderate," and that the majority of the lads are of imperfect education and small capacity, and are probably deficient in industry; Professor Smith, of the class of Ophthalmic Medicine and Surgery, says a few of the lads are intelligent and industrious, several others deficient either in intelligence or industry; the Professor of Materia Medica says that in practical pharmacy "it was utterly impossible that his class could have carried on anything like a successful course of study during the present session;" the Professor of Chemistry says that "by dint of sheer hard work his class has been able to pass the tests prescribed." The Government Examiners, as well as the Professors, one and all report unfavourably of the want of intelligence and general education of the students—European, East Indian, and Native. This is deplorable, indeed. Is there something rotten in the state of the College? It is suggested that the medical students have such wretched prospects that young men prefer employment on the railways or other public works to the Government

Medical Service, and that only very poor lads in the lower ranks will go to the College. But the students of the Calcutta Medical College are of the same low castes and conditions as the Native students at Madras, and the very best Hindu scholars in the Presidency College of Bengal are as poor as church mice and of the lowest caste. Is it possible that Dr. Smith, who is, we believe, the Principal of the Madras Medical College, has caused dissatisfaction and disgust and checked the desires of the students for purely professional knowledge by an attempt to connect a system of religious proselytism with the medical and surgical studies? Has the College been turned into a Tabernacle? Are the students more bent on the art of curing souls than the art of curing bodies? Have they been taught that all physical ills are almost beneath their notice? and that theology, and not surgery or medicine or chemistry should be the main object of their studies in the Medical College of Madras? We are far from positively asserting that all this is the case; but certainly we think there is a want of tact and judgment in Dr. Smith's introduction into his annual address of so much talk about the necessary connection of medicine and religion, and of urgent arguments to the effect that it is not the intellect but the heart that in a system of education we should chiefly aim at, and that the great teacher, Jesus Christ, clothed his grand truths not in lifeless dogmas but in the living garb of similitude and parable. What India wanted, he said, in his address to the medical students, was light, spiritual light; for Christianity is the primary agent in the civilisation of a nation. All this is unquestionably true; but was the Medical College, chiefly attended by the Natives of India, exactly the right place for such a sermon? Was Dr. Smith engaged by the Government as a Missionary preacher, or as a lecturer on Medical Science? There is a time and place for every thing, and we think Dr. Smith has not chosen either rightly in his theological oration.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 29.

STOPPING A PENSION.

Sir H. STRACEY (in the absence of Captain Jervis) asked whether it was true that the pension of an officer, late of the 3rd Madras Native Infantry, had been stopped, on the requisition of creditors.

Mr. T. G. BARING: What is the name of the officer?

Sir H. STRACEY: I do not know—(a laugh).

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

Mr. CONINGHAM wished to ask the Under-Secretary of State for War, whether he would lay upon the table of the House a copy of the second letter or memorandum on the Mhow court-martial, signed by the adjutant-general, a portion of which letter had been read out to Capt. Smales at the Horse Guards, wherein it was said that in the opinion of his Royal Highness the statements contained in the paymaster's letter of the 26th February were not considered by him as false, though they were in part malicious.

Mr. BOUVERIE also wished to ask the Under-Secretary of State for War whether a subsequent communication or memorandum, signed by the adjutant-general, had been sent to the Commander-in-Chief in India, modifying the opinion on the proceedings of the court-martial at Mhow contained in the memorandum of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief of the Army upon the same subject, now upon the table of the Horse, or in any way relating to the same subject; and whether such first-mentioned communication or memorandum had been read to the assembled officers of her Majesty's Enniskillen Dragoons in India, as publicly as the memorandum now upon the table.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that for the sake of clearness he should answer the last question first. In reply to the question, then, of his right hon. friend, he had to say that the only document which at all answered to the description of that given in the question was one which in last March was forwarded by the Commander-in-Chief, covered by private letters, to Sir William Mansfield and Sir Hugh Rose. He had these letters now before him, and they were addressed "My dear Mansfield" and "My dear Rose"—(a laugh). That memorandum, therefore, being strictly private could not be read to the troops or published in any manner. He was not aware, and he could not suppose it possible, under these circumstances, that the memorandum should have been read in a public manner. He hoped he had made it clear that the statement he made the other day that there was no public memorandum on the subject was perfectly correct. He thought the House would see that the memorandum being covered by private letters it would be contrary to precedent to lay it on the table. But still, as the Commander-in-Chief wished that no step which he had taken in the matter should be kept back, and in order to prevent any false impression from going abroad, the Government, at the special request of his Royal Highness, determined to lay the memorandum, including the private letters, on the table—(hear, hear). Now with regard to the question of the hon. member for Brighton, he could not lay any such paper, letter, or memorandum on the table of the House, because there was none such in existence. However, as no doubt the hon. member had some grounds for asking the question, he would briefly state what did occur. In a conversation at the Horse Guards between the adjutant-general and Mr. Smales, the adjutant read to Mr. Smales a portion of a departmental or office minute which he himself had written to the military secretary, embodying his (the adjutant's) views on the court-martial. That minute was read by his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief, who did not concur in it, and no further steps were taken upon it. That minute explained the ideas which the adjutant-general had of the court martial. It was to the effect that in his opinion he considered that though Mr. Smales might have successfully proved that Colonel Crawley was not present in command of the regiment on parade, still that being present in cantonment and in actual command of the regiment, the charge he made was essentially false, though it might not have been intentionally false. That opinion of the adjutant-general was never confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief, and therefore he was justified in saying that there was no such memorandum in existence. It would be entirely contrary to precedent to lay the departmental letter of the adjutant-general on the table. With regard to the other question he had to state that the proceedings of the court-martial in India were submitted to the Judge-Advocate-General, who gave his opinion that the sentence of the court-martial was a legal one, and accordingly Mr. Smales was gazetted out of the service.

Mr. CONINGHAM gave notice that he would put a further question on the subject to-morrow.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 30.

THE COURT-MARTIAL AT MHOW.

Mr. CONINGHAM wished to ask the Under Secretary of State for War if the whole of the facts and proceedings connected with the Mhow court-martial were neither in possession of the authorities at the Horse Guards, nor submitted to the Judge Advocate for his opinion, prior to Paymaster Smales being gazetted out of the service; then, in that case, what were the additional facts which had subsequently transpired, and were they of such a character as to have altered or modified the opinion of either the Commander-in-Chief, or the Judge Advocate, or both, as to the legality of the proceedings on the trial?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said, before he replied to the hon. gentleman's question, he begged to be allowed to correct an error which he had made, according to the reports in the newspapers. By those reports he was made to say that he promised to lay on the table the second memorandum of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief, together with the private letters which covered it. Now he only referred to these private letters for the purpose of showing that the memorandum was a private one. There was nothing whatever in those letters which had any bearing on the subject, except to intimate that the memorandum itself was a private one. He said that the memorandum only could be laid on the table. Now, in reply to the question of the hon. member, he had only to repeat what he had stated on several occasions, that the whole of the proceedings of the court-martial were laid before the Judge-Advocate-General, and that his opinion was taken upon them.

Mr. CONINGHAM: On the legality of the proceedings?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had also stated that certain allegations which were subsequently made by Captain Smales as to the legality of the proceedings were laid before the Judge-Advocate-General. With regard to the latter part of the hon. gentleman's question, it must be evident to the House that it would be impossible for him to go into a detailed statement of the additional facts which had been submitted to the Judge-Advocate-General—(hear). And as to the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief or of the Judge-Advocate-General, he was sorry that he could only reply to the hon. member that the communications which had taken place between his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief and the Judge-Advocate were of such a confidential nature that it would be most inconvenient and prejudicial to the public service that such communications should be laid on the table or placed before the public directly or indirectly—(hear). He must therefore decline—he hoped with the assent and approbation of the House—to give any statement of the opinion of the Judge-Advocate-General on these allegations. The Government promised to lay the proceedings of the court-martial on the table. That would be done with as much despatch as possible. He understood it was the intention of the hon. member for Brighton to call the attention of the House to the proceedings of the court-martial. It would then be competent for the hon. member to make any statement he might think fit.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH presented a petition from naval and military officers formerly in the service of the East India Company, complaining of their grievances and praying for redress. The petitioners referred to the guarantee which had been given them when the Government of India was transferred to her Majesty; and they contended that nothing short of an Act of Parliament could deprive them of their right to be treated in the same manner as if the rule of the company had continued in existence. The petition related, however, more particularly to the case of the naval officers. It was stated that an assurance had been given that the Indian navy should be maintained; but he (the noble earl) confessed that he had himself no recollection of such a pledge. The petitioners had no complaint with regard to officers of the highest and the lowest ranks; but they said that those who had been in the service about twenty-five years were treated with great hardship. The result of the examination which he had been able to give the scale of pensions satisfied him that the Government had no intention to make that scale inadequate or unjust; but on looking into its details it appeared to him that the Secretary of State had not constructed it with much judgment. There were sixty-eight lieutenants, who were divided into three classes. The first twenty-four were to receive £300 a-year each; the next twenty-four £250; and the last twenty £200. But the division into these classes was altogether arbitrary. For instance, the last lieutenant of the first-class had received his commission in 1857. He would get a pension of £300 a-year, and would also be made a commander; whereas the first officer in the next class, though he had received his commission only twelve days later, would only receive £250 a-year, without being made a commander at all. The last commander would get £400 a-year; while the first lieutenant, who was appointed in the same year, would have £100 a-year less. In fact these pensions appeared to have no reference whatever to length of service, which was the only true principle on which pensions could be given. The inconsiderateness of the scale was most strikingly shown by the case of midshipmen. He believed that midshipmen were not entitled in the royal navy to pensions at all. The oldest in the Indian navy had served eight years, and the youngest only ten months. He doubted whether the latter had ever been in India at all; but this young gentleman would receive £80 a-year, which was equal to a sum of £960 paid down at once, for having done the company the honour to be in their service for ten months. The court of directors had spoken in terms which he thought were quite justified of the good services rendered them by the officers of their late navy. They were extremely good mariners, and they had a great deal of enterprise. They were the first to introduce steam vessels and also iron steamers into war. The company's navy was formerly so strong and efficient that in 1842, when he went to Calcutta, he found that of fourteen steamers of war lying in the Hooghly only one belonged to the crown. He confessed he could not share in the apprehension which the petitioners expressed that they would find any difficulty in obtaining employment elsewhere; for he was sure that their reputation and skill would render their services much sought after in the mercantile marine.

The Duke of ARGYLL had a petition to present from the East India Company, which appeared to be of a very similar character. The East India Company had no locus standi before their lordships different from that of any other body of private individuals, but he was sure their lordships would always be ready to attend to any representation which they might be pleased to make. The question was not whether the scale of pensions had inequalities in it, but whether it was inadequate or unjust; and to show that it was not, he would simply compare it with the scale of pensions to which the petitioners would have been entitled if no change in the government of India had taken place, and with those payable to officers in the royal navy. Captains would formerly have been entitled to £360 a year, and that only when they had served twenty-two years. By the new scale they would receive between £400 and £550. In the royal navy they would receive £456, but in no case till they had reached the age of sixty. Commanders under the old scale would receive £290; but under the new they would have between £400 and £450. In the royal navy the pension was £300, and he believed there was the same regulation with respect to age as in the case of captains. Lieutenants under the old scale received £190, under the new they would have between £200 and £300. In the royal navy they did not receive a farthing. The mates under the old system had no pensions; under the new they would have from £100 to £150. Midshipmen would also receive £60, although they were formerly entitled to nothing. In their case indeed the noble earl seemed to think he had a right to complain, but to complain at the instance of the Indian taxpayer. On the whole, he (the noble duke) thought their lordships would see that there was no ground for asserting that the new scale of pensions was unjust, inadequate, or illiberal.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH reminded the noble duke that the remuneration for all services in India was higher than in the royal navy; and, moreover, that the officers of the late navy had lost their chance of obtaining certain great pensions that were formerly open to them,

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 2.

PETITIONS.

Petitions were presented by Mr. R. W. KENWARD, from Major H. Finch, late 31st Regiment of Native Bengal Infantry, for redress from the operation of the new staff regulations; by Colonel SYKES, from Lieutenant W. F. Landwith, of her Majesty's 3rd Regiment European Infantry, and from Lieutenant H. J. Edwards, of the late Indian navy, to the same effect.

STOPPAGE OF OFFICERS' PENSIONS BY CREDITORS.

Captain JERVIS asked the Secretary of State for India whether the pension of any officer, late of the Indian army, had been stopped by the India Office on the requisition of creditors; and, if so, on what legal authority.

Mr. BARING asked for the name of the officer.

Captain JERVIS said he had no wish to mention any particular officer's name. He asked on the general principle.

Mr. BARING said he could not answer the question without the name of the officer being furnished.

Captain JERVIS: Then I beg to give notice that I shall put it on the paper for going into supply, and bring forward the whole case.

INDIAN CAVALRY REGIMENTS.

In reply to Colonel SYKES,

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said it had been decided to reduce the Indian cavalry regiments from nine to eight troops.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 3.

THE BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

Major HAMILTON wished to ask the Secretary of State for India if, in pursuance to despatch to the Governor-General of India, dated Dec. 27, 1862 (No. 482), her Majesty's Government were prepared to guarantee payment of pensions to widows and orphans of subscribers to the Bengal Military Fund, at the rates now paid.

Sir C. WOOD said that the funds were under the management of persons who were members of a committee, and belonging to the service. The Government of India was not responsible for their management. If, however, they were handed over to the Government, the Government would, of course, be responsible.

JAPAN.

Mr. COCHRANE asked whether he was to understand that her Majesty's Government objected to lay on the table the papers relating to Japan.

Mr. LAYARD said he simply declined to present further papers till the pending negotiations were concluded.

SUPPLY OF COTTON.

Mr. CAIRD called attention to the supply of cotton. Hitherto, he observed, America and India had been the chief sources of supply of cotton to this country. For thirty years India had kept her ground, but within the last few years the supply from there had been increasing, and last year it had been very large, showing how the increase of demand and of price operated upon the supply. He noticed various other sources of supply; but upon America and India, he said, we must depend for three-fourths of our consumption of cotton, that from the former country being contingent upon the continuance or cessation of the war. He enumerated the advantages of the Southern States of America for the growth of cotton of the best quality, particularly in the cheapness of slave labour and the quantity of new land for an exhausting crop. Taking a view of the various sources of supply in America, and calculating that the war was not likely to last much longer, he concluded that with the cotton we should receive from there and from India, there was no occasion for serious alarm. He then reviewed the policy pursued by the officials of the India Government with regard to the cultivation of cotton, complaining of their practical discouragement of it, and of the absence of any suggestion by the Secretary of State for India for its development. He adverted to the immense tracts adapted to the growth of cotton in India, and moved for a select committee to inquire whether any further measures can be taken, within the legitimate functions of the Indian Government, for increasing the supply of cotton from that country.

Mr. BAZLEY supported the motion, expatiating upon the vast capabilities of India for the growth of cotton, which, with the support of the Government and its officials, would, he said, render this country independent of America for the supply of the article.

Mr. SMOLLETT, from local experience, contradicted some of the current notions connected with the state of the native cultivators in India, the growth of cotton, and other matters; and contended that, except the settlement of land (which should be based, he said, upon the principle of the permanent settlement of Bengal), there was nothing for a committee to inquire into. He therefore opposed the motion.

Mr. CORBEN observed that, under the peculiar and exceptional circumstances in which we were placed in relation to India, the Government, as the chief proprietor, would be justified, through their collectors, in the first instance, in instructing the poor ryots, offering prizes, and otherwise encouraging them to improve their cultivation of cotton; and it was natural for the manufacturers of Manchester to expect that the Government would put some strain upon their agents in this direction. On the contrary, he complained that nothing had been done two years ago to inform the agricultural population of India, but obstacles had been thrown in their way. He did not want the ryots of India to be sacrificed to the cotton-spinners of Lancashire, but to bring the interests of both into harmony.

Mr. PENDER said he believed that with ordinary encouragement cotton could be grown in India for 6d. a pound, at which price no mill in Manchester need stand idle.

Sir C. WOOD fully admitted the importance of the subject, and that it was to India we must look to obtain our great supply of cotton. The present was the first time that a stimulus had been given to the production of Indian cotton. Nothing but this would bring about such a result, and he believed that an adequate demand and a sufficient price would be met by an adequate supply. The motion was for a committee to inquire into something the Government might do which they had not done; but it was not suggested what that something was. The Government had done what it was their province to do, reduce duties, improve communications, and give facilities to the cultivation of cotton, the encouragement of which would be accomplished more surely by an increased price than by the offer of prizes. After defending himself against the charge of interfering with and discouraging the cultivation of cotton in India, insisting that he had shown a readiness to aid it as far as a Government could go, declining only those functions which did not properly belong to Government, he again asked what he could have done that he had not done to promote the growth of cotton in India. Government pressure, he showed by example, would do more harm than good; the extension of the area of cotton cultivation had taken place under a purely voluntary system. The common principles applicable to all other people in the world must be applied to the people of India, and the ryots must be allowed to grow the crops that paid them best.

Mr. CRAWFORD concurred in the views expressed by Sir C. WOOD. The Government had been accused of not having stimulated the cultivation of cotton in India, but it had not been shown in what way the cultivation could be stimulated by the Government.

Mr. BRIGHT said, though it was a common phrase that demand created supply, there were obstacles which in some cases overthrow the rule. There were the neglect, and oppression, and the violation of law during the whole period of our Government of India. What was wanted there was a revolution in the ideas and in the practice of the Government, which would produce more life and activity in India. But this must come in the course of years. Meanwhile, public works should be prosecuted, and a remedy applied to the deficiency of common roads. There was, he said, a dissatisfaction felt in Lancashire as to the manner in which deputations on the subject of the supply of cotton from India were treated at the India-office; there was a general complaint that the conversation and manner of the Secretary of State was flippant, irritating, and obstructive.

Mr. T. G. BARING denied that there was any ground for this charge, observing that he had heard a rumour to that effect; that he had inquired into it, and found it to be groundless. He disputed the doctrine of Mr. Bright, for which he had assigned no reason—that the ordinary law of demand and supply did not apply to the cultivation of cotton in India, and he replied to the remarks of Mr. Bright upon the condition of India and its Administration, observing that neither he nor any other member had offered any tangible proposition showing what the Government should have done which they had not done to promote the cultivation of cotton. One thing they had refused to do—namely, to tax the people of India for that object.

Mr. J. B. SMITH said he could confirm what had been stated by Mr. Bright as to the manner in which deputations had been treated at the India-office. He complained that the subject of the supply of cotton had not been taken up by the Government in the proper way.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR supported the motion, suggesting, as legitimate subjects of inquiry, whether the Secretary of State had done his best to introduce British capital and enterprise into India for the improvement of the cultivation of cotton, the tenure of land in India, what were the impediments to English enterprise in India, the state of the Public Works Department in India, and the mode of improving the staple of the cotton.

Mr. FERRAND taunted the advocates of the motion with a desertion of their principles, and with asking for a protection for cotton.

Mr. CAIRD withdrew his motion.

THE CASE OF COLONEL CRAWLEY.

Mr. BUTT, pursuant to notice, inquired of the Under Secretary of State for War whether it was intended to try Colonel Crawley, on his arrival in England, by court-martial or by the civil tribunals of the country. The accusation brought against him was that he had abused his military authority, and it amounted in fact to a charge of murder or manslaughter. He (Mr. Butt) would carefully refrain from offering any opinion as to the case, but he believed that a constitutional principle of some importance was involved in it. A court-martial could not take cognisance of a charge of murder or manslaughter, and the well-known case of Governor Wall—a similar charge to that brought against Colonel Crawley, and from which he sincerely hoped he would clear himself—was tried at the Old Bailey before a common law judge and a jury. Assuming the facts stated to be true, the moment Colonel Crawley put his foot on British soil any one could bring him before a magistrate for manslaughter, and he thought that a verdict by a criminal tribunal on the charge against him would be more satisfactory than the decision of any court-martial.

Colonel DUNNE protested, as a military man, against the case of Colonel Crawley being prejudged, and said it was well known that he could not be charged with murder, as Sergeant-Major Lilley was confined, not by his orders, but by the orders of the Commander-in-Chief.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the question whether Colonel Crawley should be tried by a court-martial, or by the Court of Queen's Bench, or any other tribunal had been carefully considered both by the Horse Guards and the War-office, and they had arrived at the conclusion that as the charges against him were of a military nature, the proper course was to try him before a court-martial—(hear). He would add his request to that of the hon. and gallant member who had just spoken, that hon. members should not, by continually raising these discussions, prejudice the case, and influence the minds of those who had finally to decide it—(hear). With regard to whether the Judge-Advocate-General had given any opinion on the allegations of Paymaster Smales, he could only repeat what he had stated on a former occasion, that the communications between the Judge-Advocate-General and the War-office were of a private and confidential nature, and that it was not for the public interest nor the ends of justice that they should be produced before they had been acted upon. He therefore hoped that the House would not think he was guilty of any want of respect to it if he declined to give any further answer—(hear).

Mr. CONINGHAM said that he, for one, had not lightly made any attacks, as he was one of the first to protest against Colonel Crawley being made the scapegoat, when officers in high positions were compromised. He had to inform the House that Corporal Blake, of the Enniskilling Dragoons, was tried by court-martial, and sentenced to forty-two days' imprisonment, for posting a sentinel outside instead of inside the verandah of the room where Serjeant-Major Lilley was confined. Of that case he should have more to say in a few days. Paymaster Smales's witnesses were impounded.

Mr. OSBORNE: I rise to order. I protest in the name of the hon. gentleman's own client against his being allowed to go into that case again.

Mr. CONINGHAM: It is the hon. gentleman is out of order, and I recommend him to confine his attention to the Irish Church—(laughter)—and to be more accurate in his facts the next time he brings it forward.

Mr. OSBORNE: I rise again to order. The hon. gentleman has no right to travel out of the question.

Mr. CONINGHAM: I do not know whether the hon. gentleman is sober—(cries of "Order").

Mr. OSBORNE: I do not know whether the hon. gentleman is sane—(renewed cries of "Order").

Mr. CONINGHAM denied that he had any wish to hunt Colonel Crawley, such as he had been accused of. With respect to the hon. gentleman who had just spoken, his tongue was untied now; but it was strange how silent he was when sitting on the Treasury bench. He now came down to interrupt independent members who had grievances to bring forward—(order). He hoped that the noble lord at the head of the Government would take compassion upon the hon. gentleman, and give him a place in some of the outskirts of the administration—(cries of "Order").

Sir G. GREY expressed a hope that the appeal made by the hon. and gallant member for the Queen's County (Colonel Dunne) would be responded to—(cheers)—and that the House would refrain from further discussion on the subject of Colonel Crawley's case. He trusted that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Coningham) would, on reflection, regret the observations he had made—(hear, hear). They were certainly discreditable to the House of Commons—(cries of "hear, hear").

Major GAVIN said that if the hon. gentleman was not hunting Colonel Crawley to death he was hunting the Indian army to death; and an army more at home at their duty or in the field did not exist—(hear).

The subject then dropped.

CLAIM AGAINST THE LATE GOVERNMENT OF OUDE.

Mr. WHITESIDE moved that an humble address be presented to her Majesty, praying that she would be graciously pleased to order that the investigation of the claims of Mr. Warren Hastings Leslie Frith and others against the late Government of Oude might be ordered to take place in England instead of India. All the parties were here, and the evidence was documentary.

Sir M. FARQUHAR also thought no advantage would be gained by referring this question to India.

Mr. TORRENS and Mr. C. BENTINCK supported the motion.

Sir C. WOOD regretted he could not accede to the motion, because he believed the most important evidence was in India.

The motion was negatived without a division.

INDIA STOCK.

On the motion of Sir C. WOOD, leave was given to introduce a Bill giving further facilities to the holders of India stock; and the Bill was subsequently read a first time.

JAMES BAINES AND OTHERS V. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER, JUNE 26.

Mr. Brett, Q.C., and Mr. Quain were counsel for the plaintiff; Mr. Forsyth, Q.C., and Mr. Garth appeared for the defendant.

This was an action of trover for some stores by the plaintiffs, who are the eminent shipowners, against the defendant, in his representative capacity.

A vessel called the Great Tasmania, belonging to the plaintiffs had been employed very frequently during the Crimean War to convey troops by the Government, who, entertaining a very high opinion of her as a troopship, hired her at Calcutta to bring home to England about 1,000 troops belonging to the East India Company, who had declined upon the amalgamation of the Royal and Indian armies into one army to accept service. The Government agreed to find the stores themselves, but it was agreed that any surplus stores that might remain should belong to the plaintiffs. On the arrival there were many surplus stores remaining which were demanded of the plaintiffs in behalf of the defendant. The plaintiffs alleged that they were under the terms of the charter their property, but the defendant demanded that they should be rendered up for sale. The consequence was that a correspondence ensued, and the plaintiffs were obliged to send over to India to obtain a certificate from one of the authorities there stating the terms of the arrangement upon which the ship was hired. The certificate certifying that the plaintiffs were to have the stores, the defendant's agents objected that the certificate had been given by a subordinate, and the plaintiffs were put to the inconvenience of sending to India and applying once more for a certificate from some one with whom the defendant would be satisfied; but in the meantime the defendant made a demand for the stores, and, after a protest by the plaintiffs that the goods were their property, they were handed over to Messrs. Percival and Co., of Liverpool, salvage brokers, by whom they were sold by auction, realising the sum of £684. 17s. The net value of the goods was handed over to the plaintiffs, who complained that they were entitled to the gross value, as well as to an increase of about £600, which the goods would have realised had they been sold under other circumstances.

The defence was that the plaintiffs had in writing given their consent to the sale of the goods, and, they having been sold accordingly, the plaintiffs were paid the net proceeds, with interest.

Mr. James Baines was called and stated that the goods, if sold as one of his neighbours had sold stores which he had had to sell under similar circumstances, would have made about 25s. per head for each soldier, and that the sale effected by the defendant left a balance due to the plaintiffs.

At the conclusion of the defendant's case,

Mr. Forsyth objected that there was no evidence of conversion.

Baron Martin was of opinion that there was evidence to go to the jury, and a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs, Mr. Forsyth tendering a bill of exceptions to the learned Baron's ruling.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The Pera, which left on Saturday last with the East India and China mails, only took out £100,743 in specie, of which only £895 in gold was for India, the remainder being silver for China.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR INDIA.—Orders have been received at Chatham garrison from the Horse Guards directing the following reinforcements to be held in readiness to embark for India: 620 men of the 5th Royal Irish Lancers, 1,000 men of the 2nd battalion of the 20th regiment, and 1,000 officers and men of the 36th Regiment. In addition to the above, reinforcements from each of the Indian depots will also be despatched to India.

THE LATE SERGEANT MAJOR LILLEY.—The parents of the late Sergeant-Major Lilley, now residing in the town of Spilsby in Lincolnshire, have, through the Rev. Mr. Turner, received a communication that they will be granted a pension of, it is said, 2s. 6d. per day, dating from the period of their son's death.

COLONEL CRAWLEY.—We believe that the Cabinet has finally determined that Colonel Crawley is to be tried by a court-martial in England, and that the charges and necessary instructions for the return home of the prisoner and the witnesses went out by the Bombay mail of last evening. The trial will, in all likelihood, take place early in October, and in the vicinity of London. We are sorry to have to repeat our impression of the unsatisfactory nature of this step, and our doubt that it will meet the reasonable expectations of those whose objects are to have the truth ascertained and justice vindicated.—Army and Navy Gazette, July 4.

DEATH OF GENERAL SIR JAMES L. CALDWELL, G.C.B., ROYAL MADRAS ENGINEERS.—This gallant and distinguished officer died at an advanced age at his residence, Beachlands, Ryde, Isle of Wight, on Sunday week, the 28th ult. He entered the service of the late Hon. East India Company in the year 1788, and was employed at the attack and capture of the minor Hill Forts of Woohadroog, Ootradroog, Bhynumghur, Ramjurry, and others. At the attack of Tippoo Sahib's camp at Bangalore, under the command of General Floyd. In 1792, at the assault of the Pettah or Lower Fort of Bangalore, under Lord Cornwallis, where Colonel Morehouse, the commandant of artillery, and many officers and men were killed. At the siege of Bangalore, where he was wounded in the trenches. At the assault of the breach of Bangalore under General Meadows; entered the breach with storming party, and was near the Killydar (the commander of the fortress) when he was killed defending the top of the breach; many thousands of the enemy fell at this assault. At the siege and capture of the strong hill fortress of Savendroog, under the command of Lord Cornwallis; mounted breach with storming party directed by General Meadows. At the surprise and capture of the Pettah of Nunddroog. At the siege and capture of the fortress of Nunddroog; mounted breach with storming party. At the battle of Caragaut with Tippoo Sultaun's army under Lord Cornwallis. In 1799 at the first siege of Seringapatam under Lord Cornwallis; slightly wounded in the trenches. At the attack of Tippoo's camp and line of redoubts under Lord Cornwallis previous to the siege. At the battle of Malwelly under General Harris. At the second siege and capture of Seringapatam, 1799; commanded the brigade of Engineers accompanying the storming party; had charge of the scaling ladders; twice wounded during siege; shot at the top of breach in rear of forlorn hope, and rolled into the ditch shortly before the Sultaun Tippoo Sahib was killed; received pension for wound and medal; the only officer of engineers wounded during the siege. Appointed in 1810 Senior Engineer and Surveyor on the expedition against the Isle of France, under the command of Gen. Abercrombie; thanked in the public despatch, and favourably mentioned in general orders; General Abercrombie observes, "To Major Caldwell, of the Madras Engineers, and who accompanied me from India, I am indebted for the most able and assiduous exertions. Since his arrival in these islands he was indefatigable in procuring the necessary information in respect to the defence of this colony, and through his measures I was put in possession of an accurate plan of the town some time previous to the disembarkation of the army; and I trust your lordship will permit me to recommend to your lordship's protection this valuable and experienced officer." Was on board her Majesty's frigate Ceylon, when attacked off, and in sight of, St. Dennis, Isle of Bourbon, by the French frigate Venus, of very superior force; both vessels dismasted, and after a night's hard fighting struck to the Victor, a third ship; recaptured next morning by Commodore Rowley. Appointed to the charge of the Engineer's department in Centre Division of the Madras army in March 1811. Appointed to superintend the repair of the fortress of Seringapatam in 1812, and as special surveyor of fortresses in 1813. Appointed a commissioner in 1816 for the restoration of the French settlements on the coasts of Coromandel and Malabar. Appointed to act as Chief Engineer of the Madras army in the same year. In 1815 he was nominated a companion of the Order of the Bath; in 1837 was made a Knight Commander, and in 1848 a Grand Cross of the Order. His commissions bore date as follows:—Ensign, 27th July, 1789; Lieutenant, 2nd December, 1792; Captain, 12th August, 1802; Major, 1st January, 1806; Lieutenant-Colonel, 26th September, 1819; Colonel, 27th May, 1825; Major-General, 10th January, 1837; Lieutenant-General, 9th November, 1846; and General, 20th June, 1854.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY, WOOLWICH.—The examination of candidates for admission to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, before Major-Gen. F. W. Hamilton, C.B., Vice President, and the other members of the Council of Military Education, commenced on Thursday last, at the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, as usual with the medical examination. The examinations will extend over fifteen days. There are upwards of 140 candidates on this occasion.

DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The biddings for Rs. 40,00,000 (£400,000) in bills on India took place on Wednesday last at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta Rs. 22,00,000, to Bombay Rs. 16,00,000, and to Madras Rs. 2,00,000. The declared minimum price was, as before, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11d. on Bombay and Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to 107 lacs. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 32 per cent.; on Bombay at 1s. 11½d. about 21 per cent.; on Madras at 1s. 11½d. about 45 per cent.; and all above these prices in full.

NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY.—The directors of the Nerbudda Coal and Iron Company have issued their warrants for interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, for the three months ending the 30th ult.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI BANK CORPORATION.—A call of £2 per share, payable on the 5th of August, has been announced by the directors of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Bank Corporation. The managing director and other officers have arrived at Kurrachee, and active steps are being taken for the commencement of business in that and other places.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVE-

MENT in the CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present a uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

STRANGERS' HOME for ASIATICS, AFRICANS, and SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS.

At the ANNUAL MEETING of this Institution, held at WILLIS'S ROOMS, ST. JAMES'S, on the 1st JUNE, 1863, Sir T. FOWELL BUXTON, Bart., in the Chair, succeeded by the Right Hon. Sir JOHN LAWRENCE, Bart., G.C.B., The Report of the operations carried on in 1862, having been read.

The first Resolution was moved by Captain WM. EASTWICK, and seconded by WM. JENKINS, Esq., Interpreter to the New Zealand Government:—

"That the Report now read be adopted, printed, and circulated; and that Captain the Hon. F. Maule, R.N., J. M. Strachan, Esq., Joseph Somes, Esq., M.P., T. B. Spence, Esq., Major H. Strath, and the Rev. Dr. Tidman, who go out of office by rotation, be elected Directors of this Institution, out of the list of twelve names submitted to this meeting. That Major-General Clarke and Henry Smith, Esq., be appointed Auditors for the ensuing year."

The second Resolution was moved by the Rev. THOMAS GASTRE, from India, and seconded by the Rev. E. H. CARR:—

"That this Meeting desires to express its gratitude to Almighty God for the large measure of success which has attended the efforts for the welfare of the Asiatic, African, and South Sea Islander, who is visiting the United Kingdom." The third Resolution was moved by Captain ALFRED CHAPMAN, and seconded by Sir FREDERICK HALLIDAY, late Governor of Bengal:—

"The result of six years' labour having fully proved the great importance, value, and need of such an Institution, this Meeting regrets the inadequacy of its resources, and appeals to their friends to use their best endeavours to make known the object and advantages of the Home, and to procure for it more extensive sympathy and support."

Captain the Hon. F. MAULE, R.N., moved, and Major STRATH seconded, a vote of thanks to the Chairman—Sir T. FOWELL BUXTON, Bart., and to the Right Hon. Sir JOHN M. LAWRENCE, Bart., who succeeded him; and the Meeting was closed by singing the Doxology.

EXTRACT FROM REPORT.

"During the last six years upwards of 2,160 Asiatic, African, and Polynesian strangers have resided in the Home for periods from one week to three months. 1,357 beds have been provided and paid for by casual nightly lodgers, besides numerous cases of destitution gratuitously lodged and fed for a day or two; 372 destitute Asiatic and African mendicants have been taken off the streets of the Metropolis, together with 190 others sent or taken from workhouses or prisons, and provided with employment or a passage to their native country; cash also, and property to the value of upwards of £5,000 taken care of and returned to its owners on leaving England; and, above all, the Word of God set before hundreds of strangers in their own tongue. It is painful to contemplate the fate of many of these foreigners, and what would have been their report of Christian England on return to their native country, had there not been a home to receive and shelter them, and Christian friends to afford the aid they needed."

The Institution was intended to be self-supporting, and would be so with an average of 65 inmates daily throughout the year; but while the number is below that average, and the debt of £5,000 unpaid, £1,100 is required annually to maintain it in efficient working order. Funds are, therefore, urgently needed for the current expenses, including Rates, Taxes, and Interest upon the Mortgage, which the Directors are most anxious to liquidate.

The undermentioned contributions have been received just before and since the meeting, and are thankfully acknowledged. The directors confidently trust their efforts to aid the helpless stranger will meet not only with approval, but with that aid and support, so greatly needed to carry on a work acknowledged by all acquainted with it as most useful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects.

Those gentlemen on whom boot-makers have practised unsuccessfully are particularly solicited by J. C., who will undertake to fit them at once, however difficult. Established 1825. Inventor of the "Palmist" or Cushion Boots. Ladies' show rooms first floor.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes of those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinoline.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, 2c, cent-street, London, W.

CORALIUM SILEX, an entirely new substance for ARTIFICIAL TEETH, which will neither discolour nor decay, remaining firm in the mouth, from one to a complete set, without springs, wires, or any visible attachment. It gives the greatest support to all loose or tender teeth, and answers most perfectly the purposes of mastication and articulation. No painful operation required. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from eleven till four. No connection with any person in the same profession.—No. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

TEETH and PAINLESS DENTISTRY.

Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS, 30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W., direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, &c., specially commended at the International Exhibition—Class XVII., No. 3,556. Single Teeth, from 5s.; Sets, from Five Guineas.—For the successful result and efficacy of their system, vide "Lancet."

NO MORE ERUPTIONS on the SKIN.

MOLLARD'S PERFUMED TOILET SULPHUR SOAP and CREAM, entirely free from any unpleasant smell, and are sovereign remedies against fever, local or chronic cutaneous eruptions, rheumatism, pains in the joints, &c. The Cream possesses all the properties of the renowned Harége Waters for baths. Recommended by the most eminent physicians. Prospectus and testimonials sent on application.

Sold wholesale and retail by F. Newberry and Sons, 45, St. Paul's-churchyard; Dietrichsen and Hannay, 63, Oxford-street; G. Jozeau, 49, Haymarket; T. Keating, 79, St. Paul's-churchyard; P. A. Gerard, 390, Strand; Bainbridge and Pound, 60, Leather-lane; and at the Central Depot, 2, Rupert-street, Coventry-street, W.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Perfumers to Her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

It is prepared (in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength) by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

EVERY MAN WHO IS "WIDE-AWAKE" will instantly make use of PARR'S LIFE PILLS, when he finds that he ought to do something to improve the state of his health. Persons who are suffering from headache or indigestion, arising from constitutional inaction, biliary derangement, or over indulgence at the table, are particularly recommended to try Parr's Pills. They have never been known to fail in affording immediate relief. May be obtained of any medicine vendor, in boxes, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d.; and in family packets, 11s. each.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

MODERN SCIENCE.—The time is not remote when all hereditary skin diseases were pronounced to be incurable; but happily for all such sufferers at the present day the use of Holloway's noble remedies will speedily dispel this discouraging delusion. Scrofulous sores, stromous affections, glandular swellings, and inflammations yield a ready and painless obedience to the cooling, rectifying, searching, and strengthening properties of this well known Ointment and these justly esteemed Pills. Their accompanying directions will enable everyone to apply these remedies to the best advantage, and no one need fear that any evil will result from the adoption of Holloway's purifying treatment, provided the diet be regulated and "the instructions" receive even moderate attention.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE mail just in from Calcutta is decidedly the dullest we have had for many months past. Almost the only matter of particular interest that we see in the papers before us is a short report of a durbar speech by the Viceroy at Simla, which we can very easily make room for in this column. The Viceroy's reception of the Hill chiefs took place at Simla on the 30th of May last, and was attended with all the usual pomp and ceremony of such occasions. Twenty-two chiefs received khillats and presented nuzzers. The Joobul Rajah, in addition to his khillat, received Rs. 10,000 in cash and Rs. 78,000 in Government paper, which he well knew was as good as cash. This money was the amount of surplus revenue saved for him by the skilful administration of the Joobul State by British officers appointed for a time to put his affairs in some order. Here is the report of Lord Elgin's speech:—

"He was very glad to meet the chiefs present on this occasion, more especially as the Hill chiefs had been in a special manner the object of the favour and protection of the British Government. To show that such had been the case his Excellency need only mention that on the close of the war in 1814 these chiefs had their territories restored to them with the full exercise of their previous rights and powers. His Excellency took this opportunity of assuring the chiefs that with loyalty and good conduct on their part the same favour and protection would be continued to them. However, the British Government had not at any time wished, nor does it now wish, to meddle in the management of the internal affairs of these native Hill States. Some years ago, owing to the incompetency of the ruler, the affairs of the Joobul State became deranged, and the British Government was entreated by the people to take the management into its own hand that order might be restored. The British Government, though reluctant, consented, and its able officers so judiciously administered the affairs of the State that not only were its finances restored to their former footing, but a considerable amount of surplus revenue was accumulated. It was at one time contemplated to lay out this surplus revenue for the benefit of the people, but his Excellency had now determined on making it over to the present ruler of Joobul, on whom would devolve the responsibility of its judicious outlay. His Excellency had nothing further to add beyond his earnest advice to the chiefs present to educate their children."

The Friend of India tells us that nothing has been yet definitely determined regarding the Viceroy's progress next cold season; but the general belief is that the camp will form about the middle of November and march to Peshawur, thereafter returning to Simla for the summer of 1864. As a march to Peshawur and back would occupy at least four months, the next session of the Legislative Council might as well be held in Calcutta as in Agra for all that Lord Elgin will see of it. The Friend suggests that a flying visit from Lahore to Peshawur, such as Lord Canning made in 1860, would accomplish every purpose, and save time.

It has been discovered that capitalists and speculators have a good field for coffee cultivation on the Cochin Hills, and there is a greater demand for the land there than the Government can supply.

It has been decided that the home system of district and station artillery commands shall, as far as practicable, henceforward obtain in India in supersession of the present system. The order will be found in the Official Gazette.

There are some justly severe observations in the Bengal Hurkaru on the subject of what is called the "Howrah scandal." It appears that on the 27th May last an English artisan was buried without "benefit of clergy." When the poor man was to be laid in the earth there was no clergyman to read the burial service over him, and that duty was left to a layman. The chaplain of Howrah, the Rev. W. Spencer, was on the other side of the water, partaking of the hospitality of his diocesan. But he could have returned to his duties at an hour's notice. Whether he had received intelligence of the man's death is not clearly known, but it is stated that the undertaker despatched the usual notice to Mr. Spencer's house. The missive was put into the hands of a syce (a groom), who gave it back with the remark that the Padre Sahib Bahar Gya (the priest, his master,) had gone out. No clergyman in England would leave his parish without taking especial care that the parish duties should not be neglected—that he should be called himself in case of any sudden emergency, or that a qualified substitute should be at hand. But if stringent regulations ought to be adopted, even in England, they are fifty times more necessary in India. There especially "in the midst of life we are in death," and the very day on which a man dies, or within a very few hours at furthest, his breathless body is placed in its last home. It is difficult to acquit the Rev. W. Spencer of all blame in this unfortunate business. If he had been more particular on such occasions his servants would have been rather more alert. The public may be disposed to fancy that if a burrah sahib, a rich man, had died at Howrah, the Rev. W. Spencer somehow or other would have been found at the grave at the right hour. Like master, like men. If his whole establishment of servants had been accustomed to see their master make much of a poor man's funeral, and exhibit great anxiety to perform the last duties towards him, they would have contrived to give him early notice in this case. But the very gravedigger was negligent, and the body was thrust into a shallow hole with only a sprinkling of earth over it, which, as soon as it was dark, would be displaced by the jackals, and the flesh would speedily be gnawed from the poor man's bones. Is this Christian burial? Is this the way in which an English priest should be suffered to neglect his last duties to his fellow-countrymen and fellow-Christians in a foreign land?

Sir Mordaunt Wells is said to be contemplating his retirement to his native country. The Hindoo Patriot tells us that Sir Mordaunt meant to send in his resignation within a month.

The Mofussilite says that cholera and small pox have made their appearance in her Majesty's 35th Regiment at Fyzabad. There is cholera to a serious extent in Calcutta also, and much fever.

We are glad to see amongst the Madras Government records an acknowledgment of a handsome anonymous donation of £4,740. 7s. 9d., for purposes connected with churches and schools in India.

Some of the Calcutta papers spoke in rather extravagant terms of the model writing of the Calcutta addresses to our Royal family. But these addresses, written by Mr. Maine, have been criticised rather severely in London, and a private letter from Calcutta, from which we take the following passages, is very severe on the eloquence of the speakers at the meeting on the 18th of May:—

"We had a public meeting here on the 18th, with a view to raise Rs. 50,000 for the purchase of 'India's offering' to the Prince and Princess of Wales. The chair was taken by young Mr. Gladstone, the sheriff, a gentleman remarkably well satisfied with what nature has done for him. The first resolution was moved by the Lieutenant-governor, with gentlemanly hesitation, and seconded in a sort of audible silence by Colonel Booth, of H.M.'s 43rd. The reading of the address to the Queen fell to the Bishop, who acquitted himself exceedingly well, though he talked rather too much about the Tudors and Plantagenets. 'Young Bengal,' however, was much pleased with his lordship's recitation of Tennyson's ode, beginning 'May you rule us long,' &c. Moonshee Ameer Ali followed suit with great fluency, and was considerate enough to send a translation of his speech to the papers. But why should I trouble you with any further allusions to the disjointed utterances of Sir Charles Trevelyan, who jerked out his words as if he were retching violently on an empty stomach—to the ranting and overdone vehemence of Sir Mordaunt Wells, to the sonorous volubility of Mr. Sten Karr, or to the mild murmurings of Mr. Maitland? Never was there such a deplorable exhibition of the total absence of the gift of eloquence. The meeting itself was far from numerous. Half-a-dozen officers, a score of civilians, a dozen merchants, as many tradesmen, three ladies, and a hundred natives, and ye have the measure of Calcutta enthusiasm. As the punkahs were not going, you may imagine the temperature and its incidental delights. As for the subscriptions, I much doubt the success of the affair. People seem to shrink from offering a present to such illustrious personages. This feeling was emphatically expressed by a young staff officer, who, being asked for a subscription, exclaimed, 'Excuse me! I haven't the d—d cheek to make a present to the biggest swell in Europe.'

With reference to the traffic of the Scinde Railway, the following is from a Scinde paper:—

"From the traffic returns, which we have been in the habit of publishing for the information of our readers, it will be readily perceived that the increase in the receipts is far beyond the most sanguine hopes of even the chairman of the company himself. Within the last week there has been imported into Kurrachee from Kotree an amount of seeds and cotton far beyond what has been brought down by all the country boats employed in the trade for one year previously."

MOFUSSIL COURTS.—LEANING TO THE NATIVES.

Our correspondent from Tirhoot takes us to task for not noticing the decision of Mr. Jackson on the appeal case of Mr. Hills, of Kishnaghur, in which that judge stated that "if he had erred in deciding the question of rent, he had taken care that the error should be in favour of the ryot." But Mr. Jackson, in making this statement, only repeated the lesson he and all civilians were taught in their youth, to lean towards the native in all disputes or litigation between Europeans and natives. To protect the native against the European, the weak against the strong, was the order, reiterated again and again, of the old court of directors. Europeans vainly represented that though physically, intellectually, and morally superior to the natives, they were far inferior to them in the science of litigation and unable to cope with their chicanery, bribery, mendacity, false swearing, and forgery—arts which, by long practice, the natives had brought to the highest perfection. Every one who has experience of Mofussil life and Mofussil business will admit that in all our courts of law the native is the strong and the European the weak. But the cry for protection of the native against the European still holds good among the old civilians, and still comes from philanthropic but much deceived England, and it appears to be a mere waste of time to declaim against it. We must still bow to the superiority of the native in the arts of litigation, and further submit to the advantages he derives from judges like Mr. Jackson, who, if they do err, take care that it shall be in favour of the native.

Our correspondent also points out the necessity of a contract law, and reproduces arguments which we have urged a hundred times. He is, however, too hard upon the native money-lenders and mahajuns on account of the enormous rates of interest they charge. He forgets that, having no contract law, they are as much exposed as the European to heavy losses from dishonest ryots, and they are compelled to charge high rates to cover bad debts. They are in the position of the fashionable tailors of the West-end of London, who give credit to all comers, and charge double prices to cover losses. Thus the honest ryot pays for the dishonest, and every grower of produce throughout the length and breadth of the land will be kept in a state of debt and bondage until it shall please the authorities in England to release them. It appears to be a law with regard to India as well as elsewhere that every great and good measure shall meet with the strongest opposition from men as ignorant and obstinate as they are powerful. The people of England had to wait years for cheap bread and free trade, and the people of India must continue to suffer for a time, until public opinion, and the appointment of a statesman of common sense and average ability, shall bring them that measure of relief they are entitled to, and which is demanded alike by natives and Europeans.—Englishman, June 3.

THE COMMITTEE OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

On looking through the "Statement" of the committee of Indian officers in London, to which we referred yesterday, we find that the drawing up of this paper is pretty much what is called by the lawyers "preparing the case," so as to put the counsel in perfect possession of every point and incident, from the beginning to the end of the matter before the Court. What the attorney does for the barrister the military committee has, in this instance, done for the Royal Commission about to sit upon the amalgamation measure and its consequences, and also for the Parliamentary advocates of the cause of the company's officers in both Houses. The preparation of this "Statement" is a most wise precautionary measure, as it will entirely foil Sir Charles Wood's well-known parliamentary policy of answering ignorant or deficiently informed questioners with presumptuous or vague assertions, and so silencing them for the time, to be again foiled should they again rise in the House. With this "Statement" in his hand, and previously carefully studied, no advocate of the company's officers need fear being summarily silenced in the above manner, as the committee have, so far as their case is concerned, gone into the history of the company's armies from the moment that the first sepoy was enlisted in Bengal. And as those armies grew up from factory-guards to disciplined hosts, the committee has pointed out the origin, growth, and consolidation of all the advantages, privileges, vested rights, and institutions, which were found in full maturity when the Crown seized the Government of India from the company, which were then solemnly guaranteed to the company's officers by Parliament and the Sovereign, and which have since then been ruthlessly interfered with, taken away, or ruined, by Sir Charles Wood. In this "Statement" the origin, growth, and maturity of the seniority system in the company's armies are plainly portrayed; also the right to promotion in the different grades, with all their advantages, also the pension, and retiring, and off-reckoning rights, also the recognition by the court of directors of the Indian purchasing out system; and the origin, growth, and privileges of the different charitable funds of the company's armies, from the day when, up to the year 1706, "if an officer left India, he was supposed to resign the service, and his place was filled up," until the final smash in 1857, the annihilation of the company, and the unfortunate advent of Sir Charles Wood to power over India and over the destinies of the company's officers. There is, we may safely say, nothing essentially necessary to be known on all these diversified subjects which is not fully, though succinctly, given in the "Statement," and the "summing up," in which the parliamentary and national guarantee and the actual results of Sir Charles Wood's amalgamation are placed face to face, is peculiarly impressive, clear, and telling. From an appendix at the end of the "Statement," we find that, up to the time of printing, a hundred and seventy-two officers of the Indian armies had sent in petitions or memorials complaining of departure from the terms and promises of the parliamentary guarantee, and calling for redress and justice. This is a strong phalanx of injured men calling for the protection of British national honour, and a glance at the list of names will cause any one, however prejudiced against the Indian officers, to doubt whether so many would cry out so loud if, as Sir Charles Wood asserts, no one whatever had been struck or hurt. The officers of the Indian army owe a debt of gratitude to those who have drawn up this useful and opportune vade mecum as regards their case; and more especially to Captain Jervis, M.P., for his chivalrous and disinterested exertions in their cause, which he has warmly taken up from the commencement of their troubles.—Englishman, June 6.

THE JYNTTEAH REBELLION.

Now that the harassing rebellion on a small scale in the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills is fairly subdued, we can afford almost to smile at the laissez aller style in which it was at first allowed to form itself, and at the inconsistent policy displayed by the Bengal Government of the past. For that policy and its consequences the local officers are, judging from the "Selections from the Records of the Government of Bengal," now before us, in no way to blame. They have made the best of an anomalous position and carried out the orders given discreetly and well. There can be no doubt but that at the commencement of this rebellion, which has been brewing for two years, it was treated with indifference by the Bengal Government, but with a change in that Government came a change of policy, and a strict inquiry was the first result.

The "Selections" before us contain the results of this inquiry, conveyed in the opinions of Major Haughton, Major Rowlett, and Brig. Gen. Showers, and it is with this portion of the report we intend to deal, the others being simply letters detailing the various military movements. The opinions of Major Rowlett are given in several lengthy reports, but the pith of them is contained in a demi-official letter to Major Hopkinson, which says:—

"You ask me the cause of the outbreak—it is simply that the evil disposed wish to throw off their allegiance to our Government; they wish to have to pay no taxes; they don't like any control being exercised over them, and therefore want to get rid of both the thannah and military guard; they, in a word, wish to be entirely independent, so that they may do just as they like; they prefer the savage to the civilised state. This, however, only applies to those who have joined in this rebellion, who don't, I should say, exceed 5,000 out of a male adult population of 12,000 to 15,000; they are composed of all the bad characters—thieves, robbers, gamblers, drunkards, and blackguards of all descriptions, who, if they get the upper hand, would tyrannise over and oppress all the quiet-going respectable people.

"The village form of government is purely republican, and in its results produces just the same effect as we see to be the case in America: the noisy, forward, low, and unscrupulous have it nearly all their own way, and keep the quiet and respectable people in such terror that they are afraid to offer any opposition.

"The affair is completely local, so we need not, I think, trouble ourselves with any one except the rebels now in the field. I am assured by the Magistrate of Sylhet that the Jynteah Rajah has nothing to do with any parties up here, but I still think he would be far better at Dacca than at Sylhet.

"This is not a complete explanation, but it will be remembered that the cause of the previous rebellion in Jynteah the year before last was involved in very great obscurity; and what Mr. David Scott said of the Cossyahs thirty years ago is still true of their Jynteah brethren to this day, 'that the caprice and inconsistency of these mountaineers is such as to baffle all anticipation of their proceedings in any particular case, their actions appearing to proceed from the impulse of the moment, with little or no consideration either of their own interest or of the probability of their being able to do any serious damage to those whom they wish to injure.' I could compile a long list of causes which might have had their effect in precipitating the present outbreak, but my impressions should be better verified than they are yet before they find place in an official document. The outbreak must be first quelled, and then I hope to investigate its origin and submit suggestions for preventing anything of the kind happening again. I regret to find that it should have occasioned so much apprehension as it appears to have done in Calcutta, and which may be partly attributable to a confusion regarding its nature and locality; thus a telegram communicated by the Government to the press is headed 'Outbreak at Cherra Poonjee'; the villages, the scene of the disturbances, being nearer Assam, and from fifty to eighty miles distant from Cherra Poonjee, and still further from Sylhet, which is also said to be menaced."

This was, however, not considered satisfactory by Government, and a detailed report was called for; and in this, as in those sent in by Major Hopkinson, there appears considerable uncertainty as to the real cause of the rebellion, which was by some attributed to the working of the income-tax, and by others to the conduct of the police. We have looked carefully through the reports now submitted, and on comparing them with our private correspondence, we are inclined to agree with Major-general Showers that the "subject must be considered with reference to the former administration of the country, and to the fact that the Sintengs, or Jynteah Cossyahs, have ever been a 'stiff-necked and rebellious generation.'"

In 1835 the Government of the Jynteah territory was transferred to the British by the Rajah in lieu of an allowance of Rs. 500 a month. But the people themselves had not taken part in this transfer; and as the Rajah's own authority over them had been merely nominal, involving no receipt of revenue, they objected to any change. However, the transfer was made, and for some time the British Government left its new subjects entirely to themselves, their mode of Government being a sort of village republic under head-men, called Doloyes. These Doloyes constantly quarrelled among themselves, and so the people remained as before, savage and turbulent. At last, in 1858, Mr. Allen visited the newly-acquired territory, and suggested that the Jynteahs should pay some tax to Government in recognition of British supremacy. To this end he recommended the imposition of a house-tax, with the proviso that a European officer should be stationed at Jowai. The tax was imposed, but no European officer was appointed, and the result was the Jynteah rebellion of 1860. Luckily, 500 bayonets were at hand, and the rebellion was soon reduced. Such were the people to whom it was sought to apply the income-tax in 1861, with this important difference—that in 1861 Colonel Richardson could only bring forty-five bayonets into the field instead of five hundred, and that the country was full of disbanded sepoys. For these circumstances, however, we do not blame the local Government of Bengal. It was ordered to introduce the income tax, and it was also ordered to reduce its military expenditure. The difficulties attending the introduction of the income-tax were simply that the new tax-payers could neither read nor write, so as to fill up their schedules, the result being that the tax was levied, through the Doloyes on the head men, at the rate of about four rupees a-head. That the head-men in question disapproved of this we have little doubt; and it is, therefore, no matter of surprise that they should have induced the mass of the people to rebel.

In this indirect way has the imposition of the income-tax fanned the revolt, and the abuse of the police darogah system aided its development; but the real cause, no doubt, lies, so far as can be judged, in the character of the people themselves. Being savages, they acted as savages; being turbulent and quarrelsome, they were only too glad to seek an excuse for quarrel, and so the income-tax and police grievances came opportunely to their hand. The only thing to be done, now that the mischief is over, is to see that no unnecessary ground for seeking a quarrel is given in future; but more especially to see that, by a judicious use of the iron hand with the silken glove half removed to show the metal beneath, the danger of carrying out such a quarrel is clearly manifested. In their present condition the Jynteahs must be in a measure treated as savages, with due justice and some forbearance, but with the most unshrinking firmness. We may let loose a wild animal when severe punishment has had its taming influence, but it is necessary to keep the chain somewhere handy in case of accidents. It will be the fault of the Bengal Government if, with the lessons of the past for its guide, it does not keep the conquered rebels in such order that the mere clank of the chain will be enough to check any inclination to break out.—Englishman, May 23.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EAST INDIA COAL COMPANY.—The report of the East India Coal Company (Limited) for the six months between the 31st of October, 1861, and the 30th of April, 1862, must be very satisfactory to the shareholders, who have suffered so much and so long from gross mismanagement. There is a balance of Rs. 37,144 to the good, partly owing to the contract with the E. I. Railway, which has been renewed on yet more favourable terms to the 30th of next October. The opening of the Singarun extension line is also calculated to benefit the company by placing their principal coal mines in direct communication with Calcutta. Debentures, we observe, are about to be issued for a limited amount at the rate of eight per cent. interest, for the term of one, two, or three years. According to the Emperor Napoleon III., the success of the company is now assured. "No town, nation, or individual," his Imperial Majesty was once pleased to remark, "ever had any chance of prospering if destitute of that great motive power, indebtedness—as distinguished from impecuniosity." The issue of these debentures may, therefore, be expected to impart vigour and prosperity to the long dormant E. I. Coal Company (Limited).—Bengal Hurkuru.

THE EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT IN CALCUTTA has begun in good earnest. One of the leading Calcutta firms have publicly notified their intention of closing their office on Saturdays at two P.M. To Messrs. Pennington and Co. belongs the credit of setting an example, which all liberal-minded employers will, doubtless, rejoice to follow.

THE LIGHTLE MURDER CASE.—Sir George Couper, Bart., the Judicial Commissioner of Oude, has confirmed the finding of Colonel Barrow in the Lightle murder case, recently tried before that officer. The Commissioner observes that the case had throughout occupied his constant attention, as he was frequently consulted by the different officers engaged in it. After giving the subject the fullest consideration, he had arrived at the conclusion that Colonel Barrow "was quite right in acquitting the prisoners upon the evidence which was brought before him and the assessors who tried the case." The order of acquittal was based on the four following grounds, viz.:—1st. The discrepancies in the evidence of the witnesses. 2nd. The general character of Lightle himself. 3rd. The fact that Lightle did not mention Aga Ahmed Ally's name in 1858, when he did mention others as concerned in the murder. 4th. The fact that the charge was not previously made, although Lightle and his two witnesses had ample opportunities of knowing that Aga Ahmed Ally was dwelling close at hand during the last five years. In fact, Lightle states that one of them, Nadir Mirza, told him in 1859, that he had seen Aga Ahmed Ally. Nadir Mirza, it is true, denies the statement; but this fact only adds to the untrustworthiness of the evidence generally." Sir George is of opinion, that the 1st, 3rd, and 4th points have not been satisfactorily explained, and holds that, however weak each may be when taken singly, "they suffice as a whole, when combined with the general bad character of the witness Lightle, to impress on his mind a doubt of its truth, which would make him unhesitatingly refuse to consign a man to the gallows on that evidence alone. He believed that any jury composed of perfectly dispassionate and impartial men would have arrived at the same conclusion as Colonel Barrow and his assessors, in whose finding he entirely concurs."—Hurkuru, June 8.

SALE OF WASTE LANDS.—European settlers in India, and all employers of coolie labour, are much indebted to Captain Nassau Lees for his very useful and opportune compilation of the various "resolutions, regulations, despatches, and laws, relating to the sale of waste lands and the immigration of labour in India." The first on the list is, of course, Lord Canning's famous resolution of the 16th October, 1861, followed by Sir Charles Wood's despatch of the 9th July 1862, and the subsequent explanations and instructions transmitted by the supreme Government to its subordinate Governments, Bengal, the N.W. Provinces, and the Punjab. Next in order come the Sylhet Notification of the 30th of last August, laying down rules for the sale of unassessed waste lands and for the redemption of revenue in the Lieutenant-governorship of Bengal—the Circular of the Board of Revenue, L.P., of the 14th October, the reply of the Bengal Government to Mr. C. B. Stewart's four questions, and the Allahabad Notification of the 20th September, containing the rules of procedure prepared by the Sudder Board of Revenue, North-West Provinces. To these papers are added the orders issued by the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, and the rules which prevail in the Central Provinces, and lastly, the Act of the 25th February, 1863, providing for the adjudication of claims to waste lands. The Act of the 7th March is also given, which regulates the transport of native labourers to Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar.—Hurkuru, June 8.

CALCUTTA WATER.—In connection with the question of the water supply of the town, Hooghly water from four different places—namely, Fort Ghat, Cossipore, Pultah Ghat, and Chinsurah—was submitted to the Chemical Examiner for analysis and comparison. The result of the examination does not add much to our knowledge. The water at Chinsurah is purest and lightest, that at Pultah Ghat slightly inferior, that at Cossipore worse, and that at Fort Ghat fit only for the manufacture of soda water and other fashionable beverages.

THE ROORKEE WORKSHOPS are, the Allahabad Gazette states, to be transferred to a joint-stock company.

AN INTERESTING SQUABBLE AT CAWNPORE.—A very pretty squabble between the civil and the military is going on just now in Cawnpore, and which seems to be of a nature which defies an early solution. It involves some very nice points of etiquette, and, probably, the social code will have to be ransacked, and the code of honour referred to, before a precedent can be found as a guide to some satisfactory settlement. It appears that, "some day last week, a civilian called at the mess of H.M.'s 46th, with the intention of calling away a friend who was then playing at billiards. While there, he called for a glass of soda-water and brandy, which he drank, and shortly afterwards left without saying anything in particular to anyone. The commanding officer of the 46th wrote next day, and demanded an explanation." The civilian replied that he did not go into the mess of his own accord, but was asked in by an officer of the regiment. The officer asserts that he does not remember having invited the civilian—that the civilian walked in, saying he was dry, and called for a "peg" without waiting to be asked. And it does seem probable that he was not asked, since, a few nights before, this officer was dining in the civil lines, and had to leave the table, in consequence of some offensive remark that the civilian made. It also seems that the civilian had, in the usual course, called at the 46th mess, but had never been asked to it—a want of courtesy of which, I fear, too many messes are guilty towards civilians. In answer, however, to the above, the civilian curtly remarked—"H.M.'s 46th had not forgotten their motto 'Don't Remember,' which they had made such convenient use of in the Windsor affair, a few years ago." Of course, this was enough to inflame the officers of the 46th, who, I hear, are in an awful way about the taunt, as, indeed, they may well be, since it reflects upon the whole regiment. Accordingly, on the 18th they had a meeting, to arrange as to what was to be done in the matter, but it really seems impossible that anything can be done beyond giving the civilian, who, albeit, is a great lump of a "fella," a good lacing on the Mall—a duty incumbent on, but not expected to be performed by, the gallant Colonel V. Thus stands the matter at present. All we can say is that, if Mr. W., the civilian in question, happens to be a competitionwalla, this accident, for it is nothing more, will tell seriously against him, and not fail to be quoted against the whole class, and against the entire system also, and is, therefore, on all accounts much to be regretted. That allusion to "Don't Remember" was in very bad taste, and, unless by means of ample apology, we cannot see how the entente cordiale can be re-established. At present the affair is the common talk of the station, and there is much tall talking, too, on both sides. What with a row between judge and a governor, and another between a barrister and a judge at Calcutta, and this now between the civil and military at Cawnpore, the Burney cum Willis affair is likely to be succeeded by a very fair quantity of scandal. However, we shall remain curious about the result.

STATE OF THINGS AT HOWRAH.—Howrah appears to be acquiring an unenviable reputation, what with dacoities, police rows, and general mal-administration. But a more shocking occurrence than that which took place on Tuesday morning has seldom come to our knowledge. We are positively assured that, on that morning, the chaplain refused to read the Burial-service over the body of an English artizan, who had died in the General Hospital, assigning no other reason for his refusal than the remark that anybody could read it. Somebody did discharge that last office for a dead countryman in a distant land, but it was not the Rev. William Spencer, B.A., nor is it the first time that reverend gentleman has declined to officiate for the poor. We are further informed that when the coffin was laid in the grave, there were not eighteen inches of interval between the lid and the level of the ground. A careless pastor makes a careless fold, and if the chaplain neglects his duty, the sexton is not likely to set him a very good example. But it is clearly our duty to draw the attention of the right reverend prelate to such a disgraceful and scandalous state of things.

HOCKEY ON HORSEBACK.—The Munnipoorees are entitled to great credit for inventing such a manly and exciting game as that of "Hockey on Horseback." They play it, we are informed, in a somewhat different manner to that practised by the Calcutta and Barrackpore Clubs. In the first place, they use a larger ball and one of a white colour, which is therefore more easily seen by the spectators as well as by themselves. Then they are mounted on small ponies—without any saddle—and thus all contend on equal terms and without any great danger. Moreover, they place their men out on the plain something after the fashion of cricket players, and only after much good play do they become mixed up in a scrambling mass, alternisq; orbibus orbes impediunt. They have also a great advantage in not being obstructed by adventurous spectators on foot and on horseback, or hemmed in by carriages driven upon the very ground of contest. On the other hand, the blue and red uniforms are certainly preferable to the primitive garb of the Munnipoorees, and enable the lookers-on better to appreciate the varying fortunes of the field. Next time this noble game is played on the maiden we hope to see some regulations introduced for keeping the ground, in the interests alike of players and spectators.—Bengal Hurkaru.

PERSONATING AN OFFICER.—The Lahore Chronicle states that a European British subject has been arrested at Delhi, and will be forwarded to stand his trial at the High Court, Calcutta, for personating the character of an officer, and obtaining thereby goods from a Parsee firm without paying for them. Our contemporary cautions his readers against being taken in by any of the "numerous loafers of this stamp, who are now prowling about begging, threatening, forging, or stealing."

THE LATE LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.—We regret extremely to see recorded in the Calcutta papers the death of Mr. Longueville Loftus Clarke, the oldest member of the Calcutta Bar. The deceased was one of the most polished speakers that ever addressed a bench or a jury in India, and his powers as an advocate were of a very high order. During his professional career his talents must have earned for him over £200,000 sterling—twenty lacs of rupees. But Mr. Clarke was a man of unbounded hospitality, and expended large sums, without any ostentation, in public and private charities; and we imagine he saved but little. The bulk of the provision that he made for his family (two lacs of rupees) was lost by the failure of the Union Bank of Calcutta. Mr. Clarke, who, it would seem, died in harness, must have been verging upon seventy years of age, for he took his degree at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, in the year 1815. To his juniors at the Bar he was always a most kind, courteous, and considerate leader, and to such as came to India without any local friends or connections, his house was always open to them as a home. As a barrister, on the Chancery side of the Court, we question whether Mr. Clarke had any equal in India. Nor was his knowledge of the Common Law side of the Court by any means insignificant. His memory for cases (precedents) often astonished his professional brethren, as well as the Judges of the Court. We hope and trust that the members of the Calcutta Bar, including the officers of the Court, as well as the solicitors thereof, will not fail to erect, by subscription, a mural tablet, in memory of the deceased veteran, and cause it to be erected on some appropriate spot. We would suggest the old Grand Jury Room, and not far from Chantry's masterpiece—the statue of Sir Edward Hyde East, a Judge of her Majesty's Supreme Court of Calcutta.—Mofussilite, May 22.

FOREST CONSERVANCY.—The Delhi Gazette understands that the subject of forest conservancy is about to be taken into serious consideration by the head of the Government. Lord Elgin, adds our contemporary, has summoned Dr. Brandis of Burmah, and Dr. Cleg-horn of Madras, now on special duty in the Punjab, to meet his lordship at Simla. "If forests be not properly preserved or coal discovered in the Punjab, we may entertain reasonable fears for the permanence of railway communication."

ESTATES OF OFFICERS.—It has been resolved that the estates of all officers and men belonging to the new brigades of Royal Artillery, or of the new Line regiments of cavalry and infantry who may have died prior to the 1st April, 1863, shall be dealt with by the India-office, and the estates of those who may have died on or since that date, or who may die hereafter under rules applicable to the old Royal Artillery and Line corps serving in India, shall be dealt with by the War-office.

EARTHQUAKES.—Several severe shocks of earthquake were experienced at Manila in the beginning of May, causing considerable damage. A heavy gale of wind lasting three days preceded the earthquake. Nearly all the shipping at anchor in the harbour appear to have suffered more or less. The British ships Annie Bowen and Osprey were totally lost, together with fifty-two other vessels, chiefly coasters. Property to the estimated value of half-a-million dollars was destroyed. Tonnage was very scarce, and freights consequently high.

MR. F. HOGG.—We are glad to hear that Mr. Frederick Hogg, c.s., and at present Assistant Magistrate and Collector at Meerut, has been appointed Postmaster-general of the Punjab. Mr. Hogg is an extremely intelligent and hard-working officer, and will doubtless discharge the duties of the office to which he has been appointed with credit to himself and satisfaction to the Government and the public. Sincere as are the congratulations of his friends in this station, nevertheless they are mingled with regret that its society should be deprived of such an agreeable member.—Mofussilite.

MR. JUSTICE MORGAN.—We have been called to order for saying that Mr. Justice Morgan had acquired his occasionally discourteous demeanour towards the Bar from having been formerly accustomed to browbeat native vakeels in Mofussil Courts. It appears that we were mistaken as to that learned judge's antecedents. A member of the English bar, he came out to India in 1851, and pursued his profession at the Calcutta Bar for three years, at the expiration of which he was appointed Clerk of the Legislative Council, and finally was promoted to the Bench. It was incorrect, therefore, to ascribe to a Mofussil experience whatever discourtesy he may exhibit towards counsel or their clients. Mr. Morgan's champion and our reprover does not impugn the charge of such discourtesy, but confines himself to correcting our statement as to the school where he learned his ill-manners. It is, of course, well to be accurate in details, and we accordingly tender our thanks to our censor for the valuable information he has placed at our disposal. We wonder if Mr. Justice Morgan will be equally obliged to him for again dragging his name into print. After all, it is but the penalty one must pay for indulging in the luxury of friendship.—Hurkaru.

RAJAH OF NONGSTOIN.—We are indebted to the Dacca News for some particulars connected with the Durbar lately held in the station of Cherra, for the purpose of investing the Rajah of Nongstoin with the title of Rajah Bahadour. Our contemporary says:—"On the arrival of the Rajah he was conducted into an adjoining room, where he assumed the robe of honour prepared for him. He was then led into the Durbar, where, on the presentation of a Nuzzerana, he was proclaimed a Rajah Bahadour." The ceremony ended, Colonel Haughton "availed himself of the opportunity furnished by the presence of so many Rajahs and Chiefs, to give them a little quiet paternal counsel." The colonel particularly pointed out that the Rajah of Nongstoin, having received his title from the Queen of England, might reckon on the advice and aid of her Government "as long as he continued to govern his people with equity, and used every means to introduce and promote among them the arts of civilised life." Colonel Haughton further reminded the assembly that the rebellion had been suppressed, and most of the rebel chiefs effectually disposed of. It was the intention of the Government, he continued, "to improve the condition of Jynteah, and to this end education would be encouraged." The address was interpreted into the Cossyah tongue by Mr. Shadwell.

AN IMPORTANT GENERAL ORDER has been issued by the Commander-in-Chief with reference to courts-martial, consequent upon several cases having been recently transmitted to head-quarters in an incomplete state, and "especially without that previous minute investigation and summary of evidence which is necessary for the Commander-in-Chief to form a correct judgment of the case, the result being a delay in bringing men to trial, and, what is of far greater importance, soldiers have been needlessly confined with a view to being brought before a court-martial, whilst the proceedings of these military tribunals, often convened at great inconvenience to the service, and to that of officers brought from a distance to compose them, have proved purposeless and unnecessary." His Excellency directs the particular attention of commanding officers to this important duty, and orders "that no circumstances, however trivial, connected with the commission of crimes may be omitted in the summary of the evidence taken in the preliminary investigation, and that all evidence given should be recorded in the first person." Particular care is to be taken that every statement made by a prisoner in exculpation of himself, or the evidence of witnesses on his behalf, shall be recorded. We hope that this order will have the effect of obviating much of the delay which of late has frequently arisen in finally disposing of cases tried by court-martial. At present three and four months frequently elapse before an unfortunate prisoner is made aware of the final result of his trial. This arises from the number of references made backwards and forwards between the court and the Commander-in-Chief. Either the latter requires some further details, or the case is referred back to the court for re-consideration. The order is an opportune one, and will certainly be appreciated by those whom it more immediately affects.—Hurkaru, June 6.

CLERICAL DUTIES OF MEEAN MEER.—We have heard "murmur not loud but deep" at the absence of proper arrangements for conducting the clerical duties of Meean Meer, during the Reverend Mr. Murray's sojourn at Cashmere. At the very least we consider that three ministers are indispensable for the two stations of Anarkullee and Meean Meer; one of whom could then always be available for duties in event of the sickness or the temporary absence on leave of one or other of the regular incumbents, and could likewise relieve the Meean Meer chaplain of a portion of the heavy work now devolving on him in visiting military hospitals and schools. But in whatever way the authorities may think proper to settle the matter, it is quite impossible for the Anarkullee clergyman to assume the Meean Meer duties in addition to his own. His time is already too much taxed. Indeed, we already hear dissatisfaction expressed at the chaplain's frequent absence from the Station Church on the Sabbath, owing to the calls on him at the Fort and out-stations, and feel assured that the imposition of other duties calculated to increase such absences would prove highly objectionable to the Anarkullee community.—Lahore Chronicle, May 30.

THE FRITH FAMILY.—The Lahore Chronicle informs us that among the claimants who will present themselves before the commission appointed to assemble at Lucknow on the 1st of February, 1864, to investigate the legitimacy of claims made by British subjects who were resident in Oude during the reign of the ex-King and his predecessors are the Frith family, a forefather of whom held a lucrative post in the Oude service some eighty years ago.

SIMLA, May 25.—On Wednesday last there was a meeting at the Bank-office of the proprietors of the Simla Bank for the despatch of such business as the meeting could entertain. The accounts were examined and found in a most satisfactory state; and a dividend of 11 per cent. was declared for the six months ending the 31st December, 1863. Bad debts amounting to 10,000 rupees, were paid off. The services of the present manager were warily acknowledged, and, without a dissentient voice, the sum of 100 rupees a month was voted to him as a personal allowance, in addition to his monthly salary.

A MIDSHIPMAN'S LOVE AFFAIR.—A pretty little romance, which has been enacted in Calcutta under almost our very eyes, has also, strangely enough, not found its way into the public papers. We give no names, because we do not wish to hurt other people's feelings; but the story is far too good to be lost. A young English baronet took to the sea, or in other words became a middy on board the St. Lawrence, Heaven knows how many tons; but the captain had a heart harder than the nether millstone. Now, the young and titled middy, aged seventeen or thereabouts, fell in love with the beautiful and accomplished daughter of the house where he lodged. We all know what a middy's love is like; it is something sublime and overwhelming, like the Falls of Niagara. We never shall forget a powerful love-letter from a young midshipman of twenty addressed to a middle-aged lady of thirty-nine, whilst going home round the Cape, which accidentally fell into our hands. But to our story. The captain was one of those hard-hearted tyrants from whom Heaven preserve us when we are in love. He found everything out, and ordered the young gentleman aboard. But love laughs at ship's sides, and our modern lover went down the chains and swam the Ganges, like the ancient lover that swam the Hellespont. But there was a difference. The modern pair were bent upon being bound together by the ties of Hymen, as by the ties of Cupid; and accordingly the gentleman applied to a priest. But the course of true love never does run smooth, excepting when the parties are of mature years, and then it occasionally runs a great deal too smoothly. The first chaplain the enthusiastic swain looked up, was a very respectable mole, who considered that people might fall in love at seventeen years of age if they liked, but that he would not sanctify the affection without the consent of the parents of the parties, just as though our parents have anything to do with our falling in love. However, young love was not to be repelled by a single buffet, and so our hero invoked the assistance of a chaplain a little more north, or, in other words, a gentleman from the "Land o'Cakes;" and as we know that Scotch marriages are peculiar affairs, it will surprise no one that the blacksmith, we mean the chaplain, married the pair right away. This is all we know about the story, and what is done cannot be helped; and if marriage is deemed likely to improve the tone of our European army in India, we see no reason why our mercantile marine should not be improved by the introduction of married middies.—Englishman.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT A NATIVE MARRIAGE.—The Oudh Gazette reports that nine natives were crushed to death in a crowd collected at the celebration of a native marriage. Money was being distributed, as is usual on such occasions, and the unfortunate men lost their lives in scrambling to secure some of the rupees. It is stated that "six or eight thousand natives were placed in an enclosure, the gate of which was closed so as to admit of only two or three coming out at a time to receive the money. The mob, however, impatiently pressed forward, the gate suddenly gave way, and in the rush that was made, the number named were trampled to death." An official inquiry was to be held into the causes of the accident, and it is probable that some leading natives, "who acted contrary to the repeated warnings of the police," will be made answerable "for the consequences of their culpable carelessness."

COLONEL TOMBS, of the Royal Horse Artillery, is gazetted as brigadier, vice Troup. This is a double breach of the usages of the service; officers of the Royal Artillery not being eligible for brigade commands of the three arms, and Sir Charles Wood having promised, in his speech on the India Bill, that the proportion of brigade commands to Royal and Indian officers should be preserved intact. On what plea, then, can Lord Elgin sanction Sir Hugh Rose committing such an outrage on the rights and customs of the Indian army? There is no doubt the subject will be taken up in Parliament, when the causes of the job will be exposed, and the appointment, in all probability, cancelled.—Mofussilite, May 29.

LAHORE, May 16.—Lord Elgin's winter movements are beginning to ooze out, though at this distant period we do not think great dependence can be placed on all the rumours current. It is certain, however, that a very handsome state carriage is in course of preparation by the Punjab Railway Company for the use of his lordship and suite, and it will prove a vast disappointment if it is not availed of on the occasion of his visiting Lahore. But it is stated, again, that it is very doubtful whether the Viceroy will enter the capital of the Punjab by rail, as it would destroy the displays which have hitherto distinguished the arrival of his lordship's predecessors, besides seriously inconveniencing his camp arrangements by leaving them so great a distance behind. It is said that the Supreme Government have pronounced unfavourably on the proposed Punjab Medical College, and consider that the object with which the college was first established has not been attained after a fair trial of three years. The contrast between the Agra College and that at Lahore is not favourable to the latter. With 140 scholars the annual cost of the Agra institution is Rs. 9,200, whereas Lahore, with only 60 scholars, has an expenditure of Rs. 30,360. The proposition, therefore, to retain the college here on its present footing, and to a further grant of Rs. 1,000 per mensem, is not sanctioned. The Lahore College contains but five students of the higher branch, and three English professors, and a fourth has been asked for. Such facts naturally cause the Supreme Government to hesitate, and ask whether a disinclination on the part of the Punjabees does not exist towards this particular branch of science, and whether it would not be cheaper and preferable in every way to obtain European surgeons? In the meanwhile a hospital only has been sanctioned.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS.—We have been credibly informed that Sir Mordaunt Wells intends to send in his resignation a month hence. He is tired of the country and its people. We are sorry for this, for however often we have had occasion to condemn his unjudicial manners, there can be no doubt that Sir Mordaunt's presence on the bench was productive of great good to the cause of justice. He is really a terror to dishonest debtors and evil-disposed suitors.—Hindoo Patriot, June 1.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

H. E. THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS leaves the Presidency immediately, on a visit to Mysore, the unknown purpose of which has given rise to much speculation, especially as the Body Guard has been ordered to precede him; a circumstance without precedent that we can recollect. Whatever may have been the practice formerly, it has long been the custom of our governors to dispense with such an escort, when paying visits to the Mofussil. A strong report prevails, that the restoration of the Government of Mysore to the Rajah is the object of Sir William Denison's visit in state to that province, and as his Highness is fairly entitled, by treaty, to have his suspended authority restored to him, under conditions necessary to prevent an abuse of it, we hope that there may be foundation for the story, but we feel far from sanguine on the point.

APPOINTMENTS.—Colonel Silver, at present in charge of the Clothing Board, an officer well known to the public of Madras, has been gazetted President of the Municipal Board. To Colonel Silver our Volunteer Guards are indebted for their proud position; he it was who, on their formation, notwithstanding his other onerous duties, spared no pains to make soldiers of them—soldiers of whom the Madras Army may well be proud. Colonel Silver was also for many years Civil Engineer to the Municipal Commissioners, and from the knowledge which he must have acquired of the requirements of that department, his services cannot but be a great acquisition to the Board. From his antecedents the public will expect much from him; we are certain that the public will not be disappointed. We are also glad to observe that another very deserving servant of Government has not been overlooked in the recent police changes. Mr. J. Ansel, for many years Superintendent of the Marine Police, has been appointed Deputy Commissioner of Police, in the room of Major T. C. Bell, who has resigned, preparatory to his proceeding to England on sick leave. Mr. Ansel is, as is well known, one of the most efficient police officers in the Presidency, and the fact of his being appointed to such an important office proves that Government has appreciated his services. We believe Mr. Ansel owes his present position to his own good conduct, integrity, and zeal.—Madras Examiner.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.—The Madras Daily News, in reviewing the annual report of the Madras Military Fund for 1861-62, notices the influence that fund has exercised in encouraging matrimony. Half the subscribers are married men. Nearly seven and a-half colonels, five and a-half lieutenant-colonels, and two captains, are married, "to one of each of those grades unmarried, but one to three lieutenants only is married, whilst ensigns are nowhere." The number of married subscribers at the present day, is, in comparison with the number a quarter of a century ago, very marked. Our contemporary attributes this increased disposition to matrimony to the circumstance "of the provisions of the fund becoming universally understood at home, that Indian officers have been considered eligible offers, and so a very superior class of ladies has come to this country." In former years, owing to the general ignorance of the provision guaranteeing an annuity, &c., to widows, young ladies naturally hesitated to venture out to India; but of late years the rules of the fund have become more known, and all objections on this score having been removed, "marriages have increased proportionately." The amount of donations paid in India and England during the year was Rs. 2,71,518 and Rs. 48,278 respectively, whilst the subscriptions amounted to Rs. 3,22,458 in India, and Rs. 92,144 in England. The cash balance in hand on the 30th of April, 1862, was Rs. 1,00,87,992, being Rs. 6,92,350 in excess of the balance of the former year.—Bengal Hurkaru.

THE COCHIN HILLS are just now engaging the attention of capitalists and speculators, who have discovered that the land is eminently adapted for the cultivation of coffee. A Madras contemporary states, that already more applications have been made for land than can possibly be satisfied. Prices have been offered "for choice sites, by persons likely to be well informed, which serve to show the estimation in which the densely wooded acres of the Nelliampathy range are held, before even the axe of the coolie has greeted the ear of the pioneers of English enterprise in this locality." The Madras Daily News urges those who have already secured land to retain it, believing that very shortly it will command prices "which cautious men may at the present moment consider fabulous. Large numbers of coolies have been secured from Madras to work on the plantations already formed. All things considered," adds our contemporary, "few localities have brighter prospects before them than the Nelliampathy range of the Cochin Hills."

THE RAIL.—The Bangalore Herald is glad to inform its readers that it is in a position to state, on good authority, that "the rail will be open for traffic between this and Madras at latest on the 1st of January, 1864, if not earlier.

Arrangements are being made to finish such parts of the terminal works as will be requisite before opening the line. We also hear that the rails are laid to within thirty miles of Bangalore, and that the only work of importance which might delay the opening is a bridge near Oosotah. This, however, we have no doubt, will be finished in time."

THE 40TH REGIMENT MADRAS N.I., and a company of artillery, arrived at Madras from Singapore on May 20. This regiment, after recruiting its strength for a few days, will be forwarded by railway to Belloor, and from thence to Cannanore, where it will be stationed.

THE STEAMER Jason, wrecked some time since on the Madras coast, has parted amidstips. The fore and aft portions, as well as the cargo, are still safe. An attempt is being made to secure the cargo, and steam-pumps are employed to clear the ship of water, but it is feared that her breaking up will materially lessen the chance of success.

MR. HOLLOWAY, of the Madras Civil Service, has been appointed permanently to a seat on the Bench of the High Court of Judicature at Madras.

ARMSTRONG GUNS.—Some Armstrong guns have lately arrived at Madras, and others are on the way out. Fort St. George is by no means such a contemptible obstacle to foreign invasion as some think. It is low, and it is difficult to obtain a view over it, except from the top of the lighthouse. It is, however, very well defended, and military men declare it could now withstand a long siege. The public buildings inside are unfortunately exposed, and would all probably come down with a run after a few days' blockade. The Armstrong guns are a welcome addition to our ordnance stores, and may prove very useful at no distant date. H.M.'s 60th regiment garrisons the fort at the present time, and will do so until their departure in January next. We have no intimation as to what regiment is destined to come out from England to succeed them, and should any European difficulty arise meanwhile it is not without the range of probability that the fort will be garrisoned by sepoys alone. Our military position in India now with upwards of 80,000 European soldiers is undoubtedly strong; but should any complications occur at home a disagreeable order will undoubtedly come out for a return of a large number of the regiments forming such an army.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—Our Government are stirring themselves in the matter of the reform of the various weights and measures in use in British India, and have proposed to the Supreme Government that a properly-qualified person shall be selected from each Presidency to form a committee for the consideration of a uniform system for the whole of India; but should the Supreme Government decline to regard this subject as of Imperial concern, the local Government propose to consider it in relation to this Presidency alone. It manifestly would be a great advantage to have a uniform system throughout the land, and it certainly would greatly facilitate the official returns to Government. At the present time the value of a garee, for example, is widely different in different localities, and much confusion is caused by this inconvenience. Sir W. Denison advocates the introduction of the rupee or tola of 180 grains into the system of weights, as "it may be hereafter desirable to harmonise our monetary system with that of England, by making the rupee a simple fraction of the pound sterling, and it would much hamper this operation if the Government were called upon at the same time to modify its whole system of weights."

A VERY SAGACIOUS ANIMAL.—Tales of the sagacity of the half reasoning elephant are numerous and often told. These animals abound on the Malabar coast, and we glean the following anecdote from the "Land of the Permauls" regarding their remarkable sagacity:—An elephant was sent to Nagercoil for the purpose of piling timber by the Dewan, who requested the wife of a missionary residing there to be good enough to see the animal fed, and thus prevent its keeper from abstracting its food. It was therefore brought to the house for this purpose and at first all went on correctly, but after a time it was suspected that the amount of rice was getting smaller and smaller; so one day the keeper was remonstrated with, and of course protested against the imputation of having taken it, adding in true native phraseology, Madam, "do you think I could rob my child?" The elephant looked on most sagaciously, and at this stage of the proceedings quietly threw his trunk around his keeper, and untied his bulky waist cloth, when the missing rice fell to the ground.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUTENANT HAIG.—Some additional details of the attack on Lieutenant Haig, adjutant of H.M.'s 90th Regiment, have reached the Mofussilite. It appears that this officer was proceeding to Bombay via Indore by bullock-train, and when about six miles north of Dewass, in the territory of his Highness the Maharajah Scindia, he was attacked by a band of dacoits, eight in number, and severely wounded. Being unarmed, Lieutenant Haig could offer no resistance, but nevertheless succeeded in disarming one of his assailants, and made such good use of the weapon thus obtained that he finally beat off the brigands. In the course of the encounter Lieutenant Haig received several sword cuts on both arms, "the ulna bone of the left arm being completely severed, besides other wounds on the head and hands." The Agency surgeon at Indore, under whose care Lieutenant Haig remains, reports favourably of the case. Our contemporary remarks:—"Scindia or his ministers will, of course, pretend that this gross outrage was committed by dacoits, over whom his Highness has no control. Such flimsy excuses should never be received, and, surely, it would not be expecting too much from our 'faithful' ally that he should send Sowars with our bullock train to protect it during its transit through any portion of his territories. That would prevent the occurrence of such outrages in future. But in Lieutenant Haig's case something summary is required. As several of the dacoits have been wounded by Lieutenant Haig, there would be little difficulty in tracing the whole gang, every one of whom should be hanged in chains, near the spot where the outrage was committed. A fine should also be levied on that part of Scindia's territory where the occurrence took place, and seized by the British Government till the money be paid. Such notice would show Native States that our Government is determined to protect their officers, and such atrocious conduct as that exhibited at Jhansie and Dewass would very soon cease."

PARSEE MUNIFICENCE.—"It has been taken so much as a matter of course, that no natives were of any importance except those who belonged to certain families, that men of benevolent intentions and public spirit have been kept in the background, and prevented from taking the initiative in measures of improvement and reform. Men who have taken an active part in collecting money for the foundation of public institutions in Bombay, can tell how the flow of native liberality has been checked by the parsimony of the leaders to whom alone would be assigned the credit of what ever was accomplished. And we may ask, what has the present Sir Jamsetjee done that he should be regarded as the natural leader of the Parsees, and that his brother should be raised to the Legislative Council, over the heads of a hundred better men? Benevolence is not an hereditary virtue; and, if we look at what the good baronet's sons have done, we cannot resist the conclusion that they are really living on their father's reputation."—Saturday Review.—"We are not satisfied that these strictures are just. If report is to be believed, the private charities of one at least of 'the good baronet's sons' are upon a scale little inferior to that of the venerable Sir Jamsetjee himself. We have heard the extent of the Honourable Mr. Rustomjee's charities in the last few years alone estimated at from £80,000 to £100,000. There is perhaps too much tendency in the press to dictate the scale on which native benevolence should be expended, and the objects to which it should be directed. We find it difficult to persuade ourselves that there is another community in the world that contributes upon so princely a scale to philanthropic purposes generally, as the community of this island, both European and native. We are far from saying this to flatter the community. We believe it to be a fact, and we cannot but rejoice in it. What the Reviewer's remarks are levelled at, we believe is this, that the Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy's family have contributed but sparingly to the Victoria Museum. We regret that such should be the fact, but it is not right to allow occasional caprices of this order, to make us overlook or depreciate the benevolence that flows in other directions from the family."

REWARDS FOR THE CAPTURE OF REBELS.—The Oudh Gazette contrasts the reward given by the Government to the captor of the rebel Moghul Beg, with that awarded for the arrest of the notorious dacoit Rajpaul Sing. The former, it appears, was captured by a naval officer, to whom the Government gave a jagheer with remission for one generation of all Government claims on the estate. To Mr. Inspector Medley, who captured Rajpaul Sing, a reward of only fifty rupees was given. If, adds our contemporary, "the Government means to say that this is even-handed justice, or even-handed liberality, they are very much mistaken. Whether Moghul Beg was a man of greater consequence than Rajpaul Sing may be a question, but it is impossible that his captor, or rather betrayer, could have incurred so much personal danger as Mr. Medley did in capturing the latter."

VALUE OF COATS.—A somewhat extraordinary judgment given in the Supreme Court at Mauritius is reported in the Overland Gazette:—"A judgment was given yesterday in a case which attracted some attention, not so much for the amount at stake as for the parties concerned in, and for the circumstances connected with, the proceedings. His Honour Chief Justice Shand brought an action against the P. and O. Company for the recovery of the value of a bundle of overcoats, &c. The admitted value of the articles lost, even allowing them to be new, was £33. His Honour claimed £80, and £30 for the inconvenience sustained by the loss of the coats. His brother judge awarded £80 and 25 per cent., and in case of non-payment, 'caption of the body of the company and imprisonment for three years.' His Honour the Chief Justice during the trial was on the bench in his robes, and interrupted the counsel for the company during the pleadings." The Gazette adds:—"As the company formally announce to all passengers previous to embarking that they are not responsible for the loss of baggage, we cannot conceive how a judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff; nor can we approve of the attitude of the Judge in a case where he was personally concerned, as his presence was only necessary in Court to reply to certain questions put by the defendants."—Bengal Hurkaru, May 25.

COTTONS.—The Delhi Gazette states that upwards of 3,000 mannds of cotton, the property of the Rajah of Puttala, left Mooltan on the 9th inst. for Kurrachee. Our contemporary adds, "the export of this staple, which had received a check by the fall of prices, is actively recovering in the Punjab under the effect of recent favourable advices, but great quantities of the young plant have been totally destroyed in the hillward provinces by the young brood of locusts. In Goordaspoor even trees have been stripped for miles, and not a leaf left on them." The early cotton crop is said to be hopelessly gone. A Kurrachee journal, Our Paper, states that the quantity of cotton held by natives in that city is estimated at 25,000 bales, and adds, "the European houses won't touch the article at ruling figures, and the native holders, rather than bate an iota, seem disposed to ship on their own account. Several consignments have already been thus made, and, so far as we can see, this new feature in our trade will develop itself as time rolls on, and result eventually in the establishment of Scinde agencies at the European ports with which our city has business relations."—Bengal Hurkaru.

JACOBABAD, May 19.—So Khodad Khan is dethroned and a fugitive, and a Sher Dil Khan, Khan of Khelat, is extremely anxious to be on good terms with the British. It is believed he daily sends messages expressing good will, whilst his ambassador is also en route to the political agent here to negotiate amicable arrangements. A commercial traveller into his territories is likely, consequently, to enjoy peculiar advantages. Then the question naturally suggests itself—can any good come from Khelat? Of goods, wool will, it is thought, always take the lead. The Khelat sheep itself might be advantageously introduced into India, although it would take some care and time to acclimatise; this it is fully worth. And then their horses are also superior, and good brood-mares might be cheaply got from Khelat. Their principal faults are legginess, heaviness, and straightness in the shoulder and neck; slenderness below the knee, and deficiency in courage. But they are full-bodied and muscular, and not undersized, like our indigenous stock. Khelat camels, dogs, and cats are also highly prized; and these, with horns, hides, hoofs, fruit, wine, and sala misree, ought to make a large frontier trade.

—Our Paper, May 22.

FORGERY is said to be very prevalent just now in Bombay. The forged notes are chiefly for one hundred rupees, "are cleverly drawn up, and apparently lithographed by a skilful hand." The police are at present unable to determine whether Europeans or Natives are the offenders.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Three for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 19th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

New Rules for the Artillery Establishment.

No. 68a.—H. E. the Viceroy and Governor general of India having decided that the home system of district and station artillery commands shall, as far as practicable, henceforward obtain in India, in supersession of the present system, the following rules are laid down for observance at the three presidencies, and will take effect from the respective dates on which the provisions of this order may be carried out at the several stations.

2. The artillery serving in each division and separate district of the army will comprise an artillery divisional or district command.

3. The head-quarters of only one brigade of artillery will be located in each division or district, and the artillery command of the division or district will be exercised by the officer commanding the artillery brigade without extra emolument.

4. When it shall happen that in any army division or separate district there shall not be the head-quarters of any brigade of artillery, then the artillery divisional or district command will be held by a selected field officer, who will receive a command allowance of rupees (300) three hundred when the strength of the artillery under his command shall equal three batteries, and an allowance of rupees (200) two hundred when the artillery shall consist of two batteries.

These rates of command allowance will be granted whether the batteries are or are not of the same brigade.

5. Officers commanding artillery in divisions or separate districts will be responsible for the efficient condition of all the artillery within their command, and will ordinarily be required to inspect every battery once during each half year, under such instructions as may be issued by the Commander-in-Chief.

6. During their inspections travelling allowance at the usual rate [by dak 8 annas a mile; by rail 3 annas a mile] will be admitted to divisional or district commanders, and also to their staff officers if the Commander-in-Chief shall direct that the divisional or district adjutants shall accompany their commanding officers on these occasions.

7. It is to be distinctly understood that during the absence of the commander and his staff from the head-quarters of the division or district, no extra expense will be sanctioned on account of command or any other allowances.

8. The adjutants of brigades will perform also the divisional or district duties, receiving an extra allowance of rupees (20) twenty per mensem.

9. When there is no brigade adjutant available the adjutant performing the divisional or district duties will receive rupees (181-5) one hundred and eighty-one and five annas per mensem, and this allowance will be paid when the strength of the artillery in the command shall equal two batteries.

10. In the event of there being only one battery or less than two batteries serving in any division or district of the army, no command allowance or staff allowance for an adjutant will be sanctioned.

11. Officers commanding artillery divisions or districts will ordinarily twice in each year, inspect the arsenals, magazines, and ordnance depots, and also the ordnance mounted in any forts situated within their commands.

They will, however, have no authority over officers of the ordnance department, and their duty will be confined to reporting any deficiencies for the information of the Commander-in-Chief.

His Excellency will, if considered necessary, bring the points reported upon under the notice of the Government.

12. The artillery at each garrison, not being the head-quarters of a divisional or district command, will be commanded by the senior officer, and his command will be designated an artillery station command.

13. If the command shall consist of two or more batteries not of the same brigade, a command allowance of rupees (200) two hundred a month will be granted.

This allowance is only admissible to regimental field officers.

14. If the batteries at any such garrison shall belong to the same brigade, the station artillery command will be exercised by the senior regimental officer of whatever rank, and no remuneration will be granted.

15. When the strength of an artillery station command shall equal two batteries, whether of the same brigade or not, an adjutant will be allowed with a staff salary of rupees (60) sixty, and office allowance rupees (30) thirty, as also an allowance, rupees (30) thirty, for one horse if not already in receipt of horse allowance.

SANITARY CONDITION OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

WE have at last got the Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Sanitary State of the Army in India; with précis of evidence. It was worth waiting for. The Report has not reached us in sufficient time to enable us to give an analysis of its contents, and we must return to it in a future number. At present we shall only note the fact that the loss of our military fellow-countrymen in India from climate and other causes is quite frightful, and, indeed, almost incredible. If in England we lose annually by death ten soldiers in every thousand, our average annual loss of late years in India has been nearly sixty in every thousand. This is paying dearly, indeed, for our Indian possessions. The Commissioners strongly recommend that the British troops in India should, as a rule, be located as much as possible on high ground, and at our best sanatoria. Every year we are discovering hills far above the level of the sea, which are peculiarly congenial to European life. But, after all, the real curse of India to the European soldier is the extreme cheapness of unwholesome spirituous liquors in all the bazaars.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL.

MR. A. MILLS on Tuesday night last called the attention of the House of Commons to the constitution of the Council of the Secretary of State for India. He complained that the Secretary had too much power, and that he could consult his Council or act quite independently of them as it suited his pleasure or convenience, and that he might assume the position of an autocrat or a cypher, and the House of Commons need not know until long afterwards in which capacity he was acting. Mr. Mills also observed that it was notorious that the Council were unanimously against the Army-Amalgamation measure, and that the Secretary of State acted in that matter quite independently of them. It had been originally proposed that at the end of four or five years the constitution of the Home Government for India should undergo a revision. He concluded by moving an Address to the Crown for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire and report whether some alterations and improvement might not be made in the Home Government of India. Sir Charles Wood asserted that whatever had been done in this country by him had been done in most cases in accordance with the majority of his Council, with whom it was a mistake to suppose that he was on bad terms. If he were called upon to reduce it he should be puzzled how to make up his mind as to whom he could spare from the list of members. He acknowledged that there were considerable differences of opinion on the Waste Lands question. The Amalgamation question, he said, was an Imperial question, and the measure had been approved of by large majorities in the House of Commons.

Colonel Sykes said that the Secretary of State for India had too much power. He was as complete a despot as Alexander or Darius. No single individual, he added, ought to have so much power. There was but one feeling of rankling discontent amongst the officers of the Indian army; 5,000 or 6,000 of them had been ruined in their professional prospects.

Lord Stanley objected to the motion of Mr. A. Mills, and Mr. Kiunnaird expressed a hope that it would not be pressed. Mr. Mills consented to withdraw it, and then the conversation ended.

If the Army-Amalgamation question should not be satisfactorily adjusted after the Report of the Royal Commission, the whole odium of failure will be borne by Sir Charles Wood. He has, at all events, evinced no want of moral courage in the matter, and has not hesitated to declare that all responsibility connected with the government of India rests exclusively with himself as Secretary of State for India.

THE INDIAN MUTINY FUND.

THERE is nothing of which England has more reason to be proud than her public charities. They are wonderfully numerous, and are generally on a scale of marvellous munificence. Yet John Bull loves his money dearly, for, in most instances, he has gained it with hard labour and anxious vigils; and he feels that money is influence and power, and that it can shield him from some of the most humiliating and corrosive cares and evils of human life, and enable him to give comfort, and pleasure, and protection to those who are near and dear to him. But though John Bull loves his money, and is even thought to greatly overrate its worth, and is accused of the meanest and most vulgar sort of pride—the pride that is based on a full purse—no people in the world are so openhearted and openhanded as the English—so ready to part with large portions of their silver and gold, when their best feelings are appealed to by the voice of real sorrow and distress. But unhappily, though voluntary contributions rapidly swell the funds of our charitable institutions, those funds are but too often misdirected or mismanaged; and the abuses of our public charities are as notorious as their liberality. We have heard, accordingly, of many instances of wealthy and warmhearted Englishmen who are so shocked with the way in which public charitable funds are too often administered, that they will give away no money whatever to the poor, except through their own hands, or through the agency of trustworthy and personal friends; for they are resolved that not a single shilling of their donations shall be pocketed by those for whom it was never meant.

This may be thought an ominous sort of introduction to a notice of a long advertisement in the Times of last week, embodying the Report of the Committee of the Indian Mutiny Relief Fund for the year 1862. But let not any gentleman of the Committee of this Fund, which numbers no less than four score members, be at all alarmed. Though we are about to make some observations upon the subject of the expenses attendant on the administration of the Fund, we are not going to be either at all libellous or particularly savage. But in our admiration of the unexampled and most memorable munificence of our countrymen, who subscribed between four and five hundred thousand pounds for the relief of the sufferers by the great Indian Mutiny, we cannot help scrutinizing with a somewhat jealous eye the mode in which that vast sum is administered. Nevertheless, upon the whole, we are inclined to believe that the money has been conscientiously and judiciously distributed, though we have some exceptions in reserve. We are not at all disposed to be captious and hypercritical; especially as we are quite certain that the many noblemen and gentlemen of high character who consented to have their names on the committee, of which Mr. Alderman Finnis was president, were actuated by the sincerest and most earnest desire that the interests of the sufferers from the mutiny should be faithfully and religiously attended to. But the committee is assuredly far too numerous for any really useful purpose. In so large a body what is every one's business is no one's; or, if all should interfere, there would be collision and confusion. Too many cooks spoil the broth. Boards, as Jeremy Bentham used to say, are screens—behind which individual malefactors but too easily conceal themselves. A committee or board of eighty members will do too much or too little; the latter of the two evils being the likeliest; and then the whole business and influence and power are concentrated in one or two subordinate agents, and jobbery and loss are the probable result. Solomon tells us that in the multitude of counsellors there is safety, but we cannot say that the fourscore administrators or committeemen of the Indian Fund, however excellent their intentions, have secured it entirely from all jobbery and roguery. In the first place, we think that the office establishment is much too costly; the office itself being £75 a-year, and the salaries £716. 15s. The expenses, including rent, salaries, stationery, &c., amount to £1,120. 6s. for last year; and we are really pained to hear it said that a Major-general in the army—we shall rejoice if the report be contradicted—has been actually in the receipt of a salary of £200 a-year, drawn from the funds intended for his distressed brother officers or the poor surviving relatives and orphans of our countrymen and countrywomen massacred in the Indian mutiny! Major-general G. B. Tremeneheere, Superintendent of the Fund, is the officer alluded to. A man of his position surely cannot need to draw money from a charitable fund intended for the relief of persons in a vastly different pecuniary condition. If he has really been paid for his work, it seems that he was hardly worth his salt, for his own clerk has outwitted him and robbed the fund—the precious property of the poor—of between £800 and £900 at least. The robber absconded at the close of last year, and left his accounts in such a state of confusion that though at least £800 or £900 are certainly gone, the precise extent of the loss cannot yet be specified. We think the report ought to have given the rascal's name, and have informed us what means had been taken for his apprehension, and what chances there were of any portion of the money being recovered. The silence of the report on these important points is not very consolatory. In the management of a public charity it is a religious duty in all connected with it to aim at the utmost possible economy consistent with its true interests, and we are certainly inclined to think that a paid superintendent and a paid secretary (for if the major-general is paid, we suppose his civil secretary, D. Forrest, Esq., is paid also), and an office full of paid clerks (we are not told how many there are), form an establishment a little too costly and pretentious for the purposes of this charitable fund. The duties, we presume, cannot be very onerous, or occupy a great deal of time.

The number of the recipients on the books on the 1st of January of the present year stood at 1,517. The amount spent during the last year was £13,722. 14s. 6d. How much did it cost to distribute these donations to the distressed? Exactly £1,120. 6s. 9d. If this were not a case in which a good deal of gratuitous labour and trouble is expected, and in which the closest possible economy is a sacred duty, we should not think the cost of administration particularly heavy. But it is hardly just or generous to divert a single shilling from the legitimate purposes of the institution. We think that the amount of £75 for office rent might have been saved; for surely there are many public institutions in London that would spare a room for such a purpose. If such accommodation had been properly applied for at the India Office, backed by a very little interest, it could not have been refused. In fact, the whole cost of the administration of the fund ought to have been met by the Government. At all events, no one expected that an officer of rank and position, with a good income of his own, would have drawn £200 a-year from a fund for the destitute widows and orphans of his fellow-soldiers and countrymen. This, at least, might have been saved, if the committee of fourscore members had done their duty.

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL AGAIN.

In the days of James Silk Buckingham and the Calcutta Journal the Indian officials, who, at a day or two's notice, turned that gentleman out of India and caused the utter sacrifice of his paper (then a most valuable property), there was a great outcry on the part of the local authorities on the subject of what they were pleased to regard as "pernicious publicity." It is too late in the day now openly to characterise all "publicity" respecting official proceedings as "pernicious," but there can be little doubt that there is now a triad of Commanders-in-Chief who, in their secret hearts, though they dare not give expression to the feeling, would heartily rejoice if they could "gag the press"—as far at least as concerns everything connected with the famous Mhow Court-martial. The more this foul case is stirred, the more offensive it becomes.

We have now before us another Memorandum from the Horse Guards, addressed "privately" to Sir Hugh Rose and Sir William Mansfield. It is a yea and nay sort of thing—a milk and water oblation to appease the demon of discord. It indicates nothing but a weak good nature on the part of the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, and an earnest desire not so much to do justice to all parties as to pacify all parties—to smooth down all obstacles to a final settlement and burial of a thoroughly disagreeable business; a consummation which, as far as his Royal Highness was concerned, was evidently most devoutly to be wished.

This second and semi-official Memorandum is dated Horse Guards, February, 1863. Why is the day of the month omitted? Is it intentional or accidental? It happens to be a matter of some little importance, because it was on the 2nd of that very month in that very year that Messrs. Thorndike and Smith, of 11, Staple-inn, London, the solicitors of Mr. Samuel Lilley, of Llandudno, North Wales, commenced a correspondence with his Royal Highness through his military secretary on a subject connected with the Mhow Court-martial. Their client, Mr. Samuel Lilley, is the brother of the sergeant-major who was persecuted to death in a modern Calcutta Black Hole in the sultry month of May, 1862.

The solicitors on behalf of Mr. Samuel Lilley asked for copies of the official correspondence with the military authorities at Mhow respecting the arrest, imprisonment, and death of the late Regimental Sergeant-major Lilley, of her Majesty's 6th Inniskilling Dragoons, and also of two medical reports and post-mortem examination of the deceased. Now this letter was probably received at the Horse Guards the day on which it was written, or at all events the day after. On the 10th of the same month the solicitors received a reply from Major-general W. F. Foster, Military Secretary to his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. "I am directed by his Royal Highness," writes General Foster, "to acquaint you that none of the documents to which you refer or copies of them appear to have been received either at the Horse Guards or at the Army Medical Department, where inquiry has been made."

Was this second Memorandum written before or after the correspondence had commenced between the Horse Guards and Staple-inn? The Memorandum was in all probability of a later date than the first letter from the solicitors, dated February 2nd, and there was no means of despatching it to India before the mail of the 4th of the month. If this was the case, it is very natural to inquire how it was that his Royal Highness, who expresses himself most anxious to do justice to all parties, should have considered himself to be in a position to compass that object and to write two Memorandums expressive of his decisions on this famous case, when, by his own admission, none of the important official documents demanded by the solicitors respecting the treatment of Sergeant-major Lilley had been laid before him? Surely the correspondence with the solicitors and the knowledge that important documents were wanting, and the discovery that the case was likely to go into the civil courts, ought to have made him pause a little before he passed what he intended to be his final judgment. The solicitors did not hesitate to declare that they should advise the relatives of the late Sergeant-major Lilley to indict Lieutenant-colonel J. R. Crawley for manslaughter if he should ever return to this country. They will soon have an opportunity of carrying this threat into execution. It was not till the 21st of March, 1863, that the solicitors succeeded in obtaining from the Secretary of State for War a promise that the necessary steps should be taken for obtaining from India an official report upon the subject of Sergeant-major Lilley's arrest and death. Has that report been received? If so, where is it? We hope some Member of Parliament will move that it be laid upon the table of the House with the other papers connected with the case.

His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief acknowledges that Sergeant-major Lilley's case "will ever remain an unfortunate event;" that there was no proof that his death was occasioned by drunkenness; that he had a character for sobriety and correct conduct previous to his arrest; and that the arrest was improper; he clearly implies, too, that Colonel Crawley had been deficient in temper and discretion as a commanding officer, and had sought "to exalt himself by a depreciation of those entrusted to his command;" that he had "outraged the feelings of the gentlemen under his command;" and that the Inniskilling Dragoons, which was once a well disciplined regiment, had been turned under him into one of a very different description; and yet it is decided that this bad-tempered and indiscreet officer, who had acted, to say the least of it, with such extreme impropriety and want of tact, should be continued in the command of the regiment which he has so sadly demoralised. After all this the Commander-in-Chief in India is commended for his desire to do justice, though he had damned the memory of a brave soldier as a sot whom he knew to have had a twenty years' character for sobriety, and his Royal Highness "fully appreciates the motives which led Sir Hugh Rose to countenance Lieutenant-colonel Crawley's conduct as contrasted with those who have opposed him." Why, what was the conduct of Paymaster Smales or any of the other officers "contrasted" with that of Colonel Crawley, who arrested a witness against himself on a vague verbal charge, utterly unfounded, and which he dropped when it had answered his purpose, and who at last caused the death of that brave and honest fellow by the most brutal and illegal ill-treatment—who "outraged the feelings of the gentlemen under his command," who is said by his coarse and cruel language to have made more than one officer of his regiment shed tears of vexation, and to have expressed his regret that the age of duelling was past; and who threatened one officer with a horsewhip; and who was proved by several witnesses to have been absent from muster parade when he put his name down on the muster-roll as being present? Paymaster Smales was cashiered for merely bringing those charges against his commanding officer in an informal manner—that is to say, they were sent to Colonel Crawley direct, in a private letter, instead of being forwarded officially through him to the Commander-in-Chief. "No doubt,"

says his Royal Highness, in his second Memorandum, "one of the mainstays of discipline is to be found in the support by the superior officers of officers in immediate command of regiments, where that support can be given with justice." Was it given with justice in Colonel Crawley's case? The Parliament and the public think it was not, and hence the whole case is to be tried over again. "The verdict of the court-martial against Paymaster Smales," says his Royal Highness, "has proved to the army that an attempt to coerce a commanding officer can have but one termination—the ruin of those that attempt it." The army had learnt that lesson long before. They knew too well that the weakest must go to the wall; and Colonel Crawley, conscious of this advantage, threatened that if any of his officers opposed him he would "crush" them. He said this with savage emphasis to the regiment on the parade-ground. But are British officers mere slaves that they should be treated in this way with impunity? And what does his Royal Highness mean by an attempt to coerce a commanding officer? Is the mere complaint against an act of tyranny an attempt to coerce the tyrant? Is an officer obliged to submit to the grossest personal injuries and insults from his official superiors. Is it in the bond? Is he to be told that if he in any way resists such treatment or complains of it he is guilty of an attempt to coerce his superiors, and must expose himself to inevitable ruin? Is this the moral of the military lecture from the highest military authority in England? Poor Sergeant-major Lilley was about to give his honest testimony in favour of an inferior officer and against his colonel. The consequence was not only arrest and humiliation and ruin, but death. Is this a fit warning to a British army? Will the decision of the military authorities in this case be endorsed and supported by the general public in this free country, so pre-eminently characterised by its love of justice and fair play? Most certainly not.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

INDIAN ARMY.

Mr. BEAMISH asked the Secretary of State for India when the report of the royal commission on the Indian army would be laid upon the table of the House.

Sir C. WOOD said that the report had not yet been made. It was, therefore, impossible for him to say when it could be laid upon the table.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

Colonel SYKES obtained an order for returns connected with the pensioned and discharged naval officers of the Indian navy.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE said he had given notice of his intention to ask a question of the Secretary to the Treasury; but, as he was happy to see the noble lord at the head of the Government in his place—(cheers)—he would put the question to the noble lord instead. His question was, whether it was true that the opinion of the law officers had been taken on the subject of the Banda and Kirwee prize money, and that the opinion they had given was in favour of the preferential claim of Sir George Whitlock's force?

Lord PALMERSTON said it was not usual to state to the House the opinions of the law officers of the Crown, still he had no hesitation in saying that it was the opinion of the law officers that there was no law regulating the division of the prize money in the case to which the question related. It was, therefore, left to the discretion of the Crown to say in what proportion and to whom the distribution should be made. The Government had come to a decision on the respective claims, and the result would be communicated to the parties interested in a few days.

AFFAIRS IN CHINA.

Lord NAAS, in calling attention to the state of affairs in China, in the hope, he said, of eliciting some information upon the subject from Her Majesty's Government, began by noticing the tendency of the people of China to rebel against the constituted authorities, and the long protracted political disorders which accompanied the change of dynasties. He then adverted to the Taiping movement and its causes, the chief of which he considered had been our interference with the affairs of the country, thereby rendering the Government contemptible in the eyes of the people, and forcing the opium trade. He proceeded to discuss the policy we had pursued in China since the Taiping movement, and to show that whereas, at the beginning, our policy had been declared to be one of strict neutrality and non-interference, step by step that policy had been abandoned, and we had interfered in every way in Chinese affairs, co-operating with the Imperialists and attacking the rebels. To establish this position he gave a narrative of military operations in the maritime provinces of China, and complained that certain of the Chinese institutions such as the department of the Customs, as well as a military force, had been Europeanised, pointing out the evils and dangers of such a policy, and the objections to the employment of British officers in the service of the Emperor of China. He urged the inevitable consequences of such an interference in the political, financial, and military affairs of one country by another, which had been strongly condemned by persons best acquainted with China, and the fruits of which might, he said, be discerned in what had happened in India. After dwelling upon the effect which the new policy adopted in China would have upon our relations with other powers, and of the encouragement and justification it would offer to Russia and France to intermeddle in the affairs of the Chinese empire, he, in conclusion, impressed upon the House that it was a policy which would seriously impair the British character in the opinion of the people of China, and prejudice the interests of British commerce.

Sir H. VERNEY was of opinion that we had interfered in China merely to protect British interests and the lives and property of our own countrymen.

Mr. LAYARD said he had no misgiving as to the policy pursued by Her Majesty's Government in China—a policy he had heard recommended in that House, that of treating China as a civilized nation. We had now a minister at Peking, and carried on direct communications with the Central Government. Our policy had two objects, one to restore public tranquillity in China, the other to secure the observance of treaties, by convincing the Chinese that it was as much for their interest as for ours. It was part of our policy to support the liberal party in China, at the head of which was Prince Kung. In carrying out our policy, Mr. Bruce, our minister, had encountered great difficulties. One of the objections urged by Prince Kung to the adoption of measures he recommended was the internal disorders in China. "Help us," he said, "to put down the rebellion, and to manage our finances, and we shall be able to do what you require." Mr. Layard adverted to the character he had ascribed on former occasions to the Taipings, repeating that they were unable to found a government, and that, according to the testimony of witnesses of all classes, they were loose bands of mere plunderers. He showed the difficult position in which our officials in China were placed in relation to the rebels, and defended the course taken by them, and the placing the Customs under the direction of Mr. Lay. He accounted for the outcry raised in China against the introduction of the foreign element into the management of the Customs by the check it imposed upon frauds and smuggling, though it was a great boon to the British trader. He contended that the authorizing of British officers to organize Chinese troops, and to enter the service of the Emperor, was no violation of neutrality, and that the policy pursued by Her Majesty's Government was a just and humane policy, and one that, so far from causing war, would prevent war. His conclusion from letters of recent date was, he said, that the Taeping rebellion was gradually dying out, and, looking at what was taking place, he had sanguine hopes of China.

Mr. S. FITZGERALD observed that the speech of Mr. Layard contained no reply to that of Lord Naas, but passed over all the points of his argument, which was that the policy of Her Majesty's Government, professed to be one of strict neutrality, had gradually changed. Mr. Layard had not noticed the objection that our policy would be sure to bring us into collision with other European powers.

LORD PALMERSTON said he was at a loss to understand the conclusion Lord Naas wished to draw of censure upon Her Majesty's Government. The main question was, had the policy pursued by them been attended with good results; had it been founded in good faith, and was it likely to be of advantage to the country? A great part of the speech of Lord Naas appeared to him to imply approbation of the conduct of Her Majesty's Government. He had said they were teaching the Chinese the art of government, how to regulate their finances, increase their revenue, and improve the administration of their territory. Her Majesty's Government admitted these charges, and claimed merit for what they were doing. After replying to some of the objections urged by Lord Naas, he observed that the policy adopted by the Government was a friendly and straightforward policy, and that he was convinced that, if the House would agree to wait the results of experience, it would be found that, so far from deserving censure, it was eminently advantageous to the country, and merited the approbation of the House.

Observations were made by Mr. LIDDELL, Colonel SYKES, Mr. GREGSON, and Mr. WHITE-SIDE.

The subject then dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 7.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH THROUGH PERSIA.

Colonel SYKES asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether there was a new convention for the construction of the electric telegraph through Persia, drawn out by Mr. Eastwick, charge d'affaires at Teheran, on the 17th December, 1862, and whether there would be any objection to lay a copy of the same upon the table of the House.

Mr. LAYARD: There is a new convention, but it is not yet signed. When it is signed, there will be no objection to lay it on the table of the House.

THE RIVER GODAVERY.

Mr. J. B. SMITH asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received any communications respecting the progress of the opening out of the River Godavery since the date of the last published correspondence laid before Parliament—viz., May 2, 1862; and, if so, whether he would lay the same upon the table of the House?

Sir C. WOOD: No report has been received since the date mentioned by the hon. gentleman.

CLAIMS OF PRINCE AZEEM JAH.

Sir F. KELLY, in rising to move for a select committee to inquire into the claims of his Highness Azeem Jah to the title and dignity of Nawab of the Carnatic, entered into details connected with the early history of our connection with that portion of India, to show that its Princes had always acted with unswerving fidelity to the British Government, and had borne a gallant part on our side in the wars which had taken place in that country. The hon. and learned gentleman then went on to say that on the death of the reigning Nawab in 1801 the East India Company thought a fitting opportunity had arisen for obtaining that which they had long desired—exclusive control over the civil, financial, and military resources of the Carnatic. The Prince who had just died had left a son, as to whose legitimacy, according to the laws and customs of India, some doubt existed, or was created by the East India Company, the next claimant to the throne being his first cousin. The Company having long in vain endeavoured to prevail on the son to accede to their proposal for control over the civil and military resources of the province, applied to his first cousin, the nephew of the deceased Prince, who stood next in order of succession, and induced him to become a party to a treaty by which the Nawab of the Carnatic was to have his dignity recognised, while he, on the other hand, was to deliver over at once to the Company the absolute control over the resources of the country, and among other things the collection and appropriation of its revenues, which then amounted to something like half-a-million sterling per annum; one-fifth of the revenue, or somewhere about £110,000 a year, being reserved for the support of himself and his family. That treaty was accepted by the Nawab as all that he could desire, was duly signed, was made known to the different native Princes, and was acknowledged by various declarations and acts of State. So far from any doubt being suggested or communicated to the Princes of this house as to its hereditary character, or as to the effect of the treaty, they were told that it was unnecessary to make the then son of the Nawab expressly a party to the treaty, because he was a party to it as heir to his father. The Nawab performed his part of the contract by allowing the administration to remain in the hands of the East India Company, and they on their part recognized him as Nawab until his death in 1825. His son succeeded him as heir, according to the laws and customs of India, and to him was entrusted the care of the young Prince, his nephew, as the sole lawful guardian. He died in 1855, and up to that time his nephew was treated by the authorities as next in succession to the Nawabship. Upon that event occurring the young Prince was about to be recognized as party to the treaty by hereditary right, when a summary intimation was made to him that no acknowledgment would take place until the matter had been considered by higher authorities. He wrote letter after letter, made application after application, but received no definite answer for two years, and then he was insulted with the proposal at once to descend to the rank of a subject, and accept a life pension of £10,000 a year. The Government of this country, through the East India Company, who were then rulers of India, insisted on the perpetuity of the treaty as far as regarded what they took under it, including the revenue of the country, amounting to nearer £1,000,000 than £300,000 a year, but they offered some £15,000 a year, and degradation to the rank of a subject, to the representative of the princes who had made the treaty on behalf of their successors. If the treaty was to be broken, the parties to it should in justice be placed upon the same footing as before it was signed, and in that case the sovereignty could no longer be withheld by the Government from Prince Azeem Jah. The prince, of course, refused the proposal which was made, in respectful but indignant terms, and since that time had been in difficulties, dependent on the kindness of friends, until he now submitted his case to the last tribunal under the constitution—to the British House of Commons—(hear, hear). The question under the treaty of 1801 was whether it was binding on the East India Company during the life only of the party to the treaty, Azeem ul Dowlah, or during the lives of his successors, and if a committee were granted he should satisfy them that if it expired with Azeem ul Dowlah in 1819, as far as the provisions for his benefit were concerned, it also expired at the same time, as far as regarded the benefits derived under it by the East India Company. If the right of the family to the Nawabship had ceased on his death in 1819, so likewise did the right of the company to the revenues of the Carnatic, and the Government had no more claim to them and to the administration of the country than the Emperor of China or any other Sovereign. The express words of the treaty designated the object of it to be this—to make additional provisions for supplying defects in previous treaties between the company and the Nawab, and to establish the connection between the contracting parties on a permanent basis for all times to come. The second article of the treaty recited that such parts of previous treaties concluded between the company and his highness as were calculated to strengthen the alliance, cement the friendship, and identify the interests of the contracting parties were thereby ratified and confirmed, and in many previous treaties there had been a distinct acknowledgment of the sovereignty of the Carnatic being vested in the Nawab, which he would satisfy the committee was an hereditary title and dignity.

At this point an attempt was made to count out the House, but there being more than forty members present,

Sir F. KELLY continued his speech, and proceeded to refer in detail to a number of treaties and public documents antecedent to the treaty of 1801 and confirmed by it, all of which distinctly recognized, on the part of the East India Company the hereditary right of Azeem ul Dowlah and his descendants to the sovereignty of the Carnatic conferred on him by the Great Mogul. By some of these the Nawab was called on to make grants, sometimes of money and sometimes of territory, all of which obligations he faithfully discharged. The hon. baronet also referred to a letter of George III. to the Nawab in answer to an autograph letter from him, in which his Majesty said:

"We congratulate your Highness on your accession to your hereditary Musnud. We shall seize every occasion to afford you proofs of our regard, and shall continue to you our especial friendship and protection."

If the select committee were granted, he should be ready to produce before it many other public documents and acts of State, never published in the Blue-books, all recognizing the hereditary claim of this family to the sovereignty of the Carnatic. He hardly expected that the right hon. gentleman would argue that all these treaties came to an end at the death of Azeem ul Dowlah. In the papers which had passed from one branch of the Indian department to the other he had been unable to find a single argument or statement of fact in support of the non-recognition of the rights of this family. What the grounds were on which the Government of India based their policy in reference to the Nawab they had never made known to that prince. He had been treated with contemptuous silence. The prince was utterly ignorant of the grounds on which he was refused that which he held to be his right. It might be said that it was exceedingly inconvenient to have those nominal Governments existing in India. He was not disposed to deny that proposition, but he could not admit that it afforded any reason for the violation of a treaty—he could not admit that it justified spoliation. (Hear, hear.) Besides, though he had had no personal communication with the Nawab, he thought he might say that the Prince would be ready to enter into a just, reasonable, and honourable arrangement with the Government of India, whereby protection might be granted to him and his family on the one hand, and obedience be exacted from them on the other. He found in the papers traces of an allegation that treasonable correspondence had been discovered between the father, grandfather, or great grandfather of the Nawab and Tippoo; but that case had been investigated, and Mr. Mill, the historian of India, was of opinion that there was not the shadow of any evidence on which such a charge could be sustained. But even if the father, grandfather, or great-grandfather of the Nawab had committed treason, was that to be visited on the innocent descendant of the guilty party? He also found traces in the papers of a charge of immoral practices against this family; but persons who knew the Prince well testified that his character would bear the most searching investigation. It was also in the Nawab's favour that during the mutiny in India England had no more faithful friend than he. That was stated by thousands and tens of thousands of people in Madras. He asked the House to come to no decision on the claims of the Prince; but, appealing to their sense of justice and honour, he begged to move that a select committee be appointed to inquire into those claims. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. SMOLLETT rose to second the motion, and said that in this case the East India Company had been guilty of an act of gross political turpitude.

An Hon. Member here moved that the House be counted, and only thirty-four members being present,

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.

Mr. P. WYNDHAM asked the Secretary of State for India whether the Delhi prize money recently distributed amounted to the sum of Rs. 3,557,917?

Sir C. WOOD replied that the money distributed did not amount to the sum mentioned by the hon. gentleman. A portion had been reserved to meet contingent claims which had not yet been decided.

CAVALRY REGIMENTS IN INDIA.

Mr. EVANS asked the following question, of which Colonel Sykes had given notice—"Whether the roster of relief of the cavalry regiments in India is interrupted in the case of the Queen's Bays, which had been ordered home in November, 1861, at which time the regiment was greatly reduced by the loss of ten officers and 161 men in four years, and by volunteering, and which still remains below its strength?"

The Marquis of HARTINGTON replied that the arrangements for sending out or calling home regiments on foreign service were entirely under the control of the Commander-in-Chief. The Commander-in-Chief was not bound by any particular rule, but it was his duty to make such arrangements as would be most conducive to the public service. In this particular case, all he (the Marquis of Hartington) could state was this:—at the termination of the mutiny in India it became necessary to establish some roster for the return of the regiments, and his Royal Highness in preparing it took into consideration the previous foreign active service of the regiments. Now, although the Queen's Bays had been amongst the first regiments sent out at the time of the mutiny, there were but a few months between the time of the sending out of the different regiments, and instead of being the first on the roster, the Queen's Bays came rather low down upon the list. No orders were ever sent out to recall the Queen's Bays. He believed, however, that when it was decided to reduce the cavalry force in India, the Commander-in-Chief in India gave notice to the Queen's Bays to hold themselves in readiness to return home. The roster, however, altered their position in the list, and they never received the order to return.

THE MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH CABLE.

Mr. CRAWFORD asked the Secretary to the Treasury if he could state the nature and extent of the injury sustained by the Malta and Alexandria telegraph cable; and whether it was true that some months would probably elapse before the line would be repaired so as to admit of the transmission of messages as heretofore?

Mr. F. PEEL replied that, according to the accounts which had been received by the Treasury, the injury to the telegraph wire occurred about seventy miles from Alexandria, in comparatively shallow water. The line was at present under lease, and the responsibility of repairing the injury rested with the lessees. Being unable to procure a suitable vessel in the Mediterranean, the parties had come to this country and hired a vessel, which was now being fitted up. She would leave England on Monday next, and should the weather be favourable they expected that the line would be in working order in about a month from the present time.

BRITISH RESIDENTS IN JAPAN.

Mr. B. COCHRANE asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether it was true that, while her Majesty's charge d'affaires in Spain has sent an ultimatum to the Japanese Government, declaring war if the reparation demanded for certain grievances is not granted, he had at the same time announced to the British residents at Yokshama that there was not a sufficient force at present in Japan to guarantee perfect safety to the foreign community in the event of an attack in force by the Japanese; and that the British residents at Yokshama were therefore individually advised to adopt such measures for their security as might be in their power, so as to be prepared for the contingency of hostilities being decided on.

Mr. LAYARD replied that every possible means would be adopted to afford protection to all British subjects in Japan in the event, which he trusted might be avoided, of war occurring. At the same time, in a scattered population like that of the British in Japan, it had been thought advisable that her Majesty's subjects there should be acquainted with the state of things, and communications had accordingly been made to them, warning them that war might arise, and advising them to take every means in their power for the safety of themselves and their property. He believed that this was a common precaution.

Mr. B. COCHRANE: That is not an answer to my question. Was it not stated to the inhabitants that there was not a sufficient force to protect them in the event of hostilities?

Mr. LAYARD: Of course it would be very difficult to protect individuals so much scattered about; and it was a precautionary measure to put them on their guard.

Colonel SYKES arose amid cries of "Order!" and was understood to address a question on the same subject to the hon. gentleman, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Mr. WHITE: Before the hon. gentleman replies, I wish to ask the hon. gentleman a question. (Cries of "Order!") It is in reference to Japan—"Order!"

Mr. DISRAELI said he considered it very important that a minister should be allowed to answer questions separately—(hear).

Mr. WHITE: My question has reference to Japan, and to the question put by the hon. gentleman. It was this. Whether, as we have had letters from Japan to the 30th of May, the Government has been informed that a further time has been given to the Japanese for replying to the British ultimatum? I have heard that ten days further have been given.

Mr. LAYARD: I am not aware that any such intimation has been received. I was at the Foreign-office an hour ago, and up to that time such information had not been received.

CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA.

Mr. ADAM asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention and that of the Supreme Government and other authorities in India had been directed to the present mode of selecting and training young men for the Indian civil service, and whether he would lay upon the table any correspondence or other papers relating to this subject.

Sir C. WOOD was understood to say that he was not at that moment prepared to give the information required by the hon. member.

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

Mr. E. BOUVIERE asked the Under-Secretary of State for War whether the additional memorandum presented to Parliament on the 1st of July last respecting the Mhow Court-martial was the only further memorandum which had been sent to the Commander-in-Chief in India on the subject; whether that memorandum was signed by the Adjutant-general; and, if not, whether a further memorandum, duly signed by that public officer, had not also been sent to the Commander-in-Chief in India, which could be laid upon the table of the House?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that after making every inquiry in his power, he had only to repeat the statement he had already made—that no memorandum whatever could be found that at all answered to the description given by the right hon. gentleman. A great deal of correspondence, some of which was private, had taken place between the Commander-in-Chief and the military authorities in India, and the right hon. gentleman would seem, from his repeated questions, to be aware of the existence of some memorandum or letter of the kind. If the right hon. gentleman would state the date of the letter, and describe more fully its subject, the correspondence could again be examined, and if any such letter should be found the War Department would then be able to say whether they could lay a copy of it on the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 14.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL.

Mr. A. MILLS called attention to the constitution of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, and moved an address to the Crown for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire and report whether any and what alterations may be advantageously adopted in the Home Government of India, as constituted by the Act the 21st and 22nd of Victoria, cap. 106. After explaining the constitution of the Council, he contended that, in practice, it had not fulfilled the purposes for which Parliament intended it; that the Secretary of State could withdraw certain questions from the consideration of his Council, rendering it uncertain where responsibility rested; and that, although he had no fault to find with the Secretary or his Council, it did not follow that the system had not inherent vices, and might not admit of revision and amendment. All he asked was for an inquiry.

The motion was seconded by Mr. BAZLEY.

Sir C. WOOD professed his inability to understand why this motion should have been brought forward. Mr. Mills acknowledged that he did not impute blame to him or to his Council, nor had he found fault with any particular measure. He had asked where responsibility rested. It rested with the Secretary of State for India. He thought the measure framed by his predecessor (Lord Stanley) was a very wise measure, and that there was not the slightest ground for inquiry.

Colonel SYKES objected to the despotic power lodged in the Secretary of State, and wished that increased power should be given to the Council.

Sir T. COLEBROOKE doubted whether an inquiry would result in strengthening the Council, and whether it would not take an opposite direction.

Lord STANLEY observed that the questions raised by Mr. Mills were not questions of detail, but of general policy; they were simply questions that might be debated in the House, and were not fit for investigation by a Royal Commission. He noticed some of the objections urged by Mr. Mills, which, he thought, had no ground for any inquiry.

After a few remarks by Mr. KINNAIRD and Sir H. WILLOUGHBY, the motion was withdrawn.

ARMY PRIZE PROPERTY.

Colonel NORTH moved an address to her Majesty to issue a Royal Commission to inquire into the realisation of army prize property and its mode of distribution, and to inquire into the cause of the delays which have in most cases occurred in its distribution to the captors, with a view to a remedy for the same. He gave examples of long delays in the distribution of prize money, and of payments, as he thought, unfairly made out of that fund.

Lord PALMERSTON said her Majesty's Government had no objection to the motion, being of opinion that an inquiry into the matter might be attended with advantageous results, both for the army and the navy.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE suggested that the inquiry might be extended to the devising of some remedy for the inconveniences suffered through the manner in which conflicting claims to booty were now dealt with.

Sir C. WOOD made some remarks upon the subject of the Banda and Kirwee prize money, which had been adverted to by Sir S. Northcote.

The motion was then agreed to.

CIVIL SERVANTS IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES OF INDIA.

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary for India

whether there was not considerable stagnation in the promotion of civil servants in the North-Western Provinces; and whether such stagnation might not probably arise from a disregard of the rules laid down in the resolution of the Governor-general in Council of the 21st of October, 1856, and of the understanding then entertained that the civilians of the North-Western Provinces would be eligible for the superior appointments in the Punjab and Oude.

Sir C. Wood was understood to say he had not been able to discover that the civil servants in the North-Western Provinces had any reason to complain, although he fully admitted that promotion had been less rapid than they might have expected. The matter was one, however, in which the Home Government of India did not interfere. The promotions took place under the direction of the Indian authorities.

NAVAL OFFICERS ON FOREIGN STATIONS.

Lord NAAS asked the Secretary to the Admiralty whether orders would be issued to naval officers on foreign stations forbidding them to attack the ports or ships of friendly Powers without a declaration of war or distinct instructions from the home Government. He put this question with special reference to the case of bombardment which had been brought under the notice of the House the other night.

Lord C. PAGET said that general orders were issued to naval officers on foreign stations to the effect that they were not justified in having recourse to any measures of violence without the sanction of the senior naval officer commanding the station. He had to state, with regard to the particular case referred to, that the Commander-in-Chief of the East India station, which included the Straits, had received instructions on no account to enter into hostilities, without the sanction of the Viceroy of India or the Governor of Bombay, except in the case where British life was involved. The most stringent instructions might be said to have been given to all naval officers on the Eastern station not to commit any act of hostility without the proper declaration of war, or such sanction as he had just stated—(hear, hear).

SANITARY CONDITION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Mr. CONINGHAM asked the Secretary for India whether it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to act upon the recommendations of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the sanitary condition of the army in India, and at once to introduce remedial measures for the prevention of diseases in hot or unhealthy climates, so as promptly to check the mortality by which, "besides deaths from natural causes, sixty head per thousand of our troops annually perish in India."

Sir C. Wood, who was very imperfectly heard, said that the attention of the Government of India had for some time been directed to the subject, and several improvements had been effected in the sanitary condition of the army. The report of the Commission, however, had brought to light a rate of mortality which, before its publication, no one believed to exist. The attention of the Indian Government should be directed to the report, and he had no doubt that measures would be taken to carry the recommendations of the Commission as far as possible into effect.

MEDALS FOR THE BENGAL ARTILLERY.

Mr. HUMBERTON asked the Secretary of State for India whether the medals for the 1st battalion of the Bengal Artillery, for their services with the Roorkee and Rohilcund force, under General Jones, were sent out to India in October, 1862; whether it was known at the India-office at the time the medals were sent out that Charles Fennah, of the 1st company of the above battalion of Artillery, had died on his passage to England on the 30th of September, 1859, and whether the medal to which he was entitled was with the others sent out to India in 1862; and when the medal to which Charles Fennah was entitled would be sent to his surviving relatives.

Sir C. Wood said that it was quite true that the medals for the 1st battalion of Bengal Artillery were sent out in 1862, and among them the medal intended for Charles Fennah, of the 1st company, was also sent out by inadvertence; but orders had been forwarded to the Governor-General back the medals of such members of the battalion as had died or had left India.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

The fourth annual report on railways in India for the year 1862-63, by J. Danvers, Esq., Government Director of the Indian Railway Companies, was issued yesterday. The report states that the progress made towards the completion of the lines has, upon the whole, been satisfactory. Seven hundred and forty-seven miles had, on the 31st December last, been added to the 1,009½ which were open for traffic on the 1st January, 1862. Since the beginning of the present year, 184 miles more have been finished, making a total of 2,540 miles, upon which passengers and goods are now being conveyed. The greatest distance traversed in a direct line without interruption is on the East Indian Railway, from Calcutta to Benares, a length of 540 miles; the next greatest is the transpeninsula line from Madras to Bepore, which is 405 miles; and the next from Bombay to Sholapore, across the Bhore Ghât, a length of 295 miles. Various works of great importance and magnitude occur on the lines which have been recently opened. In addition to the work done to enable 930 miles of new line to be opened, fair progress has been made on the unopened lines, and it is expected that in the course of the present year between six and seven hundred miles more will be ready for traffic.

The shipment of the iron and fuel, and of materials for the construction of the lines, for 1861, amounted to 182,621 tons, and cost £1,669,448; last year these respective amounts were 138,013 tons, and £1,487,582.

In the course of the past year there has been an expenditure of £5,810,852, that in England having been £1,854,289, and in India £3,956,563. The amount raised by the companies, in addition to the sum of £2,515,496, which stood to their credit on May 1, 1862, was £5,233,567, so that on May 1 there was a balance of £1,043,211 available for the current year's expenditure. It has been estimated that the expenditure for the year 1863-64 will be £2,012,000 in England, and £4,180,000 in India, and that £5,293,000 will be raised to meet it, in addition to the balance of £1,043,211. The amount which had been raised on the 30th April, 1862, by share capital, was £31,308,641, by debentures, £11,756,249; total, £43,064,890. On the 30th April last these amounts stood: Share capital, £36,155,244; debentures, £12,002,795; total, £48,218,039. Full details are given in the report relative to each undertaking separately, and to the traffic on each open line. In concluding his report, the Government Director says:—"The time is now approaching when the benefits of these great works will be sensibly felt. Not only have they already been the means of introducing into the country and of circulating amongst its labouring population many millions of money, but as the result of that outlay and labour they remain to bring forth abundant fruit for ages to come. In another year the great cotton fields of Central India and Guzerat will be in direct communication with Bombay, and Delhi will be within two days' reach of Calcutta."

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

The following copy of a memorandum of his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, on the Mhow court-martial, has just been presented to Parliament. The document is prefixed by a note intimating that the memorandum was sent privately to Sir H. Rose and Sir W. Mansfield:—

"Horse Guards, February, 1863.

"The Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has had under his consideration the letter addressed by General Sir Hugh Rose to the Adjutant-General, on the 20th ult., on the subject of the late court-martial in the 6th Dragoons. In reference to the observations contained in that document, and in others addressed to himself personally, his Royal Highness desires to assure Sir H. Rose and Sir William Mansfield that, in whatever respect he may have differed from the conclusions that may have arrived at, he is entirely convinced that they have both been actuated solely by the desire to do justice and to maintain the discipline of the troops submitted to their command. No doubt one of the chief mainstays of discipline is to be found in the support, by the superior officers, of officers in immediate command of regiments, where that support can be given with justice. The Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, therefore, fully appreciates the motives which led Sir Hugh Rose, Sir William Mansfield, and others to countenance Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley's conduct, as contrasted with those who have opposed him. In accepting the verdict of the court-martial against Paymaster Senales, his Royal Highness has proved to the army that an attempt to coerce a commanding officer can have but one termination, the ruin of those who attempt it. At the same time, it is absolutely necessary that it should be made evident that those attaining high and responsible positions, such as the command of a regiment of high reputation, should understand that they are to exercise their functions with discretion, and refrain from seeking to exalt themselves by a depreciation of those entrusted to their command. This lesson, his Royal Highness hopes, has now been learnt by Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley; and that he will in future, by firmness united with temper and discretion, prove himself worthy to command a regiment which his Royal Highness knows, by personal experience, to have been equal to any in her Majesty's service under former commanding officers. With respect to the long arrest of the non-commissioned officers, his Royal Highness sees no reason to alter his opinion of its impropriety, which is admitted by Sir William Mansfield, whilst he explains the cause. The case of Sergeant-Major Lilley will ever remain an unfortunate event. It is possible, perhaps probable, that he may have taken a portion of the liquor supplied for his wife; but there seems no proof that he did so to such an extent as to cause his death. His character for sobriety and correct conduct, previous to his arrest, seems to have been undoubted. In closing the correspondence on this painful subject, the Field Marshal desires to express a hope that the conduct of all parties in the Inniskilling Dragoons for the future may be such as to deserve the approbation of the general officers under whom they may be called on to serve, but should, unfortunately, what has passed not have been a sufficient warning to them, his Royal Highness will not hesitate to visit with his severe displeasure those who forget their duty in the pursuit of their private animosities."

MISCELLANEOUS.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM OF HYDERABAD.—According to the Deccan Herald the Nizam has secured the piping Bullfinch of the Great International Exhibition. His Highness is rather lavish in his expenditure on articles that were admired in the Exhibition. Mr. Hunt purchased for him a set of drawing-room furniture in walnut wood and gold for £2,000, and another of papier-mâché for £1,000, and a couple of telescopes for £400. A pair of prismatic mirrors from the eminent manufacturers of glass ware, J. Defries and Son, were purchased for his Highness for £1,250. J. Defries and Son were the manufacturers of the colossal crystal chandelier that was so much admired by the visitors to the Exhibition. Amongst other purchases for the Nizam was an iron house, which cost £3,000.

BANK OF HINDOSTAN, CHINA, AND JAPAN.—The first general meeting of the shareholders in the bank of Hindostan, China, and Japan (Limited), was held on Monday, 6th July, under the presidency of Mr. James Nugent Daniel, who regretted that at this early date in the career of the bank it was impossible to place before the meeting any complete statement of the accounts. Two branches had been already opened for business, one at Bombay and the other at Calcutta, and branches were about to be established under the most experienced managers at Hong Kong and Shanghai. The report stated that the deposits amounted to £450,000, but he was happy to say that the advances last received showed a considerable increase on that amount, and on the whole their bank enjoyed as full a share of public confidence as any of the oldest establishments, and nothing could be more satisfactory than their prospects. A shareholder having raised some objection to the payment of £4,000 to the promoter of the company, and that the remuneration of the board should have been fixed at £6,000 per annum, Mr. Daniel explained that the payment to the promoter was, when compared with that made to the promoters of other similar institutions, a small one, and in no way excessive, considering that the whole liability of the preliminary expenses up to the time of the allotment of the shares fell upon that gentleman. As regarded the other point, namely, the remuneration of the directors, it was perfectly true the articles of association allowed them to appropriate to themselves £6,000 per annum, but they had never thought of doing so, nor would they until the bank was paying a good dividend. This announcement was received with marked approbation, and the retiring directors and auditors having been re-elected, a special meeting was constituted, which, on the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Spooner, resolved to abrogate a clause in the deed of settlement, which allowed the board, under certain restrictions, to traffic in the shares of the company, the chairman explaining that it was the unanimous wish of himself and of his co-directors that they should not be entrusted with any authority which might be cavilled with.

MADAGASCAR.—PARIS, July 7.—The official report of the French Consul at Tamatave, dated May 15, explains that the cause of the political revolution in Madagascar was the rivalry between the nobles and Nenamaso. The young men who, at the accession of King Radama, took power and monopolised all favours, suggested to the King measures disapproved by the people. They were accused of injustice, of being open to corruption, and great immorality. Under their influence the King published a law authorising duels, and even combats of tribe against tribe, and village against village, without any other formality than the consent of the two parties; thus proclaiming civil war and furnishing a pretext for hostilities. The officers and principal inhabitants begged of the King to recall this law; he, however, refused, and the preparations for the conflict then began. The French Consul assembled all his fellow-countrymen, and the English Consul wished the Methodist Missionaries to take a similar course, but they did not respond to his invitation. The King having again refused to revoke the law, the people, slaves, and soldiers assembled in the public places to search for the thirty-three persons belonging to the King's Court who had been proscribed by the conspirators. Eleven were killed by the multitude. While this was going on negotiations were entered into with the King, who asked mercy for the unfortunate men remaining, who, he promised, should be exiled for life. This was refused by the conspirators, who demanded that the guilty should undergo perpetual im-sonment in chains. The King would not at first comply with this demand, but, after much parleying, ended by accepting it. The following day the King was assassinated, and the Council proclaimed Queen Robodo, announcing that the King, disconsolate at the loss of his friends, had committed suicide. The Queen accepted the Constitution, which stipulates among other things that she shall not drink strong liquors, and that the right over life and death belongs to the Council. It also abolishes the Tanquin, and maintains religious liberty. The Prime Minister informed M. Laborde that he had sent orders to the Governors on the coast to protect the whites.

INDIAN MILITARY FUND.—It has been ruled by the Directors of the Military Fund in India, that if an officer shall decline to subscribe and to make provision for his wife, in case of his death, without assigning any valid reason, the wife can herself continue the subscriptions, and insure all the advantages of the fund.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA EXTENSION RAILWAY.—It appears that the negotiations of the directors with the Secretary of State for India for obtaining the requisite concessions and subventions for the proposed extension line cannot be concluded without a reference to India, which will occupy at least three months. They have, however, been informed that the Secretary of State fully admits the importance of the line to Indore, and that he will authorise the Government of India to enter into an arrangement with the company without further reference to this country, upon the basis of the Government providing the necessary land, and making in addition a money payment per mile. The directors have decided in the meantime to return the deposits on presenting the receipts for them at the company's bankers.

EAST INDIA RAILWAY RETURNS.—By recent accounts from Calcutta, it appears that the returns on the East India railway for the preceding four weeks were at the rate of £1,024,400 a year. Allowing one-half this sum for working expenses, the sum returned by the railway to the public treasury will not fall short of £512,200 during the next twelve months. The whole amount of capital as yet expended by the East India Railway Company under the guarantee of the India Government is about £21,000,000, and it would therefore appear that nearly one-half this sum, or more than £10,000,000, is already released from the obligations of the guarantee.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA notified on Friday that he was desirous of raising £8,000,000 on India Four per Cent. stock to redeem Four per Cent. Debentures for £4,824,500 due October 8, 1863, and for £3,172,500 due April 8, 1864. The New Four per Cent. stock is to be redeemable in 1888. The debenture holders may have either registered stock or stock certificates. Unless they signify their assent to this proposal by the 3rd proximo, they will be paid off when their debentures arrive at maturity.

PLAYING AT SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Times:—"Sir,—I have a letter from Calcutta, dated the 28th of May, stating that the two batteries stationed at Barrackpore went into Calcutta (sixteen miles) for the Queen's birthday—a tedious march in fearfully hot weather. Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., who is acting for Lord Elgin during the latter's stay on the hills, reviewed the batteries and was 'much pleased' with them; but the trip to Calcutta cost them dear, as they lost two men from sun-stroke, and a dozen men were in hospital from the same cause; one of the men fell off the gun-limber dead. It was generally considered 'a great shame' sending the artillery up to Calcutta in such hot weather, but 'the head swells' insisted on it.—Yours, K. Y. Z."

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 30,000,000 rupees (£300,000) in bills on India took place yesterday (Wednesday) at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were, to Calcutta, 16,50,000 rupees; to Bombay, 12,00,000 rupees; to Madras, 1,50,000 rupees. The declared minimum price was, as before, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay and Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to 91 lacs. The tenders on Calcutta, at 1s. 11½d., receive about 26 per cent.; on Bombay, at 1s. 11½d., about 2½ per cent.; and all above these prices in full; on Madras all in full.

APPOINTMENTS.—(India-office, July 13.)—Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint Lieut.-Colonel R. L. Playfair, Royal Madras Artillery, to be her Majesty's Consul at Zanzibar; and Lieut.-Colonel H. F. Disbrowe, Bombay Staff Corps, to be her Majesty's Consul at Muscat.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

INDIA OFFICE, 9th July, 1863.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA in COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE, That he has received from the Government at Madras the under-mentioned SCHEDULES, viz.:

"Schedule of all sums of Money, Bonds, and other Securities, received by the Administrator-general, on account of each Estate remaining under his charge, together with the Payments made thereon, and the Balances. Prepared up to the 31st of December, 1862, under Section XXXIV. of Act. VIII. of 1855."

"Schedule of all Administrations whereof the final Balances have been paid to the persons entitled to the same, specifying the amount of such Balances and the persons to whom paid. Prepared from the 1st of July to the 31st of December, 1862, under Section XXXIV. of Act. VIII. of 1855."

"Schedule of all sums of Money, Bonds, and other Securities, received by the Administrator-general, on account of all Trusts, remaining under his charge, together with the Payments made thereon, and the Balances. Prepared up to the 31st of December, 1862, under Section XXXIV. of Act. VIII. of 1855."

"Schedule of all Trust Accounts whereof the final Balances have been paid to the persons entitled to the same, specifying the amount of such Balances, and the persons to whom paid. Prepared from 1st July to 31st December, 1862, under Section XXXIV. of Act. VIII. of 1855."

And that the said Schedules are open to the inspection of the public, in the Department of the Official Agent to the Administrators-general of India, at the India Office.

INDIA OFFICE, Victoria-street, Westminster, 10th July, 1863.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA in COUNCIL GIVES NOTICE, that he is desirous of RAISING A SUM of not exceeding £8,00,000 STERLING upon the security of "India Four per Cent. Stock," to enable him to redeem £4,824,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th October next, and £3,172,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th April, 1864.

The Stock to be created on 8th October, 1863, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, 22nd and 23rd Victoria, cap. 39, and to bear Interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly at the Bank of England, on 5th April and 10th October in each year.

The Stock not to be redeemable until 10th October, 1883, but to be redeemable at par on or after that day upon one year's previous notice having been given in the London Gazette, by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The books of the Stock will be kept at the Bank of England, where all assignments and transfers will be made. No stamp duties whatsoever will be charged on the transfers.

To facilitate the arrangements for the creation of the above-named "India Four per Cent. Stock," the Secretary of State for India in Council gives notice to the holders of the aforesaid £4,824,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th October next, and £3,172,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th April, 1864, that he is willing to grant in exchange for "India Four per Cent. Debentures" a like amount of "India Four per Cent. Stock" at par.

The Stock thus created may be registered in the books of the Bank of England, or at the option of the holders of Debentures they may receive, in exchange for their Debentures, "Stock Certificates" in lieu of Stock registered in their names.

The "Stock Certificates" to be payable to bearer, and to have coupons attached to them payable half-yearly on 5th April and 10th October in each year at the Bank of England, and to be for amounts of £100, £500, and £1,000.

On and after the 8th November next, all holders of the aforesaid "India Four per Cent. Stock," being registered in the books of the Bank of England, may at any time receive at the Bank of England "Stock Certificates" upon the transfer of a like amount of registered Stock, and upon payment of a fee of two shillings and sixpence per cent. upon the capital amount of "Stock Certificates" received in exchange for registered Stock; and in like manner holders of "Stock Certificates" shall, upon the delivery of such Certificates at the Bank of England, and upon payment of a fee of two shillings and sixpence upon each "Stock Certificate" so delivered up, be entitled to a like amount of "Stock" registered in the books of the Bank of England in such names as the holders shall direct.

The holders of India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th October next, and on 8th April, 1864, who are willing to accept "India Four per Cent. Stock" in exchange for such debentures, upon the terms above-mentioned, are hereby required to signify their assent by letter addressed to "The Accountant General, India Office, Victoria-street, Westminster," on or before the 3rd of August next, such letter to state the capital amount of "India Four per Cent. Debentures," together with the numbers and amounts thereof, to be exchanged for "India Four per Cent. Stock."

Holders of "India Four per Cent. Debentures" who do not signify their assent to accept "India Four per Cent. Stock" in exchange for such debentures, and upon the terms above-mentioned, on or before the 3rd of August next, will receive payment for their debentures at maturity upon presentation of the debentures at the Chief Cashier's Office, at the Bank of England, from which time all interest will cease.

Copies of this advertisement may be obtained at the Bank of England, and of Mr. Henry Scott, the Broker to the Secretary of State for India in Council, 16, The Grange-street, City. T. G. BARING.

THURSTON AND CO.,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS

TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, 14, CATHERINE STREET, STRAND, LONDON.

The great superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by this Firm is fully attested by the fact of their Tables having been patronised by Royalty since the reign of George III., during which period they have been honoured also by the patronage of the principal Nobility and Gentry of England, nearly 250 of Her Majesty's and the Native Regiments at home and abroad, and more than one hundred of the principal London, Provincial, and Foreign Clubs.

STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS, AFRICANS, and SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS.

At the ANNUAL MEETING of this Institution, held at WILLIS'S ROOMS, ST. JAMES'S, on the 1st JUNE, 1863, Sir T. POWELL BUXTON, Bart., in the Chair, succeeded by the Right Hon. Sir JOHN LAWRENCE, Bart., G.C.B., The Report of the operations carried on in 1862, having been read.

The first Resolution was moved by Captain WM. EASTWICK, and seconded by WM. JENKINS, Esq., Interpreter to the New Zealand Government:—

"That the Report now read be adopted, printed, and circulated; and that Captain the Hon. P. Maule, R.N., J. M. Strachan, Esq., Joseph Somes, Esq., M.P., T. B. Spence, Esq., Major H. Straith, and the Rev. Dr. Tidman, who go out of office by rotation, be elected Directors of this Institution, out of the list of twelve names submitted to this meeting. That Major-General Clarke and Henry Smith, Esq., be appointed Auditors for the ensuing year."

The second Resolution was moved by the Rev. THOMAS GASTYR, from India, and seconded by the Rev. E. H. CARR:—

"That this Meeting desires to express its gratitude to Almighty God for the large measure of success which has attended the efforts for the welfare of the Asiatic, African, and South Sea Islander, who is visiting the United Kingdom."

The third Resolution was moved by Captain ALFRED CHAPMAN, and seconded by Sir FREDERICK HALLIDAY, late Governor of Bengal:—

"The result of six years' labour having fully proved the great importance, value, and need of such an Institution, this Meeting regrets the inadequacy of its resources, and appeals to their friends to use their best endeavours to make known the object and advantages of the Home, and to procure for it more extensive sympathy and support."

Captain the Hon. F. MAULE, R.N., moved, and Major STRAITH seconded, a vote of thanks to the Chairman—Sir T. POWELL BUXTON, Bart., and to the Right Hon. Sir JOHN M. LAWRENCE, Bart., who succeeded him; and the Meeting was closed by singing the Duxology.

EXTRACT FROM REPORT.

"During the last six years upwards of 2,400 Asiatic, African, and Polynesian strangers have resided in the Home for periods from one week to three months. 1,357 beds have been provided and paid for by casual nightly lodgers, besides numerous cases of destitute gratuitously lodged and fed for a day or two; 372 destitute Asiatic and African mendicants have been taken off the streets of the Metropolis, together with 190 others sent or taken from workhouses or prisons, and provided with employment or a passage to their native country; cash also, and property to the value of upwards of £6,000 taken care of and returned to its owners on leaving England; and, above all, the Word of God set before hundreds of strangers in their own tongue. It is painful to contemplate the fate of many of these foreigners, and what would have been their report of Christian England on return to their native country, had there not been a home to receive and shelter them, and Christian friends to afford the aid they need."

The Institution was intended to be self-supporting, and would be so with an average of 65 inmates daily throughout the year; but while the number is below that average, and the debt of £5,000 unpaid, £1,100 is required annually to maintain it in efficient working order. Funds are, therefore, urgently needed for the current expenses, including Rates, Taxes, and Interest upon the Mortgage, which the Directors are most anxious to liquidate.

The undermentioned contributions have been received just before and since the meeting, and are thankfully acknowledged. The directors confidently trust their efforts to aid the helpless stranger will meet not only with approval, but with that aid and support, so greatly needed to carry on a work acknowledged by all acquainted with it as most useful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December 1862, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is secured, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unobtainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the month exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the month, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS

STEAM COMMUNICATION between LONDON and INDIA by the MAGNIFICENT FLEET of STEAMERS belonging to the EAST INDIA and LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY (Limited).

The well-known shipper Auxiliary Steamship CALCUTTA, 2,261 tons, 300-horse power, S. H. WRIGHT, Commanding, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 16th of JULY, embarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 10th of JULY, for CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. This magnificent ship, built expressly for the Indian trade, has been thoroughly fitted, has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardess.

The average passage of the last eight ships of this Company was seventy-one days to Madras; and this ship last season made the outward voyage in fifty-nine days, and the homeward in sixty-five days, being the shortest passages on record.

The line will be continued on the 20th of each succeeding month, with the strictest punctuality, by one of the Company's magnificent fleet of auxiliary screw steamships.

For freight or passage apply to GRINDLAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Broker, ALFRED BRETT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Mincing-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!

C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of second-hand Safes by those eminent fire-makers, Milner, Price, Morlan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

TENDER & DECAYED TEETH STOPPED with ANODYNE CEMENT, which instantly allays the most violent pain, and fills up cavities, however large, and answers where every other kind of stopping has failed. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Prince's Augusta and Duché of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from 11 till 4. No connection with any person practising in the same profession.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—Specially commended at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

For which a Prize Medal was awarded to the Producer at the International Exhibition, 1862.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Goats, Mosquitoes, Moths in furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying Fleas in their Dogs, as also Ladies for their Pet Dogs. It is perfectly harmless in its nature, and may be applied without any apprehension, as it has no qualities deleterious to animal life.

Sold in packets 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, or post free for 14 or 36 postage stamps, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

Take notice each genuine packet bears the above name and address. See "The Field," October 7th and 9th, pp. 263, 263, and 294.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alterative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incident to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invulnerable. "A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"I lately, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—YOUTH'S

FRIEND.—This excellent ointment is so innocent in its nature, so cooling in its properties, and so healing in its action, that it is invaluable in skin diseases, scald-head, tetter, tooth rash, chafings, and the many varieties of rashes and eruptions well known and deeply dreaded in the nursery. Trivial maladies may be met and conquered at their outset, and all future mischief overcome, before it has gained hold upon the constitution and endangered future health. Full directions are wrapped round each pot of ointment. Holloway's ointment may be applied with the best results in many diseases to which the sufferer silently submits, because the task of investigating them would be both difficult and delicate.

Now ready, price 6s., or by post, 6s. 6d.,

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THERE are complaints all over India of the excessive heat of the season, and a good deal of sickness has been caused by it.

The Governor-General and the Commander-in-Chief were still at Simla, enjoying the cool temperature of the air of the mountains.

The papers are full of varying reports as to where the Governor-General will next hold his Council. Some say it will be as usual in Calcutta, others say at Simla, others say Agra. The latter place is the favourite. It is well situated in some respects, and an unbroken rail communication will ere long connect it with Calcutta, Lahore, Bombay, and Madras.

Major-General Becher, C.B., was greeted on his arrival at Fort William on the 12th of June with a salute of eleven guns on his assuming the command of the Presidency Division.

Major-General Garvoch had arrived in India, and was to take command of the Peshawur Division.

The heat at Lucknow has been frightful, and cholera prevails there.

Surgeon Barker, of her Majesty's 90th Light Infantry, committed suicide at Meerut on June 9th.

Another suicide took place in Peshawur early in June last. Mr. W. R. Lewey, agent to the Punjab Bank, Limited, killed himself by discharging a pistol into his mouth. The bullet passed through his head, and was followed by instantaneous death. A disappointment in love was the cause of this dreadful act.

The Hon. Rustomjee Jamssetjee has promised to give one lac of rupees, and Cowsetjee Furdoujee Parukh fifty thousand, for the encouragement of education at Guzerat. These Parsees are truly liberal people, and put all Hindoo liberality to shame, for when natives of Bengal are lavish, their money is too often spent on a silly nautch, or distributed in such small sums to countless idle beggars as disappear in a few hours.

The Englishman stated that cholera had broken out at Rangoon. Captain Hagen and Surgeon Sparrow, 60th Rifles, and between thirty and forty men, had fallen victims to the disease. Major Fraser had died, but not of cholera.

In a large batch of Chinese coolies shipped on board the Venc-on at Macao for Singapore, one hundred and fifty died of thirst and hunger. When one of the poor wretches asked the mate for water, that sea-monster threw a log of wood at his head and cut it open. The poor fellow died of the blow a few days after.

There was a sad accident on the East Indian Railway at Peer Pointee. An English fireman, one native passenger, and a child were killed, and another native had his leg broken. "The poor fireman," says the Hurkaru, "was caught between the engine and the tender and held there, until he could be literally chiselled out, the scalding water from the boiler having meanwhile rained upon him in torrents."

There is a report that Lieut. Jackson, sentenced to four years' imprisonment for beating a native servant to death, has a chance of escape, on account of some irregularities in the court-martial which tried him.

The ship Boyne, of 700 tons, which left Bombay for Aden with more than 400 pilgrims, is reported to be a total wreck, with great loss of life.

His Highness the Maharajah of Gwalior has visited Lucknow and Cawnpore in great state.

The Upper Provinces have been visited by vast flights of locusts, which, alighting on fruitful fields, have left them leafless deserts.

The Bishop of Calcutta's Diocesan Board of Education scheme is likely to be well supported. The Viceroy heads the subscription list with a thousand rupees.

The King of Burmah is evincing most cordial feeling towards the British, and doing all he can to encourage the introduction of foreign trade into his country and the advent of English settlers. He has just entrusted Captain Parry with several boxes of valuable presents to the Governor-general at Simla. The treaty negotiated by Colonel Phayre is now in full operation.

Sir Frederick Halliday, when Governor of Bengal, informed the natives that the Government were far from desiring them to subscribe to any public work of utility except on their own spontaneous impulses, and that Government would not show any favour towards donors. This was surely a very needless warning, and a very foolish one. The Government of Madras is acting on a very different principle, and is indignantly complaining, in a general order published in the Official Gazette, of the want of liberality of the natives. The Governor had expected that on the establishment of every new civil dispensary the wealthier natives in the neighbourhood would have contributed at least half the expense, as these charitable institutions were established solely for the relief of their poorer countrymen. The native inhabitants of districts where civil dispensaries are established for the sick poor are now given "distinctly to understand that, while the Government will continue to supply medical aid and medicines, they expect the local public to provide the necessary funds for food and clothing, and that if this is not done, the dispensaries will be closed altogether." We hope this order will have the effect of shaming the rich natives into some exhibition of that charitable feeling for the poor, and sick, and helpless for which they have enjoyed a national reputation, not always well founded.

The Englishman tells us that the "Great Shoe Question" is once more revived, and is agitating the Rajahs, and Nawabs, and Governor-general's agents, commissioners, judges, collectors, princes, and chieftains. Much is to be urged on both sides of this vexed question. For our own parts we have always thought that the natives had no more right to expect the Feringhee to give up his national customs, than the Feringhee has to expect a similar concession on the part of the Hindu or Mahomedan. If no disrespect is indicated or intended by a European when he enters a room of state with his shoes on, why should his doing so be objected to by the natives? The Europeans think it a mark of great disrespect to sit in the presence of superiors, or even equals, in private rooms with their heads covered, and yet we do not ask a native to take off his turban in our presence, because we know he means no disrespect by keeping it on, neither do we mean any disrespect to him by keeping on our shoes. It is our custom, just as keeping on the puggree is his custom. We ought to make reciprocal concessions in these matters.

It would be an insult to a native of high rank for an Englishman to wear his hat on in his presence. Why is it not an insult to an Englishman for a native to wear his shoes in his presence, when he would shuffle them off at once in the presence of his own countrymen of consequence and position? The implied intention and the national custom of both parties are to be fairly considered. The long-vexed question is to be referred to the Viceroy at Simla.

We read in the Bombay Gazette:—"The Bhootias have again come down upon Assam. The belief is universal in Bengal and the North-West that it is the Nana Sahib who is instigating them. With the Bhootia raid is connected a rumour of a new mutiny in the North-West. There seems a prospect of another 'little war' with this frontier tribe."

We have given, in another part of our paper, a report of a rather singular action brought against Mr. Anley, an attorney of the High Court, by the ex-Premier Minister of the ex-King of Oude. We are sorry that our own countryman does not appear to much advantage in the affair. Sir Mordaunt Wells, of the High Court, very severely condemned the conduct of Mr. Anley.

Our readers will learn with profound regret that Field Marshal Lord Clyde, G.C.B., K.S.I., died yesterday afternoon. His disease, we believe, was atrophy. The Duke of Wellington, in 1810, complained of the neglect of Colin Campbell at the Horse Guards. He said he was "the only officer in whose behalf he had ever interested himself personally." Lord Clyde's Indian career commenced in 1844, when he led the 39th at Maharajpore. On the 3rd of July, 1857, he was Commander-in-Chief of the Indian army. He was created a peer August 16, 1858. It is expected that his remains will be interred in Westminster Abbey, with public honours.

OFFICERS' PASSAGE-MONEY.

Sir Charles Wood has pounced down upon the system of passage-money to Europe for military officers, and ordered its dissolution, substituting government agency for the hitherto allowed privilege of individual action, in agreeing and paying for passages by sailing vessels round the Cape. Hitherto a Lieutenant going home by that route drew from the Government the sum of Rs. 1,200, with which to pay for his passage, and then made his own arrangements with the agents or the captain of a ship; in many cases, as Sir Charles Wood has discovered, getting a passage for Rs. 800 or Rs. 900, and pocketing, or turning to other account, the difference. Sir Charles Wood's order stops all this, and decrees that, for the future, no issue of passage-money shall be made to any officer going to Europe round the Cape, but that the Deputy Quartermaster General of the army, at the Presidency, shall take, and arrange and pay for, all passages, on the most advantageous terms for the Government, and that officers shall travel by the ship which that functionary shall select. As often happens, the liberty of action in these matters has been lost by an absurd claim having called attention to the system and caused its wholesale abolition, instead of partial reform. When Lieutenant Colonel Milman, of H.M.'s 37th Regiment, was commanding the Bareilly Brigade, a few years ago, his regiment left for England; and on its departure he left his brigade command, came down to the Presidency, and went home overland. Had he gone with his regiment the Government would have paid the agents of the ship on which he took passage the sum of Rs. 1,700, the passage-money of his rank, and for this sum he drew upon the Government here; but it was refused, and Rs. 1,100 were granted him to pay his way home. This, as every one knows, is the price of an overland passage to England by the P. & O. Company's steamers; and having gone overland, it was, in our opinion, absurd of Colonel Milman to expect that the Government would make him a present of Rs. 600, the difference between his overland passage and the Government's passage round the Cape. He did not, and would not, however, see the matter in this light, but demanded the difference from the Government, and so that matter and the entire passage-money system came under the notice of Sir Charles Wood, who wrote out to India, demanding accurate information regarding the manner in which payments for passage-money were arranged by this Government, with the result given above. We are sorry that the Government should have interfered with private choice and action in the matter of these passages round the Cape. Such a passage is a frightful ordeal to a landsman, unless he ought not to have been a landsman and has a partiality for ships and the sea; and the only alleviation of the miseries of that ordeal that we can imagine is the advantage of travelling in a ship of one's own choice and with a captain and officers with whom one is either acquainted before sailing, or whose acquaintance and association one has reason to know will be agreeable during the voyage. There are many such captains and officers sailing from this port; there are also many of a very different stamp, and we must say that we think there is something very objectionable in the deputy quartermaster-general, or any other officer, engaging a passage in a ship for an officer, "on the most advantageous terms for the Government," and sending the said officer, perhaps seriously ill, into a strange ship, with accommodation which he has not chosen, and amongst strangers whom he has never heard of before, and with whom, perhaps, he may find it disagreeable, or impossible to associate. Sir Charles Wood has over-legislated in this matter. The proper course lay half-way—to let the officer choose the ship in which he would go round the Cape, and then let the Government come to an agreement with the agents of the ship for the passage-money, which, being always, for a subaltern, under Rs. 1,200, the surplus in that sum, after paying for the passage, would be saved to the State. Unless the Deputy Quartermaster General of the Army acts very considerably, and somewhat liberally, there will to a certainty be some very miserable passages round the Cape under Sir Charles Wood's new system.—Englishman, June 3.

THE BENGALLEE.

Baboo Tran Nauth Chatterjee is a bold man and an outspoken one. He says more severe things of his own countrymen than almost any English writer would care to do. "In this country," he tells us, "forgeries and perjuries are commonly committed; but how, and by what sort of men I would refrain from mentioning, as such a step would not be prudent." The Baboo's courage, it will be seen, is tempered by discretion. In another place, he charges his compatriots with being "hypocrites of the first water," and "quite expert in making large promises," but "all talk and no action." He asks if it "is not a matter of pity that one single individual may be the husband of fifty or a hundred wives?" We quite agree with him. The poor wretch is very much to be pitied. Half-a-dozen wives ought to be enough for any man, and even these had better be taken singly. The Baboo, however, has not yet done with lashing his fellow countrymen. "The educated native," he says, "instead of copying the virtues of respectable Europeans, has imitated the vices of the low and degraded amongst them. He has unfortunately become a hard drinker; and never, in fact, was drinking more prevalent in this country than now." And "drunkenness is not the only vice of a young Bengal, he has contracted other vicious habits besides." These defects are very justly attributed to "the entire want of moral training in Government schools and colleges," and to the absence of female education. Ignorant and degraded mothers can only produce an ignorant and degraded offspring. The moral regeneration of a fallen race must be worked out by its women, and if they are without knowledge and good morals how shall they bring up their children aright. Early marriages are also denounced by the worthy Baboo as injurious to "health of body, and health of soul." In olden times, he goes on to say, when India was ruled by Hindoo Kings, "anything which proved injurious to the health, morals, and religion of the country was removed by the regal power," and their example, he thinks, ought to be followed by the British Government. As to our notions of religious toleration, they can hardly stand in the way, for do we not "kill cows and hang the Brahmins, which are acts strictly prohibited by the Shasters?" In another place, indeed, the Baboo tells us that laws can hardly be just, "unless framed on Parliamentary principles." If by Parliamentary he means representative, it is not easy to reconcile with this dictum his commendation of despotic edicts, for the introduction of "reforms social, moral, physical, and even religious." We gladly welcome, however, every tentative effort on the part of our native fellow-subjects to advance in the path of civilisation, and Baboo Tran Nauth Chatterjee is entitled to considerable praise for his courage in exposing abuses, and for the calm and temperate manner in which he expresses his opinions. His suggestions may, in some instances, be crude and impracticable, but they are evidently based on honest convictions.—Bengal Hurkaru, June 12.

IRAN.

Hardly has the death of the besieged ruler of Herat given a prospect of temporary peace in Afghanistan when Persian intrigue and ambition, which were the real cause of the Herat war, break out on the Mekran coast. Not only was the Shah advised to prevent us from laying the Enphrates Valley line of telegraph through a corner of his territory, with a branch to Teheran, but he now lays claim to Gwadar, the only port on the Mekran coast, and the head-quarters of our telegraph works. Gwadar belongs to either the Khan of Khelat or the Imaun of Muscat, both in subsidiary alliance with us. We look for trouble from Persia. From the tone of the Paris official press we believe French intrigue to be more or less directly its cause.

Iran is probably the original seat of the human race, most certainly the home of its finest specimens—the Aryans. It consists of a plateau enclosed within mountain ranges, and occupies one-twelfth of the whole continent of Asia, or 1,200,000 square miles. Of this, modern Persia forms the western half, covering an area twice that of France. The eastern portion is divided between Afghanistan and Beloochistan. Knowing how, both geographically and politically, Persia is exposed to the influences of Russia and France, it has ever been our policy, by alliances, subsidies, political agents, and even—on one humiliating occasion—war, so to strengthen Afghanistan and Beloochistan as to make them breakwaters on which all Russo-French influences such as flow through Persia might vainly beat. These influences were realities in the days of the first Napoleon, and for a quarter of a century after Waterloo. Our boundary then was only the Sutlej, to which the Paris journals would again confine us. The natives of India then dreamed of an invader from the Dooranee Empire, the successor of Ahmed Shah, Nadir Shah and Timur, who would drive the English back to their ships. The Khalsa was a confederacy useless as allies but dangerous as enemies, for Runjeet Singh was only dreaming of power. Sind was not ours. Our hold on Delhi was, in native eyes, temporary. The Mahrattas still hoped to gain the ascendancy. Lord Wellesley had done much, but still more remained to be accomplished. Had Sir John Hobhouse and Lord Auckland followed the advice of the noble Burnes, we should have been spared the horrors of the Cabul campaign, and Afghanistan as well as Beloochistan would have become so firmly our friends, while Persia and the Shah's Russo-French advisers would have been so restrained, that all the subsequent Persian and Herat squabbles would have been prevented.

But by our opposition to the brave Ameer of Cabul, and our attacks on the Khan of Khelat, we effectually played into the hands of Persia, while the brief war of 1856 would be described as ludicrous in its results were it not that Providence thus placed an army at hand to quell the Indian revolt of 1857. Persia put its creature Sooltan Jan on the gubdee of Herat, and pretended that that city was neutral, while its ruler was as much a feudatory of the Shah as the Maharajah of Cashmere is of the Viceroy of India. Now that it seems likely the Ameer will incorporate it in his dominions before his death, the Shah renews his attempts to annex some of the territories of Beloochistan. Fortunately nothing can be clearer, even in Asiatic eyes, than the iniquity of this claim. If it rested on the authority of that very old document, the Book of Esther, which asserts that Ahasuerus or Artaxerxes Longimanus reigned over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces "from India even into Ethiopia" we could understand it, for Beloochistan was undoubtedly one of these provinces. But our claim to it would be sounder, for it was, with no less certainty, a part of the empire of Akbar, whose successor we are. Since Alexander the Great extinguished the Persian empire, the Seleucide, Arsacide, and Sassanide have all in time succeeded and been followed by the short-lived Soffarian and Tartar Samanides dynasties, by Genghis Khan, Timur, and their descendants, till the Shah Turkomans reigned from 1502 till 1736. But in the latter year Nadir Shah put an end to this Sefi family, and after nearly half a century of anarchy, during which Russia was by no means idle, Aga Mahomed Khan, in 1795, founded the reigning Kajar dynasty and made Teheran his capital. Succeeded by his nephew, that nephew's grandson, Shah Mahomed, now reigns. It was Nadir Shah who bestowed Beloochistan on the family which has ever since administered it, just as the rise of the Dooranee power in Herat and Afghanistan is due to the confusion which followed on Nadir Shah's assassination. The ruler of Khelat holds Beloochistan by a title anterior to that which guarantees Persia to the Kajar family.

Nadir Shah conferred Beloochistan on the great grandfather of the present Khan, but his feudatories on the Mekran coast have always shown a tendency to complete independence, and of this Persia has taken advantage. In the last war the Shah's troops advanced from Bunpoor and took possession of the provinces of Sibb and Jalk. When Colonel Green was sent to Khelat as political agent, he induced the young Khan to assert his right to all his frontier provinces, especially Kedz and Punjoor, since the Persians had advanced to within a few marches of them. Once in possession of these districts the Shah could threaten Sind, and shut up the caravan road from Afghanistan to Kurrachee. The Persian force at Bunpoor consisted in 1860 of 1,200 men and 12 guns, under a Sertip, with outposts at Jalk and Sibb. The port of Gwadur, to which the Shah now lays claim, is held by the Imaun of Muscat, whose disputes with his brother in Zanzibar Lord Canning lately settled, and to whom the Commissioner of Sind has just been sent on a mission. Persia may rest assured that she will not be allowed by us to interfere with one stone belonging to Herat, Afghanistan, or Beloochistan. Their independence is essential to our security. Some of the many competitors for power on the Ameer's death will doubtless apply to the Shah for assistance, and we should not be astonished if the imbecile Khan of Khelat should invite the Shah to seat him again in his capital. But the moment Persia violates the neutrality imposed on her by the late treaty, no matter at whose suggestion, she must prepare to be resisted by us in a manner much more serious than the last war may lead her to expect. Her claim to Gwadur is too ludicrous to require further discussion. Iran had once an historical meaning in the same manner and at the same time as the Roman Empire. Henceforth, as since the days of Nadir Shah, it is only a geographical and ethnological term.—Friend of India.

"POMPEY AND CÆSAR VERY MUCH ALIKE—SPECIALLY POMPEY."

The Delhi Gazette quotes a little article from the Lahore Chronicle, on the gullibility of the British public. The Lahore editor alludes to the fact that the portrait of Joteepersad once did duty for the Nana Sahib. Perhaps it may not be uninteresting to many of our readers to hear how this came about. We were called upon in London by a personal friend, the late Mr. Ingram, the proprietor of the Illustrated London News, who asked us if we could put him in the way of getting a portrait or sketch of "the fiend of Cawnpore." Pointing to a good-sized portrait in oils, and a life-like likeness of Joteepersad, taken by Mr. Roods, we were asked, "Who is that?" We told him it was the likeness of the great contractor in India. "By Jove," he exclaimed, "could it not do duty for the Nana?" We were tickled with the suggestion, and responded, "Well, it might in this country." "That is all we want," said Ingram, "will you lend me that picture?" "By all means," said we, and within a week the Allah's likeness was all over the United Kingdom, and shipped to every part of the civilised world. It was supposed to be the Nana holding a durbar. There was the sword, the nosegay, the gold slippers in the foreground, and magnificent hookah on one side. We assured Mr. Ingram that there were never two men so dissimilar in appearance and disposition as the Nana and the Allah. But we were again met with—"Oh, it does not signify. It is a splendid picture of a great native, and will make a magnificent engraving." And so it did; for it attracted the attention of Madame Tussaud, who paid a visit to Ingram, and asked if her "artists in wax-work" would be allowed to see the oil painting. The old lady was referred to the writer of this article. She came, with her son. (She must have been a very handsome woman in her youth and prime; but time had bereft her of her charms, by extracting her teeth, and imparting to her hair a dingy grey colour. There was still a lustre, as well as a speculation, in her eyes, and a pleasing vivacity, which made us feel that we could deny her nothing in the shape of the favour she came to crave.) Madame Tussaud admired the oil painting immensely, and she asked us what we would take for it. We replied that we should just as soon think of "selling" the original of the picture as the picture itself, inasmuch as he was a very great friend of ours. She then asked us, in a cracked voice, but which must once have been as silvery as the hand-bell of a duchess, would we lend it to her? Of course we lent it to her. Her piercing eyes then beheld some silver surpusses, some gold moonaks, &c., &c. These also the proprietress of Napoleon's carriage wanted to buy; but we told her we could not sell them, any more than we could the picture. Price was no object, she remarked. We shook our heads. Would we lend them to her? Of course we did. The picture and other matters she took away with her in her carriage. A fortnight afterwards, the picture, &c., &c., were returned, accompanied by fifty free tickets; and on the following morning we read in the Times of "the great attraction in Baker-street." It was an attraction, and out of curiosity we were attracted to go and see our own "Nana," in wax. When we saw him, it was with the greatest difficulty we refrained from the most immoderate and boisterous laughter. Where do our readers suppose he was placed? Amongst all the desperate murderers of the present century, in "the Chamber of Horrors!" The concourse of persons, who had each paid the 6d. extra, was composed of all classes of the London community—from the highest to the lowest, and their respective remarks were entertaining to the last degree. One lady said—"How wonderful that a man of such a gentle, kind, and generous expression of face should be such a ruthless and cruel murderer!" Another said, "Anyone could see that he was a treacherous, blood-thirsty villain. Just look at his eyes. They are diabolical! He ought, if caught, to be burnt alive." The Court Journal said, and truly, that the Royal family had paid a morning visit to the Exhibition, in order to see "the Nana," and at the time we could not help uttering to ourselves a hope that they were very much gratified.

Anything more beautifully executed than is the wax-work figure to which we allude, we have never seen. There is no one who can relish this true story of "gullibility" then did Joteepersad himself when we told it to him. We had not, and have not any qualms of conscience for the part we took in this affair; for we virtually gratified a nation's curiosity, and that is no mean thing to be proud of.

PRIME MINISTER OF THE KING OF OUDE AND AN ENGLISH ATTORNEY.

(Before Sir M. L. Wells, Kt.)

Madarod Dowlah Nawab Syed Ally Nuckee Khan Bahadoor v. William Anley.

Mr. Bell and Mr. Reid for the plaintiff; Mr. Paul for the defendant.

The plaintiff in this case was the celebrated Ally Nuckee Khan, formerly Prime Minister of the King of Oude. The defendant was Mr. William Anley, one of the attorneys of the High Court. The circumstances were as follows. It appears that one Womeschunder Roy, wishing to borrow Rs. 32,000, applied to Mr. Anley, who introduced him to the plaintiff, who consented to lend the sum required on the understanding that the defendant would have the money secured to him by a bond and judgment warrant. The bond was executed, but Mr. Anley neglected to have it stamped, and the consequence was that the plaintiff could not prosecute his claim against Womeschunder Roy without paying the penalty for neglecting to affix a stamp. This penalty he had paid, amounting to Rs. 2,100, and now sued the defendant, William Anley, to recover that amount.

Mr. Bell called the Nawab's agent.

Peter Mosely: I am manager of Ally Nuckee Khan. I remember a loan being made to Womeschunder Roy, for which a bond was given. I asked Mr. Anley for that bond. He read it to me and said that the warrant to confess judgment had not been written, but that when it was he would give it to me. I saw Mr. Anley on a subsequent occasion, but he would not give me the bond. I first discovered that the bond was not stamped three or four months after it was executed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Paul: I am the law agent of the plaintiff. I know that the Stamp Act came into operation on the 1st October, 1860. I bought the Stamp Act about four months after. I had discovered that the bond was unstamped. I told the Nawab that the bond was unstamped about four or five months after the 1st of October. The Nawab told me to tell Mr. Anley to get it stamped. I am sure that I saw Mr. Anley at Chandernagore. The reason why the Nawab wanted the bond was because he wished to keep it himself.

Re-examined by Mr. Bell: I am not the law agent of the Nawab. I am the agent. I collect his rents. I do no business in court for him.

Mr. Bell, on the part of the plaintiff, put in the evidence of Mr. Anley, in the case of the present plaintiff against Womeschunder Roy, for the sum of Rs. 32,000, also the bond.

Mr. Paul said in behalf of his client, that he should not for a moment contend that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything. There had been negligence on the part of his client in not getting the document stamped. He should confine his attention to the amount of damages. The plaintiff had no doubt been compelled to pay the sum of Rs. 2,100 before he could bring the action against Womeschunder Roy. It did not, however, follow that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to pay the whole amount. According to the evidence, the plaintiff's attention was drawn to the fact of the bond not being stamped before the expiration of six months from its execution, and if the plaintiff had then had the bond stamped he would have had much less to pay. The whole question depends upon the time in which the breach of duty took place. Was the plaintiff compelled to pay the Rs. 2,100 solely on account of defendant's negligence, or on account of his own negligence, and that of the defendant combined. If his Lordship thought the latter, Rs. 400 was the utmost that could be claimed.

Mr. Justice Wells said: The plaint in this case is that the defendant was employed by the plaintiff as his attorney for the purpose of drawing a bond, and that it was the duty of the defendant to have the bond properly stamped, but that the defendant neglected so to do, whereby the plaintiff was compelled to pay the sum of Rs. 2,100 for the purpose of stamping the bond, in order to be able to bring an action against Womeschunder Roy. A representation was made to the plaintiff in this action that if he would make the advance Womeschunder Roy would give a bond. Mr. Anley was then acting, and continued to act on behalf of the plaintiff, although he was also acting for Womeschunder Roy. The parties were satisfied, and it was proposed that Mr. Anley should prepare a bond. On the 1st of October, 1860, Act XXXVI. came into operation, and Mr. Anley as an attorney of this court ought to have been acquainted with its contents long before. If necessary I should fix Mr. Anley with knowledge of this Act, even prior to its coming into force, because it is especially necessary that attorneys should be well acquainted with the Stamp Laws. Now, it has been allowed on all sides that Mr. Anley did not stamp the bond. Mr. Anley says that the reason of this was "that it was done in a great hurry." I cannot understand what Mr. Anley means by this. Therefore, upon Mr. Anley's own evidence, there is the clearest admission of gross negligence on his part. Now Mr. Anley, acting as attorney for the plaintiff, kept the bond in his possession. Mr. Mosely went to Mr. Anley respecting the bond, and it does not appear that Mr. Mosely came to the knowledge that the bond was not stamped till four months after its execution. Mr. Anley either did not intend to have the bond stamped at all, or was unaware as to whether it had been stamped or not. Mr. Mosely told the plaintiff that the bond had not been stamped, and as soon as the communication had been made, Mr. Mosely, by the instructions of the plaintiff, went to Mr. Anley and spoke to him respecting the matter. Mr. Anley did not say, "I will give you the bond, and the best thing will be for you to get it stamped and pay the penalty." He seems not to have taken the slightest notice of the matter. My opinion is that Mr. Anley never intended to have that bond stamped. Mr. Mosely went again and again, but was unable to obtain any satisfaction. Now Mr. Paul says that the circumstance of the bond not having been stamped came to the knowledge of the plaintiff four months after execution, and that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover more than he would have had to pay if he had had it stamped at that time. But Mr. Anley took upon himself to get the document stamped, and therefore these arguments do not apply. If a client places himself in the hands of an attorney, he places himself in his hands in regard to all matters having connection with the suit, and the attorney must be held liable for any negligence, even though the client do not take prompt action in the matter. If the case fell far short of the facts in the present instance, I should feel it my duty to decide against Mr. Anley. As regards the alleged negligence, the present action is quite undefended. I am sorry to say that I do not think that Mr. Anley ever intended to have the bond stamped, and I am of opinion that the negligence in this case is so clear and so palpable that I can feel no sympathy whatever with Mr. Anley. I think that his conduct has been extremely bad, and I unhesitatingly give a decree for the full amount claimed, with 6 per cent. interest and costs from the date of the filing of the plaint.

BENGAL MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

On the 27th of May the following gentlemen assembled at the house of Dr. Goodeve Chuckerbutty, for the purpose of forming a Bengal medical association:—

Dr. Fayer, Dr. Chevers, Mr. Partridge, Mr. Shireore, Dr. Phin Smith, Dr. Mohindrolal Sircar, Dr. Juggobundo Bose, Baboo Nilmadub Mookerjee, Baboo Ramnarain Doss, Mr. Tameez Khan, Baboo Shib Chunder Bysack, Baboo Nilmadub Holdar, Baboo Permandundo Sett, Baboo Brojonath; Bundoo, Baboo Bissonath Goopto, Baboo Brojonath Karforma, Baboo Beepinbehary Bose, Baboo Kaneylal Dey, Baboo Soorjee Coomar Surbadhicary, Baboo Kaneylal Sen, Radhapersad Sett, Bhoobun Mohun Sircar, Nityanundo Nundy, Luckhynarain Bose, Romun Chunder Sadoo, Dr. S. G. Chuckerbutty, Baboo Moneylall Dutt, Odhur Chunder Doss, Dwarkanath Goopto, Omesh Chunder Dutt, and Dr. Solomon. Of the following gentlemen, who had signified their willingness to be present, several sent in message regretting their absence on account of business, viz.: Dr. Bourne, Dr. Macnamara, Baboo Prosonoomar Mitter, Dr. Robson, Baboo Shibchunder Kurmoker, Ram Soonder Ghose, Ram Chunder Sen, Buddynauth Bromo, Grish Chunder Paulit, Nilmadub Sen, Raj Chunder Dutt.

The chair was taken by Dr. Norman Chevers, and after a somewhat rhetorical address on the duties and obligations of the medical profession, Dr. Chuckerbutty moved, and Dr. Fayer seconded, the following resolution:—"That this meeting form itself into the 'Bengal Medical Association,' of which every qualified practitioner of medicine is eligible to be a member."

The second resolution was moved by Mr. Shireore and seconded by Baboo Kaneylal Dey, the latter gentleman rather oddly supporting a proposition to pay a compliment to himself:—"That the following gentlemen be nominated members of a Provisional Committee to draw up the rules for the conduct of business, and also to request the British Medical Association to allow this Association to be one of its branches:—Dr. Joseph Fayer, Dr. S. G. Chuckerbutty, Dr. Mohindrolal Sircar, Dr. Juggobundo Bose, Baboo Kaneylal Dey, Mr. Tameez Kahn."

The third resolution, to the effect that Dr. S. G. Chuckerbutty should be appointed chairman of the Provisional Committee, was rather gracefully proposed by Dr. Mohindrolal Sircar, and seconded by Baboo Nilmadub Mookerjee.

The fourth resolution,

"That so soon as their report is ready, the Provisional Committee be empowered to call a general meeting of the association to which that report is to be submitted for consideration, and on its being received and adopted, the association shall at once proceed to elect its office-bearers for the current year, who are to be charged with its future business."

The fifth resolution comprised the customary vote of thanks to the chairman, which is usually held to close the proceedings of a meeting, but Dr. Chuckerbutty, unexhausted by his previous exertions, had something more to say. "The artist," he observed, "when he sends out his great picture, the sculptor when he sells his statue, is not satisfied to know that silver rings on his palm, and that his pocket is heavy with yellow dross. The first desire of these men is that their works may have a world-wide fame. Medical professors have this feeling perhaps in a higher development." We are sorry to differ from Dr. Chuckerbutty on a question pertaining to his own profession, but we venture to affirm that medical men, who are craving after a world-wide fame, are very apt to neglect their every-day duties. Their highest and noblest ambition should be simply to relieve pain and suffering, and to prolong life so far as human skill will avail them. Fame, to be worth having, must come of itself and unsought, and will certainly never be attained by those who are always thinking what the world will say of them. A thoroughly true and earnest man does with all his might whatever he has to do, but only because such is his obvious duty. But, as a Duke of Buckingham once wrote—

"Fame bears no fruit till the vain planter dies."

We wish all success, however, to the Bengal Medical Association, and sincerely hope that it may have the effect of raising the tone of professional feeling in this country, if it be true, as Dr. Chuckerbutty asserts, that it is not of the highest order. In his own experience, he says, he has not unfrequently met with breaches of etiquette. "To speak ill of others," he adds, "seems to be stock-in-trade with some persons, whereby they hope to serve their own selfish ends. This seems to be the case with certain ex-students of our Medical College; nor is the evil unknown even among men of a higher grade, who surely should know better." This is bad news for the sick. Evil speaking is but a sorry stock-in-trade in any profession, but in the Medical one it is rather worse than none at all. Such a state of things, moreover, is calculated to make us regard Jekyll's oft-quoted epigram in a more serious light than we have hitherto been accustomed to do:—

"One doctor single, like the sculler plies,
The patient struggles and by inches dies;
But two physicians, like a pair of oars,
Waft him right smoothly to the Stygian shores."

After all, if one must die, the more quickly and smoothly the thing is done the less disagreeable it must be for all concerned, even though one may decline to accept the Madras wit's definition of "euthanasia" as a fit of apoplexy at the close of a mis-spent life. Dr. Chuckerbutty, however, is quite right in impressing upon the young men entering upon this most responsible career the importance of cultivating a high tone of professional honour, and of maintaining a good understanding with their professional brethren. His own experience had convinced him, he said, that there was no occasion for medical men to "employ unfair pushing, and to make stepping stones of one's brethren's faces"—an expression suggestive of instability on the one part, and of singular discomfort on the other. But the enthusiastic doctor was a little illogical in deriving hope of the future success of the Association, notwithstanding the smallness of the meeting that had assembled at his house, from the remembrance of the gallant little band of patriots who, "pressing shoulder to shoulder, held Thermopylae." The allusion must have been rather discouraging to those who also remembered that that little band was overpowered because they were so few. But classical allusions, if not too erudite, are sure to command the applause "Hear, hear!"—Bengal Hurkaru, June 11.

HINDU FREEMASONS.

Some amusing speculations are afloat as to the existence of bond fide masonic lodges among the Hindus. The Phoenix relates the story of an officer, who formed one of Willoughby's band at the Delhi Magazine, having been saved by the leader of a party of "natives" to whom the "sign" was made, and that the affair was subsequently communicated by the officer himself at a lodge meeting in Calcutta. We have heard precisely the same story of another officer who had been similarly saved in one of the Punjab battles. Perhaps the two stories are essentially one. Very probably another with exactly the same details may be in circulation in connection with the recent campaign in China. This, however, is not all. The Hindus possess all the signs in Craft masonry, as also those of the royal arch, which, we are informed, is "purely a Christian degree." The Neilherry Excelsior says that "the late Mr. Serle, Administrator-General of Mudras, startled a Brahmin on one occasion by giving him the word in the (royal arch) degree;" and, continues the same paper, "as regards Craft Masonry, the present talented editor of the Carnatic Telegraph has, we believe, obtained admission into the most holy place of a heathen temple by using its mystic signs."

"The great voyager Cook, if we are not mistaken, discovered freemasons amongst the inhabitants of the South Sea Islands."!!!

These "we-believe" and "if we-are-not-mistaken" narratives, we fear, are very much of the nature of Peter Pindar's account of the Three Black Crows.

That secret associations, it may be for religious or for social purposes, do exist in India there can be no shadow of a doubt. So they may all the world over. But it is quite unwarrantable to connect or identify them with freemasonry, which owes its origin to a particular event among a peculiar people, and can be neither appreciated nor established among nations that do not accept the traditions of that people. This the editor of the Neilherry Excelsior, if a Mason, ought to know; and giving him credit as such, it is indicative either of profound credulity on his part, or the intensely human passion for the mysterious and the marvellous that leads him to retail his anecdotes. It is quite possible that signs, or portions of signs belonging to the Masonic Order, may have glided into other systems which need not be called "spurious" because unconnected with Masonry. But any attempt to find out how the adaptation (or theft) took place must be hopeless in the absence of written records which no secret societies ever preserve, and in the traditions of the best organised of them being untrustworthy. An inquiry into a field of downright mysticism and secrecy may be highly interesting to the imaginative; but must, from the very nature of the materials to work with, be ultimately fruitless.—Indian Mirror.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

The arrival from England of the two finance officials to whom we referred some days ago, and the return of Mr. G. W. Kellner to this country, will be the signal for an attack on the worst and most complicated of the departments of the administration, that of Public Works, which will at once be pounced upon and thoroughly taken to pieces by the combined action of English and Indian experience and analysis. We have no doubt whatever of the ultimate success of the Finance Minister, aided by his subordinates, in ultimately unravelling the mysteries, defects, and frauds which so thickly beset the system of the Public Works Department; but they have indeed a tough nut to crack in undertaking the Augean task, and must be patiently and firmly prepared to encounter serious and constantly recurring difficulties at every step of their progress. They will be assailing great and varied interests which depend for their existence and prosperity upon fraud long established, upon customs, practices, and rates, the necessity for which no longer exists, nor perhaps ever did exist; and upon a mesh-work of dishonesty and chicanery which, when unravelled, will astonish both the operators and the public. Though the work will be tedious and difficult it will not be without its share of interest and satisfaction, as each abuse and time-honoured fraud upon the public shall crop out during the investigation, and the Public Works system shall be gradually shown up in all its real rottenness and deformity. But to bring all this about, and fully attain the desired end, the financiers must select their evidence and take depositions not only very carefully but very extensively; and they will do well to remember that it is not those only heretofore or now employed in the Public Works Department who are well acquainted with its secrets and its working. There are also persons who have never been employed in that department who yet know a very great deal about it, and whose evidence, for or against it, would be highly valuable, if carefully and patiently taken. The fact is, and it is well-known to the initiated, that labour and capacity successfully expended in the task of dissecting the Public Works Department can scarcely be too highly estimated and paid for, as they will by their results effect such a prospective saving to the Government and the public as will be absolutely colossal when compared with the remuneration accorded to those engaged in accomplishing it. The Public Works Department once placed on a sound and intelligible footing can easily be kept so; for it is impossible that the abuses and vices which have grown up in it during the hundred years that it has existed, could, if once destroyed, reflower in a thousand years to come. If it be lamentable to reflect how many millions of the public money have been lost, mis-spent, and swallowed up by the department referred to, it is also cheering to think that millions may yet be saved from its hitherto rapacious jaws and placed to the public credit, without any actual deterioration whatever to the useful public works of the country, probably with considerable increase and improvement to them. Knowing that the Public Works Department is essentially the one department that most requires the searching eye and the bold hand of the financier and reformer, we are glad indeed to hear that its hour has nearly come and wish every success to those about to pull it to pieces.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MEERUT, June 11.—The troops at this station paraded yesterday morning to witness the presentation of a medal to Sergeant-major Gibbons, of H.M.'s 90th Light Infantry, for long service and good conduct. Colonel Beatson addressed the troops in a short but appropriate speech, concluding with the following words:—"Ninetieth, you have reason to be proud of your sergeant-major." I am sorry to say that Surgeon Barker, of H.M.'s 90th Light Infantry, committed suicide on Tuesday (June 9), and his remains were interred yesterday afternoon. The whole of the officers at the station on duty attended the funeral.—Delhi Gazette, June 16.

MR. WALTER BRETT.—A correspondent of the Allahabad Gazette tells us that Mr. Walter Brett goes to London to study for the Bar. We have long assured ourselves that Mr. Brett is ambitious after higher honours than those of a mere journalist. Look at his Town-hall speeches and his lectures and his debates and his essays.—Indian Mirror.

TANTIA TOPEE.—The Cawnpore news-writer of the Oudh Gazette says, that at a certain large merchant's shop of that place, a box was opened by a gentleman a few days ago, wherein was found the head of Tantia Topee, one of the great rebel leaders of '57, preserved in spirits. It is said to have been severed by an officer from the miscreant's carcass after he was hanged by Government at Sepree. We would advise it to be sent to England and exhibited there as a curiosity. What would we not give to have the Nana's head in like manner?

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF THE N. W. PROVINCES.—The accounts which have reached us of the proceedings of the new Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West provinces, prove the wisdom of Lord Elgin's choice of a successor to the Hon. Mr. Edmonstone. We trust, however, that when the Right Hon. the Secretary of State's official sanction of the appointment comes out, it may be accompanied by some dignity expressive of Her Majesty's appreciation of the services of the Hon. Mr. Drummond. It is well-known here, that the hon. gentleman was of almost incalculable service to Government during the financial embarrassments caused by the mutiny; he was entrusted with the arduous duty of rectifying, as far as practicable, the mischief done in most of the treasuries, whose records were destroyed and assets plundered. His assistance subsequently, to the financiers sent from England, has been cordially recognised, especially by Sir C. Trevelyan, and we have no doubt that, in his new sphere of action, he will continue to be esteemed by his compeers and revered by his subordinates. Few of those who rewarded with a C. B. ship for services during the mutiny could have done what the Hon. Mr. Drummond did, albeit in an unostentatious way and in a peaceful capacity, and few therefore are more deserving of the honours which Royalty is wont to confer on those who distinguish themselves by talents and services of a peaceful nature, as well as on those who shine in the ranks of war.—Indian Empire, May 30.

CAPTAIN DROUGHT, of H.M.'s 48th Regiment, arrived in this station on Tuesday last to take over command of the Convalescent Depot from Captain Castle, who will rejoin his regiment (the 48th).—Allahabad Gazette, May 28.

A SWINDLER.—Our readers heard of, and were cautioned, through our columns, against a party who had been making a tour of various stations, among which Allahabad had been one of the most favoured, and where, under the name of Capt. Stanley, of Her Majesty's service, he had been the means of duping several respectable tradesmen and others. This swindler, under half-a-dozen aliases, has continued his practices in other stations till he was caught at Cawnpore, where we are happy to say he is now cooling his heels in the station goal, awaiting trial for swindling. A native tradesman of this station has been the means of tracing the scoundrel, and of bringing him within the clutches of the law. We have been requested to notice the matter thus prominently, in order to obtain the assistance of the tradesmen of Allahabad to send in to the magistrates at Cawnpore any evidence that can be brought against him, in order that society may no longer be troubled with such a villain.—Allahabad Gazette.

PRIZE MONEY FOR MILITARY CHAPLAINS.—"The general orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, received yesterday, contain an announcement, apparently sent out from England, to the effect that, in future, a chaplain attached to a military force in the field shall, in cases where prize is captured, receive one share for every shilling of his pay. This is not very lucid; but of course it means the daily pay of the chaplain, and as the order is made applicable for the future in this country, it strikes us as being most unjust to the combatant officers and men. The monthly pay of a chaplain in India is Rs. 800, and consequently the daily pay is Rs. 26-8, and a fraction, or fifty-three shillings, giving him fifty-three shares of prize money. This order should be revised, and adapted to India, as it is obviously intended to apply to the chaplain's pay at the English rate, and is absurd when applied to an Indian chaplain's consolidated salary and daily pay."—Englishman.

PART OF MAJOR CURTIS' REGIMENT, the 4th Cavalry, has been sent to the Peshawur outposts, to relieve a squadron of the 6th B.C. General Haly and his staff have gone to inspect the Cherat sanitarium. There is a report here that Lieutenant Bond, late of the Guides, now in the Peshawur Police, was wounded while riding on the road to Cherat; it is, I believe, utterly without foundation.—Correspondent of Delhi Gazette.

A DISPUTED ARCHEOLOGICAL POINT.—The precise locality of the famous Alexandrian Aornos has led the grave, the learned, and the fanciful to indulge in theories each more wild and extravagant than the other, while it has fallen to the lot of a sober, common-sense missionary to identify it beyond the possibility of mistake. The Rev. Isidor Loewenthal, of the American Presbyterian Mission, now residing at Peshawur, has, in a paper on the antiquities of the valley, full of interest and deeply suggestive of what must be the result of active and painstaking researches within its precincts, proved beyond a doubt that the genuine Aornos is to be sought and found on the right bank of the Indus opposite Attock, on the following grounds:—First, because there is there a rock that coincides in every respect with the place besieged by the Grecian conqueror; second, because the name of Benares was, at one time, according to the Tabakat-i-Akberi and other historians, conjoined with that of Attock; third, because the conversion of the Sanskrit Benares into the Greek Aornos is more simple than many similar transmutations generally are; and, lastly, because this rock lies exactly in the way of an army approaching the Punjab from Afghanistan. The paper will shortly appear in the journal of the Asiatic Society, and we commend its reading to all interested in the antiquities of this province, including the miscellaneous list of names selected by the local archaeological committee as authorities on the subject.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE OUT TURN OF COTTON IN THE PUNJAB for the year 1862 has been published in the Gazette, and though the quantity grown and exported was considerable, it came short by nearly a lakh of maunds of the estimated produce of 1861, which the Financial Commissioner attributes in a great measure to the erroneous returns of that year. For, though the season was on the whole unfavourable to the growth of cotton in most of the districts, yet notwithstanding such disadvantages they alone were not sufficient to cause so great a deficiency. The total probable produce of 1861 was estimated in round numbers at about 3,50,000 maunds, whereas the quantity gathered from this year's crop did not exceed 2,70,000 maunds, out of which about 1,50,000 maunds were retained for consumption in the province, and the remaining 1,30,000 maunds exported.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE RAIL.—The Allahabad Gazette furnishes an item of news which (if true) will account for any delay that may occur in the opening of the railway line to Delhi:—"We understand that as long ago as March last three arches of the bridge lately built for the passage of the Hindun river, near Delhi, came down, owing to the trial strain being applied to the arches previous to the cement having had time to set. The matter was kept in the dark till Captain De Bourbel, the consulting engineer, happened to go up that way and saw the dilapidated structure. He sent the stereotyped inquiry to the railway authorities as to the time and cause of accident; the reply was to the effect that the delay in reporting the matter was owing to inquiries being on hand to discover who was to blame for the fracture! It was intended to have opened the line to Delhi this year, but in consequence of the above accident, and also the discovery that the causeway leading to the Hindun bridge had been constructed in the dry weather, hence likely to have a considerable subsidence during the present rains, the idea has been given up. In connection with the rail to Delhi, we may mention that the wells of one pier of the bridge over the Jumna, which were lost during the last rains, have been rebuilt, and the others, which were nearly all thrown out of the perpendicular, have been righted. The reparation of the damage done during the past season has prevented the advancement of this bridge, as was expected, and now the setting in of the rains will stop all further work for the present."

HERAT.—From the last newsletter in the Delhi Gazette it would appear that Sirdar Shahnawaz Khan is not inclined to repeat the terms offered by his father to the Ameer of Cabul. His reply to the Ameer was:—"I am your slave, and have no objection if you sell me in the bazaar, but the fact is that I have written to the Shah of Persia about my father's death, and have informed the Shah of the arrangements my late father was making with the Ameer about Herat. As soon as I have received instructions in reply from the Shah, I will let the Ameer know." Meanwhile, one of the Ameer's sons, without his father's knowledge, attempted to capture the youngest son of Sooltan Jan when on a visit to his father's tomb. The boy was triumphantly rescued by Shahnawaz Khan. Dost Mahomed reproved his son for so dastardly an attempt thus: "Those who are brave never disgrace themselves in this way." Shahnawaz Khan retaliated after a few days by attempting to take one of the Dost's batteries. By the last intelligence the Shazada of Meshed, with 12,000 Persians, was on his way to Herat to console Shahnawaz for his father's death. A letter from the Shahzade was received by the Ameer, in which it is stated "that Herat was given by the Shah of Persia to Sultan Ahmed Jan as a Jageer, and as he is now dead you should not interfere any more." It is said that the Ameer was very much concerned about that letter. Persia is becoming unusually active, and will yet get into difficulties.

THE HEAT.—From all parts of Northern India comes a cry as to the unprecedented intensity of the heat. We strive to comfort ourselves with the fact that in Gundava, near which so many of Alexander's soldiers perished on their return march from India, the heat in April is considered "intense" only when it reaches 116 degrees in tent and 109 at night. The people of the Mekran coast say that in the hot weather the newly-made brick is at once burned red by the sun. The rains were eagerly longed for, and they came at last on the evening of the 6th, heralded as usual by lightning, and in a refreshing down-pour. The return of the Surveyor-general's office, for the past week, shows a maximum heat of 104 degrees, or one more than in the same week last year. Yet the favoured residents of Simla grumble because the cold rain keeps them close to their wood fires, spoils their pic-nics, and even effectually damps all incipient scandal. Loyalty demands that, on the anniversary of her Majesty's birthday, soldiers and volunteers should fight vigorous sham battles, and even that ladies should dance in India, though the thermometer stand at blood-heat, and the body be above fever-heat.—Friend of India.

AN AMUSING INCIDENT.—The following rather amusing incident is related by a correspondent:—"An English gentleman of rank and considerable fortune, at the present moment travelling in Upper India, visited a station about a degree north of Meerut, and having no special introduction to any of the 'Sahiban Aleeshan,' he called on the chief civil officer, sent in his card, which threw no light on his standing in society either in England or India, and was politely received. In the course of a miscellaneous conversation he expressed a wish to be present in kutcheree at any trial that might be pending as he would like to see how such matters were conducted. The judge looked rather surprised, hesitated a moment, and then ventured on the assertion that there happened, on that particular day, to be no cases on his file! Nothing daunted, our traveller made a similar request to the magistrate when calling on him, and was, singular to say, met with a similarly evasive reply. What could be the cause of such wonderfully clean files at —? Both the civilians expressed a surmise, subsequently, to a mutual friend, that their visitor was nothing more nor less than a Calcutta attorney, who had come on false pretences to see how the Queen's law was administered by her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, and under cover of the pretence to find out a few particulars connected with a recent de lunatio case that has caused some sensation in the interloping world!"—Delhi Gazette.

COLONEL WELLS, commanding the Royal Welch Fusiliers, does not go to Delhi as stated, having been relieved of the duty. Who takes the Delhi Brigade we do not know. But as Lord Mark Kerr only goes away for sixty days, we presume the command will devolve on the next senior.—Delhi Gazette, May 28.

THE DUKE OF ARGYLL'S ARTICLE IN THE "EDINBURGH REVIEW."—When so good an authority as Mr. Kaye unites with club and old Indian gossip in ascribing to the Duke of Argyll the authorship of the recent articles in the Edinburgh Review on the Marquis of Dalhousie and Earl Canning, the statements made and the policy commended become questions of more than ordinary interest. It is well-known that the Duke aspires to the highest office out of England which a subject can fill, and the interest of Sutherland House will always be so great that, under any Ministry which the country is likely to see in the next ten years, there will be no difficulty in gratifying his ambition. He is only forty years of age, and has probably a long career before him. The warm admiration shown by the writer of these articles for Lord Dalhousie, and his spirited defence of the Great Proconsul's policy we considered some time ago. His eulogy on Lord Canning is much more guarded, from a reason which almost every paragraph betrays—that the late Viceroy reinstated the Talookdars of Oudh, giving them, moreover, magisterial powers. The writer admires the errors of Thomason, and, like many Indian sciolists, bewails the breaking up of village co-parcenaries. The mistakes which the mutiny and the famine exploded for ever in India, which Colonel Baird Smith denounced, even Mr. Harington abjured and Lord Canning in his later years determined to avoid, have taken refuge in England, from which accurate facts alone will drive them. The Edinburgh reviewer, having convincingly proved in his article on Lord Dalhousie that annexation was not the cause of the revolt of the province, entirely fails to account for it, and in his statement of facts becomes contradictory. In common with almost all in this country who have studied the subject, the cause we believe to have been the expulsion of the Talookdars from their property on annexation, and the bestowal of their estates on their tenantry. Every document, from Lord Canning's confiscation proclamation and Sir R. Montgomery's reports to the present time, proves this.—Friend of India.

THE SILKWORM.—We (Delhi Gazette) learn with much regret that the disease which was found so materially to affect the silkworm in France and Italy, some five or six years ago, is still threatening that important staple with serious results, and that various measures are being adopted to introduce new and healthier races from the East, in the hope that the disease may thus be checked or entirely removed. An Italian deputation is now in Japan, whence they propose conveying silkworm eggs to Europe, via Siberia. Another visited Turkey and Persia last year, especially Georgia and Mazenderan, there they were delighted to find no existing disease, and are this year to endeavour to reach Bokhara via Oxenbourg, if they can. A third is now on its way to Cashmere to see what can be done there, and great hopes are entertained that this will be the most successful in its researches, if the Maharajah makes no opposition. Dr. Carlo Orio, of Malin, is at the head of the latter deputation, and passed up through these provinces on his way to the Punjab a few days since.

ALLIGUNEE, SEWAN, May 24.—It has rained, and blown hurricanes, hailed and lightened and thundered. The results have been that the leeches trees are all leeches less; the water-melons for the most part smashed, and the weather has been comparatively cooled, allowing your correspondent to throw off dull lethargy. But the cholera is still raging. In the villages all around me, people are dying by hundreds, and their remains have sometimes to be removed on carts, to be taken to the river side and burnt. As many natives as I have seen are great salt-eaters. The poor fellows in my neighbourhood eat more than a tola of salt daily, salt with their rice, salt with their suttoo and parched gram, salt with their melons and kukrees, and yet why do they fall victims to cholera? Dr. Beaman tried to show or rather to establish that salt is preventive to cholera. Perhaps he is right; but I wish to have my question answered satisfactorily by some one.

ALLAHABAD, LUCKNOW, AND DELHI LIT WITH GAS.—The Englishman confirms the information which we gave to our readers a month ago, about the intention of the Oriental Gas Company, "Limited," to light with gas Allahabad, Lucknow, and Delhi, in the North-west provinces. Of these Lucknow will be the first to share this benefit and will have nearly 5,000 lights, the arrangements for which are all expected to be completed within a year. With the rapid introduction of gas-light in India, let us hope that the light of science, truth and morality will shine forth pari passu and penetrate into the darkest corners of the empire. By and bye, there is no doubt every Indian city and town of any pretensions will have its gas. In the meantime, Madras and Bombay, we believe, still remain unblest with it. When Madras will be illuminated with gas, we shall then cease to call it "Benighted," as it may then have just right to be indignant at being termed so.—Indian Mirror.

HINDU IDEAS OF ECLIPSES.—As in the morning of Tuesday last there was an eclipse of the moon, it may not be uninteresting to some of our readers to know what the mass of the ignorant population of India think of solar and lunar eclipses—those objects of wonder and error to the superstitious of every age and clime. It is necessary, however, to premise that Hindu astronomers have as correct a notion of the cause of those celestial phenomena, and can calculate them with as much accuracy, as the astronomers of Europe; but the theory of eclipses, as it is pronounced in the Puranas and other theological books of the Hindus, is different from that given in books of Hindu astronomy. It is to the former theory that we now draw the attention of our readers. The Puranas state that the cause of eclipses is the attempt made periodically by a monster of the name of Bahu to devour the two fraternal deities, the sun and moon. The hostility of Bahu towards the rulers of day and night is traced in the same writing to the period of the Churning of the Ocean, immediately after Amrita, the water of immortality, had been extracted from the vasty deep by the hand of the god, Dwaunantari. The account of the transaction is given in the Mahabharat, as translated by M. Wilkins:—"And so it fell out that, whilst the Suras were quenching their thirst for immortality, Bahu, an Asura, assumed the form of a Sura, and began to drink also. And the water had but reached his throat, when the Sun and Moon, in friendship to the Suras, discovered the deceit, and instantly Narayana cut off his head, as he was drinking, with his splendid weapon, the Chakra. And the gigantic head of the Asura, emblem of a mountain's summit, being thus separated from his body by the Chakra's edge, bounded into the heavens with a dreadful cry, whilst his ponderous trunk fell cleaving the ground asunder, and shaking the whole earth unto its foundation with all its islands, rocks, and forests. And from that time the head of Rahu resolved on eternal enmity, and continueth even unto this day at times to seize upon the Sun and Moon." In the attempt to swallow the heavenly luminaries, Rahu is assisted by his friend and associate Ketu. Hence the occurrence of eclipses. Hence pious Hindus, on the occasion of eclipses repeat prayers, give gifts to Brahmans and to the poor, and engage in acts of worship, believing that their acts of devotion and charity will contribute to the liberation of the luminaries from the horrid jaws of the Rahn. As the season of eclipses is deemed highly inauspicious, no Hindu eats or drinks anything while the sun or the moon struggles with the dreaded monsters, and should the eclipse begin while a Hindu is engaged in breakfasting or dining, the work of mastication and of deglutition is immediately stopped; and after the eclipse is over the earthen pots and pans, in which the Hindu dresses his food, are thrown away, as being polluted by the inauspicious occurrence, and replaced by new ones.—Indian Reformer, June 5.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.—At a meeting of the shareholders of the Great Eastern Hotel Company held at Calcutta on the 1st of June, a dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum was declared.

SINGAPORE.—The following passage occurs in a description drawn by a Singapore paper of the suffering of a large batch of China coolies shipped at Macao and brought to Singapore—one hundred and fifty died from thirst and hunger. "The sufferings these poor people endured cannot readily be conceived. In the course of the evidence brought before the coroner, it was elicited that when one of the passengers, maddened by thirst, made an earnest appeal to the mate for water, that respectable member of Celestial society flung a billet of wood at his head, and cut it open to the bare skull, the recipient of the brutal blow dying from the effects a few days afterwards. Again, another of the passengers, also frantic from want of water, loudly proclaiming that he could endure his tortures no longer, and with a dying appeal to his deities, leapt overboard near Malacca, and was drowned! And yet all these hideous atrocities had nearly escaped their due retribution. Just one unexpected incident brought them to light. It appears that one of the passengers who had thus been inhumanly maltreated, left the Vene-On at Singapore, and arriving at Penang before her, revealed the tale to the police magistrate, who, accompanied by the deputy commissioner of police, boarded the junk on her arrival, and then the history of these horrors, with all their harassing concomitants, crept out, the coroner's inquest confirming the details."—Indian Empire, June 6.

ELECTING FOR STAFF CORPS.—The order to the officers of H.M.'s British regiments holding staff appointments in this country to elect between the Staff Corps or return to their regiments has utterly failed, as might have been foreseen. It was put in force in the case of some officers, but those who were called upon to choose having invariably refused to have anything whatever to do with the Staff Corps, and elected for return to their regiments, it became obvious that the order would not do, and that the Government, whilst remanding the officers holding staff appointments to their regiments, must, at the same time, take the services of other officers from their regiments, to replace those removed. This difficulty might have been easily foreseen, for the hope of getting Queen's officers for staff appointments in India through the Indian Staff Corps is simply visionary. Some other manoeuvre must now be tried to fill the Indian staff appointments without weakening the officers' list of H.M.'s British regiments in India; for, whatever may be the effect of under-officering native troops, it is quite certain that the Horse Guards will not assent, as a permanent arrangement, to a system which under-officers the English troops, and consequently injures their discipline and impairs their efficiency. This system, as at present existing, sprung from the exigencies of the service during and after the mutinies; but it never could have been the intention of the home military authorities to permit it to have a permanent existence, and it must be reformed. The mischief of the system is visible at a glance, but it is by no means easy to discover the remedy for a state of things which tends to fill the Indian staff appointments in India from the officers' lists of H.M.'s British regiments, just as they were formerly filled from the officers' list of the Company's sepoy corps.

LONDON CAPITALISTS IN INDIA.—If any proof were needed of the rapidly-increasing confidence entertained by London capitalists in Indian "adventure," it would suffice to quote the scramble for shares in the Oriental Tea Company. No sooner was it known that men of local influence and repute had something genuine to offer in the way of tea plantations, than capital was at once forthcoming, and the whole amount of shares—with the exception of a small number reserved to tantalise the people of Calcutta—was immediately subscribed for. The guaranteed interest had very likely something to do with the eagerness displayed to join the new company, but it is also manifest that the reduction of the duty upon tea, and the anticipated increase of consumption, have already raised the value of our Indian tea-lands in the estimation of both capitalists and speculators, and that all bona fide concerns will steadily rise in value. At the present moment there is no mode of employing either a small or large capital which so closely combines the twofold and usually separate advantages of high interest and perfect security, as the purchase of tea-lands and the cultivation of tea. Proper caution must, of course, be taken to avoid mere stock-jobbers and bubble companies, and it is also wise to remember that even gold may be purchased at too high a rate.

SUICIDE OF MR. W. R. LEWSEY.—PESHAWUR, June 6th.—"Since last writing this station has furnished another to a long list of victims to deluded reason, Mr. W. R. Lewsey, agent to the Punjab Bank 'Limited,' and but a short time resident in Peshawur. Apparently he was a most intelligent and respectable man. On the morning of his death, as was his custom, he rose early and ordered his buggy, in which to take a drive. Nothing unusual or extravagant was observed in his conduct: the servants without the bank heard a pistol shot, and entering, found their master dead; the weapon had been discharged by himself into his mouth, the bullet passing completely through the head, and instant death resulted. Taking the circumstance of his preparing to start for a morning drive into consideration, we may naturally infer suicide was not contemplated, but the result of a momentary insane impulse. Seized by a suicidal climax, the sight of his revolver induced him to commit self-destruction. The inquest returned a verdict of 'temporary insanity'—peculiarly true in this unhappy instance of self-murder, which can scarcely be considered criminal; the sole motive appears to have been disappointment in a matrimonial alliance he wished to make. A telegram to Rawul Pindiee brought up another agent for this branch of the bank, and business is transacted as before."—Delhi Gazette, June 11.

SIMLA, June 3.—As I write, at two P.M., an animated snow storm is falling. Locusts in millions are flying about, and settling on every tree and green thing, so that I am afraid I shall have, ere long, to send you sad news from these latitudes of the devastation done by this curse of the Almighty. It is curious to listen to the noise of their wings as they whirl through the air, looking like flakes of snow in the sunlight disturbed by a strong breeze. They have, apparently, very voracious appetites, and are full grown and strong. The ground opposite my window is a living mass of these salmon-coloured plagues. Talk of bees in a hive, ants in a nest, or fleas and bugs in a Spanish inn—the whole place is covered with them, and the air, as I have already said, filled with the creatures. I am afraid the garden of Annandale will be as bare as the palm of my hand to-morrow, and my Lord Elgin and the aristocracy be compelled to forego fresh vegetables, and put up with those hermetically preserved in tins. You may have read accounts of the immense clouds of them which lately visited the Punjab and the North-Western Provinces, but I certainly never thought these creatures would ever take the Himalayas by storm.

THE 35TH REGIMENT.—By a letter from Fyzabad, we are requested to contradict a statement in one of our late issues to the effect that the 35th regiment had been suffering from cholera and small-pox. We are very glad to hear that so far from this being the case, the regiment alluded to is remarkably healthy. There had been no cholera at Fyzabad either in it or the artillery or the native troops, nor have they had a single case of small-pox since they were at Meerut, and then only one. It is satisfactory to know that the 35th have entirely shaken off the fever they were suffering from at Agra, and that they have not a serious case in hospital. All this is very satisfactory, but as to contradicting the report, we have only got to say that no such report ever appeared in our columns.—Delhi Gazette.

THE ARMY.—We perceive, by General Orders, that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has notified that the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India has determined that chaplains and assistant-chaplains shall receive shares of prize money equivalent to the number of shillings composing the pay of chaplains of their length of service, as laid down in the War-office rules in force at the period of the operations for which the prize is given.

LUCKNOW, June 11.—The visit of the Gwalior Maharajah to this place has at length come off. He was escorted into the station by the Commissioner and several other of the authorities under a salute of nineteen guns. The usual visits of ceremony between him and the notabilities of this place occurred on the Monday following, and I believe he has left a favourable impression on the minds of those who were fortunate enough to obtain an interview with him. Yesterday morning a grand review of the troops was held in his honour, and in the evening he held a reception at the Chutter Munzil, and entertained a large and select company at supper, after which a grand display of fireworks took place. Many rumours are afloat regarding this visit. It is the current opinion that he has only come to see and judge for himself of the wonders of Lucknow, and that, politically, his visit has no significance. The Maharajah leaves this for his capital to-morrow, I believe. This has been a most unusually hot season all over the Bengal Presidency. I have been upwards of seven years in this presidency, and never before suffered so much from the heat as I have this season. Fancy to yourself the thermometer at 105 degrees in-doors, and that, too, in a room with tatties up and punkas going, and then you will be able to form some idea of the sufferings of us poor fellows up here. The volunteer movement (towards the revival of which a meeting came off some time last month) has turned out a complete failure. Colonel Crommelin, our Chief Engineer, is about to join a newly created appointment at Simla. Colonel Ommaney, from Bengal, I believe, succeeds him.

ACCIDENT ON THE RAILWAY AT PEER POINTEE.—The loss of life by the railway accident at Peer Pointee was not quite so great as we had reason to believe. The fireman, one native passenger, and a child were killed, and another native had his leg broken. The sufferings of the poor fireman must have been great. He was caught between the engine and the tender, and held there until he could be literally chiselled out, the scalding water from the boiler having, meanwhile, rained upon him in torrents. It is not easy to explain the cause of the accident without a diagram. The up-train that left Calcutta at 8.30 A.M. on Monday morning reached Peer Pointee at 7.15 P.M. the same day, and was shunted off in the usual manner to the short siding on which stands the passenger station. It had then to go on a short distance, and be shunted on to a siding that ran to the back of the station, and there attach two horse-boxes. As these boxes contained animals of considerable value, the guard objected to their being placed next to the tender, lest they should suffer from fright, and accordingly desired the driver, much against his will, to take on a section of the train consisting of the guard's box and a third class carriage. After picking up the horse-boxes the train ought to have gone back to the station, taken up the guard, and the other carriages, and then gone on to the up line and continued its journey to Benares. Instead of doing so, the driver went straight on—occupied, as he says, in adjusting one of the pumps that had gone wrong—and in an instant was at the end of the siding, and flying into space with an impetus of twelve miles an hour. Such, we believe, is a tolerably correct outline of this sad catastrophe.—Bengal Hurkaru, June 13.

DEATH OF MAJOR-GENERAL BARSTOW.—We hear with much regret of the death of Major-General J. A. Barstow. It was caused by an accident the General met with on the 6th inst., viz., a fall from his horse, from which his constitution, somewhat debilitated by age, could not recover. He died on the 9th, and was buried on the 10th at Murree. The deceased officer saw active service first in the Nepal war of 1814-16, and subsequently in Afghanistan, where he was badly wounded, from the effects of which he had more or less suffered ever since.—Delhi Gazette, June 16.

SIMLA.—A letter from Simla says that General Becher leaves almost immediately for the Presidency to take up his command there. The 82nd band was to come up in a few days. There is no end to the gaieties going on.

THE WEATHER IN THE BAREE DOAB.—“Up to the 5th June,” says our Baree Doab correspondent, “the weather was all that one could wish for the season. On the 6th, a sudden change came o'er the spirit of our dream. A considerable rise in the temperature, fiery blasts from the south-west, storms, locusts, and all their accompaniments are the order of the day, and the rule of the night. This may portend an early setting in of the rains, and we can only hope it does.” “After the above was written,” continues our informant, “we were visited on Sunday evening, the 6th inst., by a very severe hurricane, ushered in by a dust storm from the north-east, a most unusual quarter for such a visitation. Rain followed in considerable quantity. The lightning kept the whole hemisphere in one continued blaze for no less than two hours, and I am told struck a house in the town of Umritsur, without, however, doing any serious damage. The thunder, with the exception of one or two bursts, was not loud. On Monday morning there was a somewhat heavy, but partial shower, that brought down the temperature to monsoon point, and we are now sitting with doors and windows open, enjoying this most agreeable change to our heart's content. The locusts came from Goordaspoor, but were not allowed to rest here except in occasional localities, and fled off to the south-west, probably to their pleasant resting-place in the deserts of Jessalmeer. On the same morning it rained heavily in the district of Goordaspoor, the general impression being that the rains had set in.—Delhi Gazette, June 16.

THE “SHOE QUESTION” is again agitating Upper India; and rajahs, nawabs, governor-generals' agents, commissioners, judges, collectors, princes, chieftains, and a host of smaller fry are eagerly engaged in the fray; the Governor-General at Simla being, of course, the general umpire and referee. It is nothing but “shoes or no shoes” from all parts of the country, with angry arguments about European and native customs, Asiatic and English politeness, relative rank, precedence, and a hundred other such topics, all arising out of the pretensions of natives of rank or wealth to enter the houses of Europeans with their shoes on, and the determination of the Europeans to unshoe them or exclude them. We believe that this leathern battle has raged hottest about Benares, with comparatively minor skirmishes at other places; and one prominent feature about the contest is the apparently fixed determination of the English not to give in or bate a jot of the requirements of native ceremony and politeness as mutually observed by the natives amongst themselves, and, therefore, strictly due to those English gentlemen, official or other, with whom the natives are desirous of associating. The force of this determination may be gathered from one ludicrous scene in the struggle that is going on, where a native of rank, thinking to escape being unshod by calling with straps sewed to his trousers, was, in the very drawing-room of the official whom he visited, made to cut the straps with a penknife, and haul off his heroic Wellingtons or Bluchers. The settlement of these squabbles may be very amusing at Simla; it would be a very different thing indeed to be annoyed with them in steaming Calcutta.

THE KING OF BURMAH.—“The King of Burma, we are assured by a gentleman who has lately had the honour of an interview with his Majesty, is sincerely desirous of cultivating good commercial relations with foreigners, and especially with the English. He is fully sensible of the folly of any recourse to arms to recover the territory of which his kingdom has been shorn, and is wise enough to accommodate himself to circumstances which he can in no way alter or control. Instead, therefore, of reviving ‘war's alarms,’ his Majesty is applying himself to the arts of peace, and has practically enrolled himself amongst the merchant-princes of the earth. Deprived of his finest provinces on the seaboard, and not even in a position to collect revenue from the outlying districts subject to his sway, the King is actually one of the poorest men of the country. But though sufficiently awake to the advantages of commerce, his Majesty's notions on the subject of political economy are somewhat vague, and partake more of the selfish system of Mahomed Ali in Egypt than of the enlightened principles which are beginning to prevail in Europe. At the same time, he is by no means averse to the influx of foreign trade, and is anxious to encourage the advent of English settlers. As a slight mark of his esteem for the British Government, his Majesty has entrusted Captain Parry with the honourable mission of conveying several boxes of presents to the Governor-general at Simla. The navigation of the Irrawaddy as high as Ava is represented as quite as good as that of the Hooghly at Calcutta, and the only obstacle to ascending very much further is the disturbed state of the country. Abundance of fuel is obtainable the whole way up to Ava. Now that the treaty negotiated by Colonel Phayre is in full operation, and with every prospect of its being faithfully observed by the Burmese Government, there can be little doubt that a large and profitable trade will spring up between Rangoon and the Western Provinces of China, though for the present the civil war that is raging in Yunnan, between the native Chinese and the Mussulman intruders, will tend to restrict commercial enterprises to the Kingdom of Ava.”

JYNTEAH.—The Dacca News of the 6th June announces that a small party of rebels, who managed to escape into the jungle whilst our troops were occupying the country, have again proved troublesome, and have attacked one or two friendly villages. Another report had reached Dacca to the effect that the Lohtyng and Myonso people had deserted their villages and taken to the jungle. If, adds our contemporary, “it turns out that they have acted thus with a view to re-open hostilities, Colonel Dunsford will, in all probability, have to commence his work over again. There is nothing to prevent the Jynteahs from harassing us in this way for an indefinite period. When they desire a respite they may cry out for an amnesty, and when they have recruited themselves they may return to the jungles.” The detailed particulars of the attack had not been received, but it is certain that the Cossyah police were under orders to leave for the scene of the disturbances. We quote the concluding paragraph of our contemporary's remarks on this new outbreak:—“We cannot afford to have military detachments located in every village, and guarding the inlets into the jungles; but we can cut high roads through these jungles, and make the villages accessible to one another. We can open up the country in every direction, and to such an extent that no village shall be isolated or without its direct communication with the head-quarters of the local administration, and no jungle offer either shelter or hiding-place for rebels. With roads running through and through the country in every direction, troops from Cherra or Jowai might be easily brought to bear on any given locality. This would make the risk of rebellion overwhelming; the probability of success would be reduced to nil, and rumours of revolt, such as are now likely to distract the country for some time to come, would be smothered in the birth. A reformed administration is sadly needed; but let Colonel Haughton begin with the roads. Recal Major Rowlett!”

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING.—A rule has been added to the prospectus of the Thomason-Civil Engineering College at Roorkee, that the mere fact of passing the College test does not give a candidate any claim to immediate employment in the Public Works Department. With the exception of officers of Engineers and civil engineers sent out from England under covenant with the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, students of the College who are duly qualified will be provided for before all other candidates, but if vacancies in the department do not exist they must wait their turn.

REJECTION OF RATIONS IN H.M.'S 88TH REGIMENT.—Brigadier Holdich, C.B., has just gone down from Nynee Tal to Bareilly, and it is supposed goes on to Shahjehanpore, to enquire into the frequent rejection of rations in her Majesty's 88th.

PROGRESS IN BENGAL.—We are glad to learn that last week his Honour, the Lieut.-governor, with Mrs. Beadon, paid a complimentary visit to the family of Rajah Kali Krishna Bahadoor. The ladies of the house, consisting of Lady Kali Krishna, her daughter-in-law, the sister of the latter, and other younger females, headed by the mother of the worthy Rajah, were introduced to Mr. and Mrs. Beadon by Koomar Harrendra Krishna in his drawing-room. For about an hour the distinguished visitors held conversation with the ladies through Mrs. Goulding, head-mistress of the Bethune female school, who had been invited to act as interpreter on the occasion. A similar visit was paid to this noble family a few days back by Sir Charles and Lady Trevelyan. This is the first instance of a Hindoo family of high birth waiving time-honoured prejudices to allow Europeans to visit the zenanna and converse with their females. We hail this as an unmistakable sign of progress, and we earnestly hope that the example set by the enlightened noblemen of Shobha Bazaar may not be lost upon our countrymen.—Hindoo Patriot, June 8.

THE PUNJAB EXHIBITION.—This morning's operations were commenced towards the erection of the New Punjab Exhibition Building at Anarkullee, the plan having been returned from the Lieutenant-Governor, for whose sanction it was submitted a short time ago. The design of the proposed edifice we had an opportunity of inspecting, and find that it not only provides for every essential for an exhibition of such a nature, but that it is to be so constructed as to be readily transposed, with very little difficulty or expense, into a public market hereafter. There are to be four side aisles, each 100 feet long, and two centre aisles of similar length, but much wider and capable of accommodating two rows of counters for exhibition articles of various kinds. The side aisles are to be constructed so as to be capable of sub-division into courts for machinery, armour, husbandry implements, &c. In the centre of the building is to be erected a large circular stand for choice plants, shrubs, and flowers, while at the south centre of the building, and immediately facing the main entrance, will be the orchestra. The edifice takes in the two existing market places, and by a very tasteful arrangement converts them into a court for fine arts, the other into a refreshment court. In short, we believe that the plan makes provision for everything, not omitting the slightest minute, while a more tasteful and really handsome outward design it would be difficult to find of its kind in India, and reflects much credit on the skill of Mr. Baines, C.E., Punjab Railway, the gentleman solicited by the committee to undertake the task of preparing a plan and estimates, and who, we understand, will superintend its construction.—Lahore Chronicle, June 3.

LIEUT. KANE, of the 71st Highland Light Infantry, has been appointed to command the new Convalescent Depot for married soldiers and their families at Nunkote, near Murree.

THE PORT OF MUTLAH.—We understand that the agents of the ship Essex, which arrived in the river from England on the 11th of June, have directed the captain to proceed to the port of Mutlah, instead of coming on to Calcutta.

BRIGADIER J. D. MACPHERSON, C.B., arrived at Agra on the 12th of June, and assumed command of the station under the salute due to his rank.

A PUBLIC MEETING has been held at Delhi, to arrange for the preparation of gifts for the Princess of Wales, and for the collection of funds for that purpose.

SIR HOPE GRANT'S OPINION OF THE VOLUNTEER GUARDS.

The corps was inspected by the Commander-in-Chief on Saturday, the 30th ultimo. It is not necessary to reproduce the programme of manoeuvres which was gone through to furnish his Excellency with the best test of the proficiency attained by the corps; it will sufficiently answer our purpose to refer to the remarks which fell from Sir Hope Grant after he had finished his inspection, as we shall all be content to accept the opinion of that distinguished General Officer rather than endeavour, by the light of our imperfect knowledge, to judge for ourselves by an examination of the movements executed. We must not forget to state that the result of Sir Hope Grant's observations was not founded on a distant inspection, where those little errors and defects that take place in the ranks are lost to view, but on a very close and critical watching of the regiment in positions where they could not know that they were manœuvring under the eye of his Excellency. In order to effect this object, Sir Hope Grant abandoned his staff and, accompanied by General McCleverty, followed close upon the footsteps of the volunteer guards. When he had seen sufficient to satisfy him—and the time spent in the examination was fully one hour—the Commander-in-Chief called the officers to the front, and congratulated Colonel Drury on the success which he had worked in the regiment. Sir Hope Grant begged Colonel Drury to explain to his officers, and through them to the corps at large, how extremely pleased and gratified he was with their appearance and the manner in which they performed all their evolutions. At his inspection a twelve month ago, Sir Hope Grant told the regiment that, considering that they were volunteers engaged in various avocations in civil life, and held together only by their own free will and desire, their discipline and drill were something miraculous. On this occasion he told them that there was a marked improvement on their former condition; that the progress they had made during the year was extremely gratifying; that they were almost as good, indeed he would say, as good as a line regiment, and here he turned to General McCleverty and asked him if it was not so, and it was very pleasing to see the old veteran cordially assent after a moment's reflection, both by voice and energetic action of the head. Sir Hope Grant continued his address to the Regiment by remarking on their great steadiness and order. He said he was pleased to observe that there was no talking or pushing in the ranks, which very often takes place when men get a little out in their movements; that their echelon movements, their forming square, their deploying into line, their advancements and retiring, indeed, everything they did was good and just as it ought to have been done. He also remarked on the great improvement that had been effected in their dress, viz., the cross belts and blue caps. He was glad that they had exchanged their old scarlet cap for the present head-dress; not only was it in better taste, but it was what the general army used; and he liked to see the national costume preserved. Then, turning to Colonel Drury, Sir Hope Grant said, with a smile and a little hesitation, that he had one fault to find, which he hoped the officers would endeavour to have rectified. This one fault was, that several men in the ranks wore their black hair too long! He had ridden close in the rear of the regiment, and had observed this defect, which was displeasing to a soldier's eye. He begged the officers would speak to the members of the corps, and prevail on them to cut their hair short, as that would make them look so much smarter and nicer. He again congratulated the volunteers on their appearance, and hoped that, during the next twelve months, they would continue to progress still more, and thus prove a credit to their commanding officer, to themselves, and to the city of Madras. Having thanked Colonel Drury for the pleasure he had enjoyed that morning, the Chief rode off the ground, leaving a deep and grateful impression on the minds of his hearers by his simple unaffected speech, and the kind and homely manner in which he delivered it. That this was deeply appreciated by Colonel Drury was manifest in the few, heartfelt, emphatic words which he addressed to the regiment before dismissing it from parade. Colonel Drury warmly thanked the regiment for the manner in which it had acquitted itself. As civilians, they could not understand how a soldier felt when he received the praise of the Commander-in-Chief. As for himself, his heart truly rejoiced. If the regiment had been censured he would have been exceedingly mortified—indeed, much more so than they could have been themselves; but as it had been praised, he naturally felt proud that the Commander-in-Chief thought well of a regiment which he commanded. A few sincere, heartfelt words such as these occasionally addressed to the volunteers cannot but work wonders with them. Not only will it unite the commanding officer and all those under his command in a close bond of fellow-feeling, but every one will be incited to earn the praise of his commander, to win credit for himself individually, and to contribute to the acquisition of a good name for the regiment at large. We congratulate the city of Madras on its possessing so excellent a civic corps, the first in India, and older even than those rifle regiments which have made combined Europe wonder at the inexhaustible resources of England in her impregnable system of national defence. We trust that both Government and the members of the Volunteer Guards will always cheerfully contribute to the continued maintenance of a regiment which has been a source of pride to Madras ever since its formation; the one by holding out every encouragement proper for a Government to hold out to a body of men who voluntarily rally round its banners, and the others by cheerfully, energetically, and persistently seconding the efforts of their esteemed commander to make them worthy to take their place at all times alongside the well-trained bands of the British army.—Times, June 8.

THE MADRAS MILITARY FUND.

The present seems to be the age of financial successes. Chancellors of the Exchequer instead of striving heart and soul how to make both ends meet, have now no other difficulty than the one of deciding as to the best method of disposing of surplus revenues, to the satisfaction of tax-payers. The general run of financial prosperity seems to have affected the condition of the great service funds in this Presidency, and we purpose devoting a little time this morning to the consideration of the present monetary state of the Military Fund.

Unlike the Bengal Military and Orphan Funds which it is believed are not in a satisfactory financial position, owing to the unusual drain upon their resources consequent upon the mutiny and subsequent disorganisation of the native army, the Madras Military Fund has held an unbroken career of prosperity for many years past. From a late report to the directors of the fund by their actuary, Colonel J. T. Smith, we learn that up to the 30th of April, 1858, the capital was sufficient to meet all absolute and contingent claims, with a clear surplus of rupees 12,376.00, and that the annual rate of increase of surplus capital was in round numbers about one lac of rupees per annum, so that, at the present date, the available surplus over and above all possible claims, is no less than seventeen lacs of rupees, "minus," as Colonel Smith says, "only such losses as the late changes in the constitution of the army may have ensured." The question for the directors of the Military Fund is not exactly "What shall we do with it?" for that great autocrat, Sir Charles Wood, has already manifested a desire to annex the assets of the fund, and magnanimously to assume its liabilities on behalf of the State. As a mere financial operation, the idea is not unworthy of a Secretary of State desirous of doing a good stroke of business for his Government. Seventeen lacs of rupees of surplus is not a bad capital to begin upon, wherewith to supplement by and bye the annually decreasing income resulting from the radical changes introduced by the Government in the character of the army. In ordinary cases, where Government establishments are reduced, altered, or abolished, it is usual to give compensation to those whose position and prospects have been destroyed in the work of reformation, or regeneration. Sir Charles Wood appears to have conceived the happy idea of making the subscribers to the Military Fund, whose interests have been materially affected by the so-called amalgamation of the armies, compensate themselves out of their own surplus monies. It is a cheap way of arranging the affair, but, like most cheap things, is very nasty; unworthy of the British Government, but just such a proposition as might have been expected to emanate from Sir Charles Wood.

About the beginning of the year, Sir C. Wood issued a somewhat grandiloquent despatch to the Government of India, in which he expressed his intention of taking charge of the Military Funds of the several Presidencies, guaranteeing all present and contingent claimants, but reserving to the State the right of adopting such regulations as would prevent its becoming a loser by the transaction. He desired to be informed of the opinions of the directors of the several funds, as to the best mode of securing regular payments from subscribers, who may have adopted new conditions of servitude, as in the artillery, line regiments, engineers, &c. We believe that as yet no reply has been given by the directors of the Madras Military Fund to the contents of the despatch referred to. The report of the actuaries was then daily expected, and has since arrived. The present financial position of the fund, as shown by the actuaries' report will, of course, considerably modify the tenor of the directors' reply. It behoves them, we submit, to be exceedingly cautious, and to consider the question very carefully, whether, with the present accumulation of surplus capital, and the gradual decrease which must henceforth occur, both as regards the assets and liabilities, the interests of subscribers would not be best met by retaining the management of the fund in their own hands on the present condition as regards the interest allowed on their capital. It may be all very well for Sir C. Wood to attempt to balance the possible deficiencies off one fund by the actual surplus assets of another, but the officers of the Madras army will do well to look to their rights in this matter, and see that their fund directors take no steps, and permit no violent usurpation of their privileges, without a careful consideration of the present condition and prospects of the fund, as influenced by recent changes in the constitution of the army.

Should the service be left free to dispose of their surplus funds in the manner which reason and equity would suggest, it has been pointed out by Colonel Smith that the amount is sufficient to confer the following benefits;—

1st. Reduction of the ten per cent. extra subscription and donation.

2nd. Reduction of extra donation for daughter, from 282 to 200 rupees.

3rd. Reduction of the donations only of widowers with offspring, to bachelors' rates.

4th. The abolition of all demands on account of minimum.

5th. Allowing daughters hereafter born to revert to their pensions on becoming widows.

All these undoubted benefits to present subscribers could be provided for out of the surplus funds, and yet leave an unappropriated balance of about six lacs of rupees.

However desirable it may be to appropriate the balance in the manner pointed out, Colonel Smith tells us, "it is to be feared that in consequence of the responsibility with which the Government have become charged consequent on the amalgamation of the Indian Forces and her Majesty's army, no alterations of a character beneficial to the subscribers will be permitted, without a voluntary and formal acceptance by them of the whole future management of the Institution."

The continuance of the extra ten per cent. of subscriptions and donations is shown to have been not only unnecessary, but even unjust and oppressive to subscribers. When the service agreed to discontinue it in 1860, Sir Charles Wood sternly prohibited the resolution to be acted upon, on the ground that there was no proof before him that the contributions of subscribers were in excess of the necessities of the fund. The rule sanctioning the increase of ten per cent., was only intended to continue in force for five years, but it has been acted upon ever since 1844.

Colonel Smith seems to think that the losses to the fund consequent on the amalgamation of the armies, and the formation of an Indian Staff Corps, will be less than is generally supposed. He calculates these prospective losses for Madras at about thirteen and a half lacs of rupees, and to meet that, supposing nothing else is done with the surplus, there is money in hand to the tune of seventeen lacs, which with its annually accruing interest will be more than sufficient, apparently, to render the fund for ever safe, even supposing that not another new member is permitted to join. Under these circumstances, it were well to act with extreme caution in determining whether the fund shall stand by itself, or be handed over to the tender mercies of Sir Charles Wood. It is a thousand pities that such a glorious institution should be permitted to die from inanition. How many widows and orphans have had cause to bless the day of its establishment, its ancient records alone can tell. It has done, and is still doing, an excellent work of Christian love and charity, and with Colonel Smith we would ask:—Is it not to be regretted, that instead "of our willingly allowing this noble institution, which has proved of such inestimable value and service to the army for which it was created, to be gradually destroyed and put an end to, the alternative of extending the same, or the like benefits to as many as practicable of her Majesty's forces, should not, to say the least, be made the subject of careful investigation?"—Athenæum and Statesman, June 8.

RANGOON AND MAULMAIN.—We have received Rangoon and Maulmain papers to the end of May. Lieutenant Colonel Tickell assumed charge of the commissioner's office on the 26th ultimo, and Major Ardagh has proceeded to Arracan to assume the commissionership of that province. A new River Steam Company has been started under very favourable auspices, the leading firms at Rangoon being part proprietors. Much dissatisfaction was felt at the delay in the receipt of the telegraph wire intended for the line between Rangoon and Maulmain. The posts throughout the entire distance have been for some time past completed, but it appears uncertain as to when the wire will arrive from England. The cholera, which threatened to decimate the troops stationed at Thayetmyo, has, we are glad to learn, almost entirely disappeared. A number of European soldiers fell victims to the disease. The medical officers sent by the Government from Rangoon, on receipt of intelligence that additional assistance was urgently required, have returned. From Mandalay, the Royal capital, we learn that the King had left his palace for a tour in the country. In his absence, the "War Prince," his brother, occupied the palace and assumed temporary authority. Bassein is at present very unhealthy: cholera prevails, and no medical assistance is to be had. The Maulmain Advertiser notices the launch of a schooner designed and built by the Burmese, without any kind of European assistance. The vessel is about ninety tons burthen, "of a very pretty shape, and perfectly unique." The Toungoo controversy, in which Mr. and Mrs. Mason, the American missionaries, take such a prominent part, is just now engaging the attention of the local press.—Bengal Hurkaru, June 9.

THE NEW RUPEE.—The Governor of Pondicherry refused to allow the new coinage to pass current in his dominions before the coins had been tested. The new rupees were accordingly tested, and found to be less pure than those issued by the Company; so the Pondicherry Government has refused to accept them. A correspondence with the Madras Government is going on. The new rupees were issued under an Act of the Imperial Legislature which defines the respective quantities of pure metal and alloy.

MADRAS CIVIL FUND (CHARITY BRANCH).—The attention of the subscribers to the Civil Fund is particularly requested to the second clause of the Rules of the Subsidiary Fund, given below:—"Clause 2.—That to entitle the daughter of a party or subscriber as aforesaid to the provisions specified in the foregoing rule, a notification of her birth shall be made within three months from the date thereof to the trustees of the fund in India, or the agents in England. The notification shall be made in writing by the father of the child, or in his absence by the mother, under special authority from him, and shall be accompanied by a promise to pay to the trustees within twelve months from the date of the child's birth the said sum of £30, with interest at 8 per cent. for the interval. It is to be understood that this payment is to be made whether the child live or die."

LORD HARRIS, the late Governor of Madras, who is appointed head of the household of the new Princess of Wales, is stated to have been guilty of the most awful sins of grammar in writing a public letter on behalf of the Princess. The London correspondent of the Madras Athenæum writes:—"Lord Harris, your late Governor, who has been appointed head of the household of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, after taking a week over the job, at last sent a letter on behalf of the Princess, thanking the city folks for their magnificent present. It abounds with grammatical blunders, which would disgrace a boy on the lowest form of a twopenny school, and makes the Princess talk such nonsense that it is to be hoped she will not entrust the noble lord with the duty of representing her in writing again." And these are the sort of men that are made to fill the highest appointments in England's colonies.—Indian Mirror.

AN HOTEL SQUABBLE.—In default of important events the newspapers are fain to record at length the details of such contemptible squabbles as a dispute between Colonel R. White, of H.M.'s 17th Lancers, and Mr. Sylk, an hotel-keeper at Ootacamund. Because Colonel White was under the impression that the two French maid-servants of his family, who were Roman Catholics, were badly fed, he began an angry correspondence with the hotel-keeper, which resulted in the colonial being foiled in an action he brought before the Sub-Judge against Mr. Sylk for intending to provoke a breach of the peace. A second case arose out of this. Mr. McIvor appearing to assist Mr. Sylk, a Mr. Sharpe used to Colonel White disgraceful language regarding Mr. McIvor, for which he apologised to the Court but not to Mr. McIvor. The latter accordingly charged Mr. Sharpe, under Section 504 of the Penal Code, with using insulting language likely to cause a breach of the peace. The case was dismissed.—Friend of India.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE CHIEF JUSTICE.—The Madras Government and the Chief Justice, Sir Colley Scotland, are at issue "in reference to the ministerial establishment proposed for the original side of the High Court." The Government consider that Rs. 1,500 per month is ample for the office of registrar on the original side of the Court, and appear to look upon the decision of Sir Barnes Peacock in fixing that amount as the salary of a registrar, in the original jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court, as a precedent. The office of clerk of the Insolvent Court is to be abolished, and a Crown prosecutor appointed on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per month. The office of master is to be retained until the end of the year. On the appellate side of the Court the registrar's salary has been fixed at Rs. 2,000 per month. For the future, only one hindoo law officer, or pundit, will be retained, whilst the salary of the Mahomedan law officer has been reduced one-half. These changes were to come into effect from the 1st of June.

THE FAMINE AT HYDERABAD.—The famine prices at which food sells are ascribed to the Prime Minister who, it is asserted, has farmed out the monopoly of buying and selling grain to a corporation of Mahajans, who are reaping a rich harvest at the expense of the poor. Ostensibly the Premier has been trying to retrieve his error, by sending for, some say eight lacs and others two lacs of rupees' worth of rice from Calcutta, but even the maximum amount would bring just sufficient to feed the populace for a week. Crows are exposed for sale in the market, that pious or "philanthropic" Hindoos should pay for their release in palliation of their own sins. As they are set free by the dozen, the vendors earn a pretty good penny by this singular item of their trade. The Nizam is eulogised for having prohibited cock-fighting in the city and its suburbs. We have little faith in attacks on the Nawab Salar Jung. He is far before his co-religionists in enlightenment, and, where he ruler of Hyderabad, would soon make it as safe and comfortable as Delhi.

THE NEW EDITOR OF THE LOCAL "TIMES" arrived here by the last overland steamer, and the new hand is detected in recent editorials. His literary reputation is very meritorious for comparatively so young a man, and the honours he obtained at college warrant the anticipation that he will prove, not only a successful conductor of the excellent journal committed to his charge, but also an ornament to the Indian press generally. The proprietors of the Times are, I hear, paying him very handsome terms; and considering the comparative low cost of living at this presidency, Mr. Austin will, doubtless, find his exertions better remunerated than does any other Indian editor but he of your Saturday Review. The Madras Times has recently come out in a new coat worthy of its position in the fourth estate, and if the proprietors have had their days of loss and vexation, they are evidently now enjoying such prosperity as is the just reward of the unceasing exertions of Mr. Wray, the managing proprietor.

THE COTTON CROPS.—Rather unfavourable accounts have been received of the Tinnevely cotton crops, and the collector reports to Government that although the area of land under cultivation is much wider than last year, neither the yield nor quality of cotton will be equal to that of the crop last year, owing to the unusually abundant rains which fell in the district last month. It is rather premature, apparently, to form an estimate as to the supply, and people here hope the collector's prognostications will not be borne out by the result of the season. At the end of last month 1,082,127 acres were under cotton, and 126,522 acres under indigo cultivation in this presidency, against 859,573 acres and 113,212 acres respectively at a corresponding date last year. In Kurnool the cotton cultivation has almost doubled, being 114,753 acres, against 65,253 acres last year; in Bellary the comparison is 389,527 acres, against 294,287 acres; in Coimbatore, 126,000 acres, against 82,445 acres; in Tinnevely, 260,815, against 184,891 acres; and in South Arcot, 38,391, against 16,185 acres. The cultivation of indigo is evidently checked by the long absence of demand for the article in the local market, and by the heavy stocks in hand here which the European houses are not inclined to touch at present prices. Cotton is coming in very freely, and the dealers have obtained an advance of about Rs. 2 per candy on all kinds. Numerous purchases on Bombay account, ranging from Rs. 242 to Rs. 245 for Salem, and Rs. 250 to Rs. 252 for Western, are reported, and the market is very sensitive. Imports, on the other hand, are as dull as possible; and whilst dealers are not inclined to lay in stock at present rate, holders are as determined not to reduce their rates; and as the quantity of goods on the way is not heavy, any change for the worse is scarcely probable, unless a war ensue between Great Britain and America, a calamity which by suddenly affecting the cotton market is likely enough to cause widespread commercial distress. During the last six days the Bank of Madras shares have been in active demand, thanks chiefly to speculators in your market, and the price cash advanced Rs. 100 to Rs. 102 on the 26th ultimo to Rs. 124 per cent. premium on this day. A large dividend is anticipated.

THE PROPOSED MARRIAGE BILL.

The Friend of India (May 28) publishes a very sensible letter from a correspondent on the proposed Marriage Bill. This question of a Marriage Law is made a questio vexata in India, and we think very unnecessarily and absurdly made so. There surely can be no real difficulty in the matter of marriage legislation in a country like India, where there is no established Church, and, consequently, no dissenting Churches, with supposedly conflicting interests. The only difficulty is caused by the legislators themselves, who with the inflexibility of determination lug into their legislation sectarianism, with all its mole-hill distinctions magnified into mountains of separation, and its non-essential differences aggravated into disrupting schisms. Now, our Indian legislators have nothing at all to do with this legion of evils. They cannot, however, bring themselves to realise that they have no concern with them; they cannot disabuse their minds of the false notion that all these evils necessarily exist in India, and create difficulties in their work of legislation. They proceed to their work on the erroneous supposition that there is in India a legally established State Church, and a number of non-conforming churches that are, of course, not on a legal equality with it; and that they must, consequently, so legislate as to set up the former above the latter, as regards legal rights and privileges. They proceed to their work on the equally erroneous supposition that one class of Christian clergymen in India are more truly ministers of Christ than another class, and that they must, consequently, so legislate that the ordinances solemnised by the former shall be more legal than those solemnised by the latter. Now, our Indian legislators have no more call to take up the questions of a connection between Church and State and of Apostolical succession than we have an intention or wish to do it; and, moreover, they are as little called to keep these questions, and the distinctions and difference that grow out of them, in view in their legislation. They persist, however, in doing this, and thus put unnecessary difficulties in their own way. The correspondent of the Friend of India offers some sensible suggestions. They are as follow:—

"1st. Let all Protestant clergymen and Catholic priests of good and regular standing and magistrates be considered Marriage Registrars, with as many additional Hindoo or Mussulman Registrars as may be necessary for the different communities. The latter to be specially appointed by a commissioner or some officer of a district. 2nd. Let an uniform system of licence, registration, and certificate, be established for the whole of India and for every class of people. 3rd. That it be obligatory upon those proposing to marry, to obtain of any Marriage Registrar a licence in which must be stated, in the presence of witnesses, answers to questions asked why there are no objections to the marriage of the applicants. 4th. When the marriage has been performed let it be duly registered and certificate given. 5th. Suitable penalties for the neglect of duty by registrars."

"By the first each would know his simple duty, and there would be registrars for all classes of people, both Christian and heathen. By the licences, registrations, and certificates, the legality of marriages would be assured, which is the object of legislation, while the parties could choose whatever ceremony they might prefer. There would then be no difference legally between the marriage of the European, native Christian, Mahomedan, or Hindu. The legality of any marriage could easily be determined by reference to the licence, register, or certificate. This uniform system of licence, registration, and certificate for all the people would afford valuable statistics obtainable without difficulty."

One cannot read these suggestions, and the remarks that follow them, without seeing how few real difficulties there are in the matter of marriage legislation in India, if our legislators would only agree to put imaginary ones out of view. Really a Marriage Bill need not have more clauses than the number of suggestions made by the Friend's correspondent. Let these few simple, sensible, and practicable suggestions be framed into a Bill, and let such a Bill pass into an enactment, and we should have a marriage law in India which would give our legislators no difficulty to make, our law courts no trouble to enforce, and her Majesty's Indian subjects no annoyance to observe.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MAHARAJA SCINDIA.—The Gwalior correspondent of the Indu Prakash, a Marathe newspaper, states that on the occasion of the birth of a son to the Maharaja Scindia, his Highness distributed rupees one hundred to each Brahmin in his capital, the aggregate sum given in charity amounting to Rs. 1,40,000.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—The line from Bulsar to Bombay will be open to the public at the end of next month; the work is prosecuted vigorously under the supervision of Colonel Kennedy. The two bridges at Bassein are now ready, and the bridge over the river Vittur is nearly so. The main station will be fixed at Grant-road. Arrangements are at present being made with regard to the line from Grant-road to Colaba, which will run through Black Bay at the distance of half a mile from Sonapore. The terminus, it is alleged, will be fixed at the place occupied by the gun carriage manufactory.

NEW BANK.—Arrangements have been completed to establish a new Bank in Bombay, to be called the Royal Bank of India. The direction, we understand, is likely consist of the following gentlemen:—Andrew Grant, Esq., T. F. Gray, Esq., W. F. Stearns, Esq., Kursondass Madhoddass, Esq., Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, Esq., Dinshaw Manockjee Petty, Esq. The local manager is to be Mr. Gordon, now of the Central Bank; and Mr. McCulloch, now of the Agra Bank, is to be the London Agent.

THE REBEL HOONDEES.—We understand that Captain Nuttall has expressed his regret that so much importance has been attached to his statement concerning rebel hoodies, and has disowned all intention of impugning the loyalty of the Hon. Mr. Sunkersett in connection with the drafts manufactured by the police at Sholapore. The public will, in all probability, hear more of the case presently.—Times of India.

TOUR OF DR. HAUG.—We (Poona Observer) understand the Government of Bombay has sanctioned the proposal mentioned in Mr. Howard's report, to send Dr. Martin Haug, the Sanscrit Professor, on a tour in Guzerat, during the ensuing cold season, to inspect manuscripts. Dr. Haug will be accompanied by one or two Parsee and Hindoo scholars capable of assisting his researches. There is said to be a Parsee manuscript at Broach twelve hundred years old, and others of great value in other parts of the country. The expedition cannot fail to throw great light on the ancient history of India.

THE SCINDE RAILWAY.—The progress report published by the traffic manager of the Scinde Railway for the quarter ending the 30th of April last shows that the trade on this line is rapidly on the increase. The rolling stock is found to be quite inadequate for the traffic, and orders for additional engines and carriages have been already sent to England. The advantage of the railway over the uncertain and dangerous river route from Kotree is appreciated by all classes of native merchants. The weekly traffic for the three months ending December, 1862, averaged Rs. 7,000, while, during the first three months of 1863, Rs. 20,000 has been the average. The cotton traffic continues to steadily increase. It is anticipated that the trade of Kurrachee for the year ending May 31 will reach five million sterling, showing an increase of over two millions, as compared with the preceding year. The report adds, that owing to the want of presses for cotton, wool, &c., much of the trade that would find its way to Kurrachee is now shipped to Bombay. The camel trade with Cabool, Herat, Khandahar, &c., shows a great increase. About four or five years ago, to quote the report, about one thousand, or, at the most, two thousand camels used to come down every year into Kurrachee, bringing as their principal loads, dried fruits, raisins, &c. During the year ending 30th July, 1862, four thousand camels came down bringing, besides fruits, a considerable quantity of wool, and during the nine months of the present year to end the 30th of June, 1863, seven thousand camels have come down, bringing about four thousand packages of fruit and ten thousand bales of wool. This latter product has alone realised £135,000, of which about £90,000 has been taken back in English piece goods; and the remaining £50,000 in cash. It is a noticeable fact that this is the first year in which these hillmen have taken back money, proving, in the words of the report, "That they have become fully aware of the value of their produce, and that a large and prosperous trade is about to be developed." There are good grounds for believing that this camel-trade will go on steadily increasing, and that next year the number arriving will reach ten thousand. Strange to say, Kurrachee does not afford much encouragement to this increasing trade. The supply of piece goods is so limited, "that these hillmen have to proceed to Bombay to purchase their return goods. Of the £90,000 in goods taken in exchange for wool, cotton, fruits, &c., £1,000 will represent the purchases made in Kurrachee."

ENCOUNTER WITH A BEAR.—NAGPORE, June 1. —As getting wounded by wild animals appears to be fashionable amongst sportsmen now-a-days, you may, perhaps, be interested to hear that benighted Nagpore is not behind the world in this respect; for a short time ago Captain Morris, the district superintendent of police, was brought into the station with some severe wounds in his side, which he had received in an encounter with a she bear and her cubs. It would appear that he had wounded the mother, and had just time to possess himself of another gun when she charged. Unfortunately his shikaree was in the way, so that he could not fire. On seeing this Captain Morris called to the man to get on one side; but no—all that the shikaree knew was that the bear was unpleasantly close behind him, and instead of running to either the right or the left, ran straight down upon the captain, without, apparently, making the slightest effort to avoid a collision. The result was that Captain Morris, who was waiting to receive the bear, was thrown violently upon his side almost before he knew where he was, and the next moment the bear was upon him. Mrs. Bruin, however, does not seem to have had it quite all her own way; for though she succeeded in seizing Captain Morris by the side, still she had her nose hammered with the butt end of the gun to such an extent that she was glad to let go and make a rapid retreat. Captain Morris says he could have shot the creature three or four times over if the barrels of his gun had been a foot shorter; but as it was, the bear was so close, and the gun so long, he could not get the muzzle to bear on the side of the brute. This would certainly lead one to say, if you are likely to come to close quarters choose short barrels instead of long.

THE ENGLISHMAN'S TOMB.—Few visitors have gone to Tatta without devoting some leisure to the inspection of the fine mausoleum with which the Mucklee Hills are studded, and many, no doubt, have seen, among these resting places of the old Kings of Tatta, the "Englishman's Tomb." It marks the grave of a Mr. Edward Cooke, who, it seems, as early as the beginning of the eighteenth century, paid a visit to Sind, and died at Tatta, or in its vicinity, and was interred by his faithful servant. From the tenor of the following inscription this servant must have been a man of attainments above the average of those which fall to the lot of his class:—

"Here lies the manes of Edward Cooke, who was taken out of the flower of his age—a person of great merit and great esteem, and much lamented by all his friends; learned, in many languages, of great humanity, a sound judgment, and of a generous disposition, who departed this life the 8th of May, 1713.

Etatis sue, 21.
As blooming lilies grace the field,
So for a day they shine,
Like him to God above they yield
Their lives, but not their names resign,
To whose memory his servant erected this tomb."

When Sir Bartle Frere was Commissioner he found this tomb in a very dilapidated condition, and had it repaired. At the same time Sir Bartle caused the largest and finest of the tombs to be seen on the hills, in which repose the remains of Meerza Eesa, a ruler of Tatta, to be repaired also. This Meerza Eesa died in 974 (A.D. 1566), and is famous in the annals of Sind for having, in a war with the Sultan Mahomed Khan of Bukker, in 1555, called a body of "Furinghees" to his assistance. These proved unpleasant allies, "for (says the historian, Mahomed Masoon by name) they looted and burned Tatta (Meerza Eesa's own capital), seizing some of the people, whom they carried away. The day previous to their looting Tatta these Furinghees threw some spirits into the river, when the water of it became ignited. We have searched in vain for any account of Mr. Cooke's visit to Scinde or its object. It is believed, however, that he came to inspect the manufactures of Tatta. Should any of our readers be possessed of particulars on this subject we shall be most happy to receive the information.—Sindian, May 16.

KURRACHEE, June 5.—Mr. Mansfield, our esteemed commissioner, returned from the Persian Gulf in the Hugh Lindsay, on the 30th ult., under the usual booming of thirteen guns. It is rumoured here that the commissioner intends proceeding to Bombay to meet his brother Sir William, who, Dame Rumour sayeth, will shortly be appointed Commander-in-Chief of India. The Chamber of Commerce have memorialised her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, re-agitating the question of annexing Sind with the Punjab.

Accidents on the railway resulting in loss of life are becoming quite common in Sind. Some startling accidents have occurred lately in which loss of life, or dreadful mutilation of the body, forms a chapter of horrors in the history of each case. The Chamber of Commerce have determined to revive the pet schemes shelved under financial pressure, and urged the question of direct steam communication between Aden and Kurrachee; but Sir Charles Wood has declined to sanction this, on the ground that, although the mails, if brought twice in the month direct from Aden to Kurrachee would no doubt be a great boon to Sind and the provinces in communication with it, the delays and disadvantages which would result in the receipt of the mails in other parts of India prevent H.M.'s Government from acceding to the proposal of the memorialists; and thus, for once at least, a plain intelligible reply of the causes of dissent have been vouchsafed.

CEYLON.H. E. THE GOVERNOR.

It is with great regret we notice that the rumour, rather freely circulated here lately, seems to have assumed shape and consistency within the last few days to the effect that his Excellency Sir Charles MacCarthy meditates a trip home very shortly, for the benefit of his health, which has been a subject of much anxiety for some time back.

It would be quite premature to speculate on the arrangements which such an event would call for among our local authorities—and indeed we sincerely trust further measures, such as the proposed trip in the Pearl, may obviate the necessity of his Excellency's departure from our midst; but as we find that some misconception exists regarding the appointment of a Lieut.-Governor, we may be excused for the following remarks.

The nomination of any person to the office of Lieutenant-governor (in the event of the death, absence, or otherwise of the Governor) will depend on the nature of the commission which the Governor holds. When Major-general Lockyer and Colonel Wilkinson (both of whom held the post of lieutenant-governor) assumed that office, the proclamation was worded as follows:—"It is hereby proclaimed that, by virtue of the provisions contained in her Majesty's Commission appointing Sir Henry Ward Governor of Ceylon, the senior officer for the time being in command of the land forces has assumed the administration of Government."

But when Sir Charles MacCarthy became Lieut.-Governor in 1855, the proclamation ran thus:—"It is hereby proclaimed that by virtue of her Majesty's Commission, directed to the Hon. C. J. MacCarthy, he has this day assumed the office of Lieut.-Governor."

Her Majesty's Commission appointing Sir Charles as Governor provides that the senior officer in command of the land forces shall assume the office of Lieut.-Governor. Unless, therefore, the Colonial Secretary receives a special commission from the Queen, before the Governor's departure from the island, appointing him, Lieut.-Governor, the Major-general will be entitled to assume that office by virtue of the commission to Sir Charles.

A correspondent writes in regard to the above:—It is rumoured in many circles that the medical advisers of His Excellency the Governor have advised him to take a voyage to England for the restoration of his health. I presume that if the report be true,—and that the heat of the Red Sea does not prove an obstacle in the way of following such advice—that the reins of Government will not in Sir Charles MacCarthy's absence be entrusted to the Major-general. To one who has been so short a time in the colony such a charge would be out of place; and the only other gentleman to whom the public could look with confidence, notwithstanding the parsimony of his public policy, is Mr. W. C. Gibson. He has had to do most of the work for a long time; and if an opportunity presents itself, he is surely as entitled to the pleasures and advantages, as well as the drawbacks of office.—Colombo Observer.

HON. F. SAUNDERS.—We understand that the above gentleman—treasurer of Ceylon—does not after all, intend returning to the island. We believe the requisite time for his claim for pension expires in July, when Mr. Saunders will retire from the service. No doubt Messrs. Vane and Stephens, at present acting as treasurer and collector of Customs respectively, will be confirmed in these positions.

THE PIONEER SIKHS.—We regret to hear that the Sikhs lately arrived have already manifested symptoms of insubordination—the body attached to Mr. Evatt's force at Ambanpittia having, it is said, refused to work on the roads. Their statement is just what was feared; they have come here to handle arms of a very different nature from those the commissioner of roads and his deputies would impose on them. We trust, however, that matters will be satisfactorily arranged.

CROWN LANDS IN CEYLON.—The Colombo Observer states that the revenue derived from the sale of Crown lands in Ceylon, which has hitherto averaged £40,000 a year, promises this year to be very large. Owing to an unusual demand for land, and the new facilities offered for its purchase in small lots, natives are as eager to purchase as Europeans. At a recent sale 1,094 acres sold for £4,497, an average of £2. 13s. per acre. It must be remembered that Ceylon is the size of Assam, is well peopled, and has been long under a careful Government. Darjeeling, in India, is a parallel case, and there land lately sold at £3 an acre. But the case of the vast unpeopled wastes of Hindostan is very different.

THE CHRISTIAN VERNACULAR EDUCATION SOCIETY.—The society whose name heads this article, as most of our readers are aware, has taken the place and does the duty here of the Singhalese Tract Society, and has therefore strong claims on all who desire to see Ceylon really prosperous. Such will probably have a visit from its indefatigable secretary, Mr. John Murdoch, and to assist him in collecting his subscriptions we gladly draw attention to the society and its claims. Many claims could be urged, but there is one which, like Aaron's rod, swallows up all the rest, and on it the society may safely lean for its support in Ceylon. It affords the best means of meeting the controversy which is now raging between the native Christians and the Buddhists. For a long time it was difficult to create an interest in the minds of the natives on the subject of Christianity, and missionaries laboured on finding their labour very heavy. But a spirit of enquiry was aroused by the appearance of a book published by the society, and written by the late lamented Mr. Gogerly on Buddhism and the Evidences of Christianity. To meet the defections from their ranks, the Buddhist Priests awoke from their stupor, and the few men among them possessing brains which they could use began to attack Christianity. Those attacks are now systematic. They are not confined to lectures in which the ribald blasphemy of Tom Paine—flavoured with the coarseness of low and uneducated priests—are set forth before ignorant and admiring crowds; but now printing presses are at work, and the untruths which ungodly malice has coined concerning the Gospel, are disseminated all over the land. The Christian Vernacular Society endeavours to stem the torrent; and by the supply of little books showing what the Gospel really is, it is hoped to make the excitement subservient to the progress of truth.—Colombo Observer.

SALE OF A COFFEE ESTATE.—The Rangbodde Coffee Estate, the property of the late General Fraser, and comprising a total extent of 1,000 acres, of which 240 are planted with coffee, was sold by Messrs. Venn and Co., on Saturday, for £14,000 to Mr. C. L. Ferdinands, advocate.

SALE OF LAND.—One hundred and seventy acres of land in Saffragam, between Balangodde and Hapbootella, sold on Saturday for £4 per acre. This price, we hear, would be equivalent to £6 per acre of forest. Mr. Gibson, merchant, is the purchaser.

COLONEL RAINES, C.B.—We regret to hear that Colonel Raines, C.B., Commanding at Hyderabad, is suffering from a severe fall from his horse.

We regret to announce the death of Lieut.-colonel James M'Grigor, who was drowned at Aden on the 28th of June. This officer belonged to the Bombay Native Infantry, and served in one of its regiments throughout the campaign of Scinde, under Sir Charles Napier, on which occasion he was favourably noticed by his great commander. His other services were also meritorious. During the Indian mutiny his conduct was such that the Secretary of State for War attributed the suppression of an outbreak in the Bombay Presidency to the prompt and vigorous measures of Major M'Grigor. A plot had been formed by the men of one of the regiments at Bombay to murder the officers, and, in concert with other Sepoys, to pillage and massacre all the Christian residents in Bombay. Major M'Grigor, however, possessed the confidence of the soldiers, one of whom divulged the particulars of the plot, and named the hour—viz., midnight—which was fixed for its execution. Accordingly he galloped off for reinforcements, summoned the regiment for parade a quarter of an hour before midnight, and obliged the intended mutineers to lay down their arms. The late Colonel M'Grigor was not more remarkable for courage and presence of mind than for generosity and kindness of heart. His life was unselfish and his death premature. He was son of the late Colonel M'Grigor, who commanded her Majesty's 70th Regiment, and nephew of the late Sir James M'Grigor, who was for thirty-eight years Director-general of the Army Medical Department.

THE ARMY.—The officers on the staff whose battalions are about to embark for India have been treated rather sharply, if not, indeed, with actual injustice, by the authorities, in being suddenly ordered to join their regiments. Most of them are staff college men, and all obtained their appointments with the understanding that, unless their corps were ordered on active service in the field, they would be left in the staff for five years. It certainly seems an anomaly that because a battalion is going to India, its officers cannot remain on the staff out in India, while, if its destination be New Zealand, or any other foreign station, they are suffered to hold their appointments. We are aware that the cause is to be found in the financial arrangements under which the army in India is paid out of the Indian revenues, but it would be very easy to accommodate matters with the Indian Government as we have accommodated them as regards other financial complications of a more formidable kind.—Army and Navy Gazette.

ESTATES OF DECEASED OFFICERS, &c.

No. 295.—The foll. letters are published for those concerned:—

From the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India to H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council (No. 87, dated India Office, London, Feb. 25, 1863).

My Lord.—In continuation of my military despatch, No. 172, dated April 30 last, relative to the returns, remittances, &c., from the new brigades of R.A., I forward copy [dated Jan. 30, No. 45, general, No. 250], of a further letter from the War office, relative to the returns, remittances, &c., from the new line regiments.

2. I have at the same to inform you that it has been resolved, for the convenience of the public service, that the estates of all officers and soldiers of the new brigades of art., and the new line regts., who have died, or who may die prior to the 1st April next, shall be distributed by this office.

3. As those estates are not liable to be detained in India like the estates of officers and soldiers of H.M.'s local Indian service, any balances now in the hands of the military sec. on account of such estates must be remitted to this office at the earliest date practicable; and the estates of those who may die must likewise be remitted monthly in a separate schedule for payment to the legal representatives.

4. I have therefore to request that you will cause the necessary instructions to be issued, and communicate the same to the Govts. of Madras and Bombay for their information and guidance.

5. In case of the disposal of any of the estates in question by your military sec. to parties in India who may be entitled to the same, regard must be had to the limit of fifty pounds (£50) to be paid without letters of administration in such cases as distinguished from the limit (£100) in the case of estates of deceased officers and soldiers of H.M.'s local service.

[Here follows letter referred to, acquiescing in suggestions previously submitted.]

SANITARY STATE OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

MORE than three years ago Commissioners were appointed by her Majesty Queen Victoria to inquire into the sanitary state of the army in India. The Commissioners have at last presented their Report, and a very elaborate and valuable one it is. The Commissioners apologise satisfactorily enough for the delay that has occurred in its preparation. It was chiefly occasioned by the necessity of obtaining the results of a preliminary local inquiry at all the Indian stations. Printed questions were sent to all the stations and replied to by commanding, engineering, and medical officers. The unavoidable delay on this account was increased by the loss of the first chairman of the Commission, the late Lord Herbert, and of Mr. Alexander, the late Director General of the Army Medical Department. To supply these losses Dr. Gibson, the present Director-General, and Colonel Durand (since called to India) were added to the Commission, and Lord Stanley consented to succeed Lord Herbert as chairman.

The report has been prepared in a most workman-like style. It is so full and satisfactory in its details, and these are divided and arranged in such lucid order, that the reader can consult any portion of it with the greatest facility, and make himself master of the main points of information with very little trouble, and no unnecessary loss of time.

It must be confessed that the results of this careful, judicious, and honest inquiry are anything but creditable to the Indian Government. It is most painful, indeed, to find that so much human life has been wasted since we possessed the country, partly from sheer ignorance, but chiefly from a most disgraceful want of care in the selection of civil and military stations, and of neglect of the most ordinary sanitary measures, such as the cutting down of thick jungle, and the supply of good drainage. The British public will surely be shocked to learn at what a horrible sacrifice of human life we have held dominion in India. In the healthy parts of England about 8 soldiers in every 1,000 die annually. But the Commissioners report that the death-rate of the British soldier, since the first occupation of the country down to the present day, has oscillated round 69 per 1,000. "If the mortality is set down at 69 in 1,000, it follows that, besides death by natural causes, 61, or, taking the English standard, 60 head per 1,000 of our troops perish in India annually. A company out of every regiment has been sacrificed every twenty months. These companies fade away in the prime of life; leave few children; and have been replaced, at great cost, by successive shiploads of recruits. It was time, indeed, for the British Government to inquire how this frightful state of things could be remedied. It is not only the dreadful cost of human life, but the enormous pecuniary loss, that had become a matter of serious and most anxious consideration to the Government, especially when, after the mutiny, we increased the British forces to upwards of 84,000 men. They formed a very large proportion of the British population in India, which the Report before us rates at 125,945, including both the army and the civil service; the whole British population of India not being equal to that of one English county town of ordinary size, nor equal, indeed, to the London parish of Marylebone. Every European soldier sent out to India costs the State about £100—sometimes much more. Then we have not only to calculate the pecuniary loss by deaths, but the expense of hospitals for the sick. In the Indian hospitals there are nearly 3,000 beds for the sick almost always occupied, and the State loses yearly by the deaths 4,000 or 5,000 men, or about five regiments. This is a frightful calculation. Every regiment in India of 1,000 strong is said to cost £100,000. The loss of our troops in battle is small in comparison with the deaths from disease. From a careful calculation of the deaths of officers during twenty years it was found that where 122 officers were killed in battle or died of their wounds, more than twenty times that number died of the diseases of the climate.

No wonder the insurance offices make so great a distinction between an Indian and a home life. At the age of thirty the annual premium of the insurance office on a life in England is £2. 4s. 10d.; on an officer's life in India it is £4 to insure £100. The private soldier's life is still more precarious than that of his officer, who has more of the comforts of life, and is better able to resist the evils of the climate. It is found that the married officers, though generally older than the bachelors, have far better chances of life. The life with out a home in India is said to be triply fatal. Married men have more comforts, and do not live so fast a life as their unmarried brethren. The unmarried common soldier in India is sadly tempted to indulge in all sorts of excesses, especially that of drink. He may thoroughly intoxicate himself for a penny.

The mortality of infantry soldiers in Fort William during one period of ten years was 102 per 1,000. Calcutta is a terribly unhealthy station, and the troops there are surrounded with temptations to excesses. The land is not much more than a single foot above the level of the Hooghly at high water. It is so flat and low that it has always been difficult to drain it, and only very lately a most costly attempt, and on a very large scale, has been made to drain it on a new principle. The ultimate success of this attempt is yet very doubtful.

By far the larger proportion of the mortality in the Indian army has arisen from endemic diseases, and notably from fever, diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera, and diseases of the liver.

Amongst the chief recommendations of the Commissioners are the reduction to a minimum of the strategic points on the alluvial plains, the location of a third of the military force at hill stations, and the erection of all barracks—at least the sleeping apartments in them—above the reach of the ground malaria.

Hitherto, it is said that the arrangements in India for the cure of disease have been most admirable, but very little has been done for the prevention of disease. On this little point, we trust, the Government of India is about to turn over a new leaf.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—A general meeting of the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company was held on Friday last, when the directors presented a report on the financial situation and state of the works. M. de Lesseps, president of the company, afterwards spoke in strong terms against the allegations and attacks contained in the recent Turkish note, which, though signed by Ali Pasha, might very properly, he declared, have been countersigned by Sir Henry Bulwer. All the passages of that part of the report which spoke of English intrigues against the execution of the Suez Canal were loudly cheered. M. de Lesseps met with a no less unanimous adhesion when he compared what he called the jealous and meddling policy of the British Cabinet with the support given to the undertaking by the French Government. Two essential facts were set forth in the report; the first that, as the financial resources of the company amount to more than sixty-eight millions, no call of funds will be made for more than a year to come; the second, that the works are now so far advanced that towards the end of the present year the first direct and continuous communication will be opened between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, until the moment when, in three years, the maritime canal of the prescribed width and depth shall unite the two seas.

"Schedule of all Trust Accounts whereof the final Balances have been paid to the persons entitled to the same, specifying the amount of such Balances, and the persons to whom paid. Prepared from 1st July to 31st December, 1862, under Section XXXIV. of Act. VIII. of 1855."

And that the said Schedules are open to the inspection of the public, in the Department of the Official Agent to the Administrators-general of India, at the India Office.

INDIA OFFICE, Victoria-street, Westminster, 10th July, 1863.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL GIVES NOTICE, that he is desirous of RAISING a SUM of not exceeding £3,000,000 STERLING upon the security of "India Four per Cent. Stock," to enable him to redeem £1,824,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th October next, and £3,172,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th April, 1864.

The Stock to be created on 8th October, 1863, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, 22nd and 23rd Victoria, cap. 39, and to bear Interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly at the Bank of England, on 5th April and 10th October in each year.

The Stock not to be redeemable until 10th October, 1888, but to be redeemable at par on or after that day upon one year's previous notice having been given in the London Gazette, by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The books of the Stock will be kept at the Bank of England, where all assignments and transfers will be made. No stamp duties whatsoever will be charged on the transfers.

To facilitate the arrangements for the creation of the above-named "India Four per Cent. Stock," the Secretary of State for India in Council gives notice to the holders of the aforesaid £1,824,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th October next, and £3,172,500 India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th April, 1864, that he is willing to grant in exchange for "India Four per Cent. Debentures" a like amount of "India Four per Cent. Stock" at par.

The Stock thus created may be registered in the books of the Bank of England, or at the option of the holders of Debentures they may receive, in exchange for their Debentures, "Stock Certificates" in lieu of Stock registered in their names.

The "Stock Certificates" to be payable to bearer, and to have coupons attached to them payable half-yearly on 5th April and 10th October in each year at the Bank of England, and to be for amounts of £100, £500, and £1,000.

On and after the 8th November next, all holders of the aforesaid "India Four per Cent. Stock," being registered in the books of the Bank of England, may at any time receive at the Bank of England "Stock Certificates" upon the transfer of a like amount of registered Stock, and upon payment of a fee of two shillings and sixpence per cent. upon the capital amount of "Stock Certificates" received in exchange for registered Stock; and in like manner holders of "Stock Certificates" shall, upon the delivery of such Certificates at the Bank of England, and upon payment of a fee of two shillings and sixpence upon each "Stock Certificate" so delivered up, be entitled to a like amount of "Stock" registered in the books of the Bank of England in such names as the holders shall direct.

The holders of India Four per Cent. Debentures falling due on 8th October next, and on 8th April, 1864, who are willing to accept "India Four per Cent. Stock" in exchange for such debentures, upon the terms above-mentioned, are hereby required to signify their assent by letter addressed to The Accountant General, India Office, Victoria-street, Westminster, on or before the 3rd of August next, such letter to state the capital amount of "India Four per Cent. Debentures," together with the numbers and amounts thereof, to be exchanged for "India Four per Cent. Stock."

Holders of "India Four per Cent. Debentures" who do not signify their assent to accept "India Four per Cent. Stock" in exchange for such debentures, and upon the terms above-mentioned, on or before the 3rd of August next, will receive payment for their debentures at maturity upon presentation of the debentures at the Chief Cashier's Office, at the Bank of England, from which time all interest will cease.

Copies of this advertisement may be obtained at the Bank of England, and of Mr. Henry Scott, the Broker to the Secretary of State for India in Council, 16, Throgmorton street, City.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELEY'S IMPROVE-

MENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an unbroken even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is secured, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unobtainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of such acid taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger removes the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principle as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

CORALIUM SILEX, an entirely new substance for ARTIFICIAL TEETH, which will neither discolour nor decay, remaining firm in the mouth, from one to a complete set, without springs, wires, or any visible attachment. It gives the greatest support to all loose or tender teeth, and answers most perfectly the purposes of mastication and articulation. No painful operation required. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from eleven till four. No connection with any person in the same profession.—No. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—Speci- cially commended at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

NO MORE ERUPTIONS on the SKIN.—MOLLARD'S PERFUMED TOILET SULPHUR SOAP and CREAM, entirely free from any unpleasant smell, and are sovereign remedies against fever, local or chronic cutaneous eruptions, rheum-tum, pains in the joints, &c. The Cream possesses all the properties of the renowned Fargue Waters for baths. Recommended by the most eminent physicians. Prospectus and testimonials sent on application.

Sold wholesale and retail by F. Newberry and Sons, 45, St. Paul's-churchyard; Dietrichsen and Hannay, 63, Oxford-street; G. Jozson, 49, Haymarket; T. Keating, 79, St. Paul's-churchyard; P. A. Genard, 390, Strand; Hambridge and Pound, 60, Leather-lane; and at the Central Depot, 2, Rupert-street, Coventry-street, W.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Permuters to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarelli has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

It is prepared (in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength) by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so harmful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER. Riting with so much ease and co-seness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer.

Observe the words "KEATING'S WORM TABLETS" are engraved on the Government stamp of each Tin, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—POTENT PURI-

FIER.—Hundreds of causes contribute to render the blood impure, and thus to produce more besetting maladies. These admirable pills address themselves at first to expel all taints from the vital fluid, and in the second to restore regularity and harmony throughout the organs of assimilation, secretion, and excretion. Holloway's pills improve the digestive capability of the stomach, and gradually give it strength enough fairly to appropriate any ordinary food when wholesome in quantity and moderate in quantity. These pills act beneficially on the liver, kidneys, and bowels, and so constitute themselves the "protectors" of the dyspeptic, nervous, low spirited, and debilitated. Unless digestion be occasionally corrected by such means the blood cannot be pure.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE lapse of the Calcutta mail of the 23rd of June, which was due on Monday, the 27th ultimo, was, we find, caused by the steamer Bengal meeting with an accident to her screw, causing her to put back to Calcutta on the 29th of June, after having been six days out on her homeward voyage. The mails were transferred to the Mooltan steamer, which vessel reached Suez on the 28th ultimo. The Vectis left Malta for Marseilles on the morning of August 2nd with the mails ex Mooltan; therefore, the missing mails may be expected to arrive in London about Thursday next. The resources afforded by the arrival of the Bombay mail have amply provided us with material compensating for the loss of the previous Calcutta mail.

We have at last got something like authentic intelligence of the capture of Nana Sahib. He is said to have been apprehended in the Temple of Ajmere by Captain Brodigan, of the 28th. The rumour of 5,000 Bengal sepoys being at Saloomba under Tantia Topee is not quite so credible, as there is pretty good evidence that the real Tantia Topee was hanged four years ago.

There is no doubt now that the Ameer Dost Mahommed has taken possession of Herat. The Bombay Times of India states that, by a telegram from Lahore, dated 4th of July, authentic intelligence had been received of Dost Mahommed's death.

The Governor of Bombay, Sir Bartle Frere, is still at Dapooree, near Poona, where the Legislative Council was to meet on the 15th of July.

Lord Elgin is said to be laid up with low fever at Simla. Sir Hugh Rose is the gayest of the gay there. The cause of Lord Elgin's illness is attributed to the uncleanly state of the Simla bazaar.

Lady Trevelyan and family were to leave India by the first steamer in July, so that she is probably now in England.

Five lacs of rupees were received by the Government officer at Darjeeling in March and April last, as proceeds of sales of waste lands. "Thus it will be seen," says the Phoenix, "that the new rules have not often proved obstructive where there is actually waste land to be had."

A wine company is about to be established at Simla.

A court-martial was to assemble at Lucknow on the 28th June, of which Colonel Campbell, of the 48th, is president, to try two officers—Ensigns Benny, of the 27th, and Hutchinson, of the 23rd—on a charge of rape. Captain

Hill, of the police, is prosecutor. The officers had been under arrest for nearly nine months before the court-martial was assembled. There was some doubt as to whether they should be handed over to the Civil Court. The crime is said to have been committed in open day in the presence of several natives. We can hardly believe that the officers are guilty, but it is stated rather prematurely that the evidence is clear against them.

Sir Mordaunt Wells is to pass through Lahore in a day or two en route to Cashmere, where he is to spend a month before coming on to England.

A Mr. Turner is in Lahore, taking notes for a book of Indian travel.

Dr. Cannon, the civil surgeon at Lucknow, having given a native a slap on the face, the man prosecuted him for assault and battery, and laid the damages at Rs. 1,600. Three Europeans on the jury were for allowing one pice damages, but another jurymen allowed the whole amount claimed.

A mysterious disappearance of a European gentleman from on board a flat lying off Allahabad has excited considerable sensation. We have given the particulars under the head of "Supposed Murder."

Colonel J. A. R. Raines, C.B., of H.M.'s 95th Foot, has been appointed temporarily to the command of the troops at Aden.

The Honourable Mr. Juggonath Sunkersett complained to Government of the charge against him on the part of Captain Nuttal, that he was ready to cash the hoondies of rebels. Captain Nuttal has acknowledged that he had formed and expressed a too hurried opinion on the matter, and apologised to Mr. Sunkersett for the mistake.

Cholera had broken out at Lucknow, and had committed dreadful ravages in the city. Dr. Longstaff, of the Royal Artillery, was taken ill with this disease, and died in six hours. Captains Lees and Tupper were both attacked by the disease, but both recovered. From the latest accounts from Lucknow the disease was disappearing from that station.

Sir William Denison proposes to abolish the system of grand juries, but has submitted the question to the Judges of the High Court for their opinion.

The Madras Government is about to introduce the cultivation of hops on the Neilgherry Hills.

The Governor of Madras has gone to Bangalore. So, also, has the Madras Commander-in-Chief, with the head-quarters and staff of the Madras army. Lady Denison accompanies them. The Governor was to visit Mysore to partake of the hospitality of the Maharajah on his birthday. The Maharajah has reached his three score years and ten.

India is just now in a state of most gratifying prosperity and progress, but there are still indications of discontent, and strange rumours are current in various parts of the Upper Provinces. It is said that fanatics at Rawul Pindie and other stations are urging the Punjabees to rise against us.

The Bengal Hurkaru states that some of the Mahomedans in Calcutta are giving themselves airs, and strutting about the streets with a peculiarly insolent aspect when they meet Europeans, and looking more like barbarous conquerors than conquered barbarians. A young officer of one of her Majesty's regiments had lately been attacked by a party of Mahomedans, and without the slightest provocation been brutally beaten by his cowardly assailants.

We mentioned in a late number that Mr. Longueville Clarke died poor, in spite of the enjoyment for many years of a very noble professional income. We are very sorry to learn that his daughter was left wholly destitute. The Bengal Hurkaru of the 25th July states that Sir Mordaunt Wells has led off a public subscription for her benefit with Rs. 500, and whose noble example has been followed by other members of the bench and bar. If every man in Calcutta who has benefited by Longueville Clarke's liberal hospitality would subscribe to his orphan daughter she would be well provided for. Calcutta society owe to the exertions of the late Longueville Clarke a debt of gratitude for many public advantages. It was to his active efforts chiefly that they owed a free site for the Ice House, and the establishment of the Metcalfe-hall. He was generally the leader of every public movement for the benefit of his fellow citizens.

The new municipal arrangements for Calcutta came into operation on the 1st of July. Mr. Schalch was to be chairman on a salary of Rs. 3,000, and pending the time when, under the improving auspices of the new municipality, Calcutta should provide her Lord Mayor with a suitable Mansion-house, a further allowance of Rs. 500 a month would be granted for house rent. These are pretty liberal terms, and Mr. Schalch is rather a lucky man. Mr. Dowleams is to be vice-chairman.

Dr. Duff, the famous Calcutta missionary, in endeavouring to prevent a Hindoo father from exercising his parental rights over a son of sixteen years of age, detained in a missionary establishment, has involved himself in some legal trouble. He was obliged, by the decision of Sir M. H. Wells, to restore the lad to his parent. The Friend of India has attacked this decision, and coupled the name of Mordaunt Wells with that of Judge Jeffries.

An application having been made by the Bengal Government to the India-office for the latter to further define what are qualifications for staff employ, Sir Charles Wood has replied as follows:—"Officers of the staff corps will not be required to vacate their appointments on promotion, but their rank on first appointment should be that laid down in the Queen's regulations as qualifying for the appointments in question, and they will still be subject to the four years' limitation rule." In other words, Indian officers should be treated as unattached officers on half-pay in the British service.

The Secretary of State for India has authorised the Indian Government to offer a certain number of annuities of £200, in addition to the pensions to which they may be entitled on the 31st of August, to one regimental colonel in each brigade of Royal (late Indian) Engineers.

The Government of the Punjab has announced a grand Agricultural Exhibition, to be opened in November. A large building is now being erected for the purpose.

It is said that the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief are to meet at Meerut in November next to decide whether that station shall be the head-quarters of the army. Some reports give the preference to Lucknow.

Major Hutchinson, late commissariat officer at Moulmain, under the employment of the Madras Government, has been removed from his appointment in consequence of the dissatisfaction of Government as to the mode in which he arranged or carried out the contracts for the supply and conveyance of timber.

We were misled, like many others, by the formal announcement in the Morning Post of the death of Lord Clyde. Some days after that announcement his lordship was said to be rather better than he had been, but he has again had a relapse, and we deeply regret to say that he is considered to be in a very precarious condition.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAIL.

WAY.—It appears from a statement of the number of passengers conveyed over the line that for the year ending the 30th of June, 1861, the number of first-class passengers on an average of 62 miles open was 1,206; of second-class, 5,211; of third-class, 212,089; and of fourth-class, 117,087—total, 335,593, being at the rate of 5,109 per mile. For the year ending the 30th of June, 1862, on an average of 130 miles open, there were conveyed 2,063 first-class, 10,980 second-class, and 838,285 third-class—total, 851,328 passengers, being at the rate of 6,576 per mile. A comparative statement of the number of passengers carried over the above and other Indian railways for the year ending the 30th of June, 1862, shows that on 245 miles of East Indian (North-West Provinces) line 342,935 passengers were conveyed, being at the rate of 1,399 per mile. On the Madras Railway, 282 miles open, 1,081,539 passengers were conveyed, being at the rate of 3,835 per mile; on the great Indian Peninsula, 416 miles open, 2,509,962 passengers were conveyed, being at the rate of 6,033 per mile; and on the East Indian (Bengal division), 311 miles open, 1,937,103 passengers were carried, being at the rate of 6,228 per mile; and on the Baroda and Central India, 130 miles open, 851,328 were carried, being at the rate of 6,576 per mile. The aggregate length of line open for the year ending June 30, 1862, was 1,384 miles; the number of first-class passengers carried was 59,431, of second-class 290,058, of third class 6,030,417, and of fourth-class (on the Great Indian Peninsula) 842,958—total, 6,721,864 passengers, being at the rate of 4,804 per mile.

CAPTURE OF THE NANA.

NUSSEERABAD, June 26.

I send you a piece of news which will afford unmitigated pleasure to all your readers—the infamous "Nana Sahib" is a prisoner at Ajmere!

On the night of the 22nd Major Davidson, the Commissioner, Captain Glegson, Lieut. Brodigan, commanding the detachment H.M.'s 28th Regt., and Sergeant Dalton, of that corps, proceeded to a temple at Ajmere, and suddenly entered. Lieut. Brodigan seized the first man he met; it proved to be the Nana! Two others were with him. They are now prisoners in the fort, under a guard of H.M.'s 28th Regt.

The story, as I hear it, is this: The party consisted of five. Two are said to be spies, who were sent by your Mr. Forjett from Bombay two months ago, and who have steadily stuck to their man ever since, but never have had the opportunity of being near an English station till now. The other two are said to be menials, who knew nothing of whom they were attending. At first it was intended to surround the temple with troops, but it was feared that any move might create alarm, and too much praise cannot be given to the small and gallant band that executed their work so boldly and so well, and it will be a proud thought to Lieutenant Brodigan, whilst memory lives, that his was the avenging hand fated to lay hold of this fiend in human shape.

I speak thus confidently, because I understand that from documents found, personal marks, and other modes of identity, Major Davidson has no doubt he has the right man in the right place at last, and every feeling of human justice and retribution must make all earnestly hope the same.

There are various rumours afloat that the Nana's progress through native states was a triumphal one, that he was conveyed on elephants, &c., &c., all of which is more than doubtful, when his object must have been privacy. A later account from Ajmere states that one of the prisoners is thought to be a relative of the Nana's, by name Nana Punt, who commanded 5,000 horse during the mutiny, and a most bloodthirsty ruffian.

Another company of the 28th leaves to-morrow for Ajmere.

CAMP NUSSEERABAD, June 27.

The last novelty is the capture of the Nana Sahib at Ajmere, by Major Davidson, with the assistance of the military. It appears that certain agents of that "prince of detectives," Mr. Forjett, have been for some time tracking the ruffian, but were unable to take him until safely landed on British territory. From all the circumstances that have transpired, it seems that little doubt can exist as to the prisoner's identity. It is also proved that he has been received with much honour by several of the chiefs in these parts, and was also traced to Salumba. The names of several of the powerful chiefs are known, and no doubt they will be called to account for their hospitality. Their guest, however, is now located at Ajmere, with three sentries over him; no native is allowed to approach on any pretence whatever. He seems possessed of some dry humour, as he remarked, it is said, that in executing Tantia Topce some time ago a mistake had been made, and that the real T. T. was in the flesh and remarkably well! and that but for this unforeseen occurrence of detention in jail, he had looked forward to meeting his old friend very shortly.

Another company of H.M.'s 28th Regt. marched to Ajmere last night, to reinforce the detachment there, so as to frustrate any attempt at a rescue, should such be meditated. It is said that the brigadier commanding was of opinion that the prisoner should be sent into camp for safe custody; but apparently the politicals prefer keeping him near them, and certainly no one can be surprised at their being unwilling to part with such a prize.

A correspondent writing from Nusseerabad on the 27th ult. mentions that the Nana was captured while at his devotions in a Hindu temple in Ajmere. The manner in which this was effected was through the agency of two natives, who, it is reported, were deported to Nepal for that purpose by Mr. Forjett, of the Bombay police. After having discovered him they followed him from place to place (and, some say, were even in his confidence) until they arrived at Ajmere (the first European station), where they immediately informed the commissioner, Major Davidson, of the fact, and on orders being issued, the police and some twenty men of the detachment of the 28th Regt. made him a prisoner. A company of the 28th will march to Ajmere this evening to guard him, and to escort him to Nusseerabad. The Nana has been recognised as the real Nana by the commissioner and the brigadier, both of whom saw him before.

NEEMUCH, June 29.

I hasten to send you all I can glean regarding the Nana and his capture near Ajmere. There seems to be no doubt of his identity this time. To make matters surer, he has been photographed with his beard, shaved, and then taken again, and this precaution has served only to confirm the impression of the right man having at last been found.

The telegraph wire will probably have anticipated me, but I nevertheless hasten to give you what is known here regarding the seizure of the real Nana at or near Ajmere. Davidson, the Commissioner, together with Captain Brodigan, 28th Foot, another officer, and a sergeant, 28th Regt., succeeded in seizing him in a temple. The marks he bears identify him in every respect. There is no doubt that it is the "genuine article" this time, and several people, both European and native, have recognised the scoundrel.

He possesses friends and sympathisers everywhere (according to his own statement), and had been promised aid through all the native States he had passed, in the event of another "rising," which he hoped to bring about in conjunction with Tania Topee, who, he states, is waiting for him near Becaneer; Salcomber (the base of operations) and its environs already containing 5,000 men, including many Bengal sepoys, ready to turn on Nusseerabad and Neemuch. A full company of the 28th has been specially sent from Nusseerabad to "attend" upon the Nana.

Regarding Tania Topee, he declares that the wrong man was hung! Although the Nana had no time to tamper with Rajpootana, life and property are anything but safe, and the Bombay letter post was quietly looted on the 9th inst., five miles from this, with perfect impunity. When will this disgraceful state of things be put an end to?

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE CAPTURE.

We have been favoured with the following official report of the capture of the Nana Sahib:—

AJMER, June 25.

Sir,—I have the honour to inform you that, on the 22nd instant, a native officer of the 8th Bombay N.I., by name Dwarka Tewarie, brought me your letter No. 113, of 27th April, 1863, to the address of the Political Agent, Jyepoor, and gave me such information regarding the object with which it had been written that I thought myself justified in opening it, and having satisfied myself that he was acting under Mr. Forjett's orders and with your sanction, I rendered all the assistance in my power, and had the satisfaction of capturing the persons indicated by the informers, Dwarka Tewarie and Gypershad; and from their statements, which have been confirmed by Mr. Forjett's detectives, who accompanied them, as also from comparison with the descriptive roll furnished by Government, and a statement made by a sergeant-major of the Royal Artillery, stationed at Nusseerabad, who was formerly in the 14th Dragoons and constantly saw the Nana at Meerut, I have not the slightest doubt whatever that the prisoner now in the Ajmere Magazine, under an European guard of H.M.'s 28th Regiment, is the Nana Dhoondoo Punt. One of his companions is stated by the informers to be Naroo Punt Bhalla Blut, also entered in the descriptive roll. The third person is a blind Brahmin, made use of by the Nana to conceal his real, and to confirm him in his assumed, character.

There are two striking marks on the person of the prisoner supposed to be the Nana, one of which is not entered in his descriptive roll; this is a grooved scar under the hole pierced in his right ear, and the other is a scar of (as the civil surgeon certifies) either a lancet cut, or a cut of a very fine sharp-pointed bistoury, about an inch and a half in length, and slightly oblique; and, indeed, the prisoner corresponds in nearly every particular with the description given in the roll, except that his hair is white, he has lost two front teeth, and his cheeks are not so full as they were six years ago.—I have, &c., A. G. DAVIDSON, Commissioner.

Six years ago all Europe reeled, like a man on whom sad news has come suddenly, horror-stricken at the brief, but terrible, message that flew along the telegraphic wires, and told of the massacre at Cawnpore. Gentle ladies, old men, tender children, fell on their knees and prayed for vengeance. Strong men brushed the tear from their eyes in haste, as if half-ashamed of their weakness, and vowed an awful vow that he who had done the deed should surely not escape the reward thereof. And he, the doer of that deed, was Nana Sahib, that, forsooth, well-informed, well-dressed, intelligent Hindoo gentleman, associating with the English residents, speaking their language and imitating their manners. His mail-coach was well-known on the Cawnpore race-course; his person familiar at the station balls. In fact, he was a powerful man at "our" station. But what a far more extensive popularity was he then meditating which even babies learn to hiss and execrate? But what availed his cunning—his intelligence? Little did he then contemplate that strong hand that was to drag him from his hiding place, of the encircling hedge of bristling bayonets in a barrack guard-room, and of the felon's end that shall be his.

Six years ago! And yet Vengeance has never slept, never tired, never rested: though with but pede claudo it has limped on for six long years. In spite of rumours of his death, rumours of his capture, rumours seemingly with the substance of reality, as in the case of mistaken identity at Kurrachee, the blood-hounds of justice have never lost the scent, but with a perseverance that even our impatience must applaud, stuck to their prey, and ran into him at last within the walls of Ajmere.

It is not easy to assign a reason for his making for this city, which—within fifteen miles of the military station of Nusseerabad, where is always kept a magnificent pack of war dogs with a most efficient huntsman and whipper-in—would seem to be the most unlikely earth for Reynard to run to when hard pressed. Ajmere is a town of great wealth, and the capital of Rajpootana, divided from Nusseerabad by the Aravalli Range, through which a good road has been driven, and has the large cities of Joudpour on its left and of Jyepoor on its right, being about 100 miles from both. The Rajah of Kishengurh rules in mimic state about fourteen miles to the north, and his preserves, famous for his pig, border on the Ajmere territory; while the pious pilgrim, who would visit the holy shrines of Pokah, has but six miles to trudge before his unsandled feet sink in the sands of the Delhi desert, and the sacred muggars (crocodiles) bid him welcome with a complimentary grunt as they bask placidly in the sunshine on the quiet surface of the tanks. One would hardly accuse the Nana of coming to pay his pilgrimage to the fakeers of Pokah, or his court to the wealthy men of Ajmere; for, when in '57 the Nusseerabad Brigade mutined, the rebels quitting the camp diverged from the Ajmere road on reaching the pass, and, crossing the range of hills more to the right, so made the best of their way to Delhi. Why they spared Ajmere, and declined to prosecute their right of search in the arsenal there, is only one of those many golden opportunities whose forelocks the rebel sepoys neglected to lay hold of. Though Ajmere is civilly Bengallee, the arsenal obeys the orders of the Bombay Government, and hence the capture of the Nana fell to the lot of the 28th Regiment. The story, as related by our correspondent, is eloquent in its simpleness of the unpretending way in which an English soldier does his duty. Wild beasts when brought to bay generally make a desperate resistance. Men with the proverbial halter encircling the throat fight all the more savagely. But here "it was feared that any more might create an alarm;" so the "intention of surrounding the temple with troops" was abandoned, and the "small and gallant band" went cheerfully to their work. And when history shall tell how Hodgson seized the King of Delhi and his sons, he shall also add to the deeds of valiant men the capture of Nana Sahib.

We congratulate the gallant men of the 28th that the prize has fallen to their bayonets. Too late to take any active share in the vengeance sworn to by those who registered their vows on the blood-stained sides of that well at Cawnpore, they can now point with pride and merited self-congratulation to their comrades who, though they have but done their duty, have done that duty so well, that a grateful country will not be slow to prove the measure of her gratitude to the avengers of Wheeler's garrison.—Times of India, July 9.

BENGAL.

THE LAND AND STATESMANSHIP.

We lately urged the practicability and advisability of a small experimental Hill Colony of European military pensioners on this side of India, urging at the same time the advantage of having, as time rolled on, the hill slopes dotted with white-faced communities, brave, hardy, insured to toil, to the chase, and to arms—worth, in short, an army of ten thousand men in case of a sudden outbreak.

On this the Hills comments:—"These are fine words, but they come awkwardly from a journal which, doubtless from a good intention, has hitherto done its best to obstruct the realisation of the charming picture it now draws. It has done this in backing up Sir Charles Wood's amendments on Lord Canning's rules; and when it suggests the purchase of two hundred acres of land as a commencement, it seems to have forgotten that when the land selected shall be put up to auction, any chance speculator, whose attention may have been attracted to the lot, may outbid the benevolent friends of distressed pensioners. This result would show the Phoenix the violent impropriety of counting his chickens before the proper time."

If our contemporary, and five or six dozen of his friends and acquaintances, are desirous of becoming possessed of 3,000 acres each of good waste land in Eastern Bengal, or South-Western Bengal, we think we are fully justified in asserting that if they come here, select their lots, and cause them to be advertised for sale by auction, the probability is that in no case will any other competitor present himself to bid for the lands. There is plenty of land fitted for tea cultivation now lying waste in Assam and the contiguous districts, and there are few to apply for it, notwithstanding applicants run no danger of being outbid by strangers or outsiders, willing to take advantage of their "superior knowledge" of the capabilities of Indian soil, or of any other knowledge they turned to use in selecting. The rage for waste land has died out. It only lasted so long as new tea companies could be got up, and happily selected waste lands sold to them at an enormous profit. The capitalists about whom we hear so much, as would-be developers of the resources, but for Sir Charles Wood, have shown that they want waste lands, not to reclaim or cultivate them, but to resell at an extraordinary profit to cleverly got-up joint-stock companies. The present is rather a bad time for tea or coffee, or any other description of cultivation companies; and, therefore, though there is land for any person willing to buy it at an auction, where in all probability he himself would be the only bidder, there are few applications. Let, however, new tea companies but come again into fashion, and the scramble will recommence. The capitalist will then be found applying for grant after grant, and when they have grabbed as much as suits their purposes, advertising that they hold the best tea land, are willing to resell it to companies, and that no more good tea land is left in the country! Is our contemporary under the impression that Sir Charles Wood is not as well aware of this as if he were on the spot? If so he underrates the Secretary of State's Indian knowledge, and the attention given by him to the details of every Indian question. Ah! but if Sir Charles Wood really had the interest of this country at heart, or understood in what its true interest lay, he would not have acted as he has with reference to Indian waste lands; he would have followed the far wiser and more liberal system of the colonies. We defy any one to point to any British colony in which greater scope for the acquisition of land is offered to the intending settler than in India, or in which land is offered cheaper. In Victoria it is a criminal offence, punishable as a misdemeanor, to apply for land to make it over to another immediately it is obtained, and throughout the Australian colonies there has sprung up a spirit of watchfulness in the press and people, lest the interests of the community in the soil, that is, in the Crown lands, should not be turned to the utmost pecuniary advantage.—Phenix.

SUPPOSED MURDER.

The most extraordinary circumstance which it has been for some time our misfortune to relate, occurred in the station early on Sunday morning, which has eventuated in the disappearance of a respectable inhabitant, who, it is feared, has met with foul play.

A party of gentlemen met on board a flat recently arrived here from Calcutta, and had there enjoyed themselves—perhaps they over-enjoyed themselves; but be that as it may, it is a self-evident proposition that one of the party is missing, that traces of blood and violence have been discovered near the place where he was last seen, and the conflicting evidence of the men who were on board the flat at the time, and whom must know something of the missing gentleman, raise very strong misgivings as to the cause of disappearance. It is due to society to have a searching investigation into the why and wherefore of the unfortunate transaction, and the whole resources of the police ought to be brought to bear on the elucidation of the mystery. We do not know whether the police have exerted themselves to make the required discovery, or why they are not in the way when wanting. We hear that the whole matter has been pool-pooched, but a valuable life lost cries aloud for vengeance, and the public will not be satisfied until something more is done in the matter and a clear understanding come to on the subject. The whole machinery of the law, in its most stringent form, ought at once to be brought into operation, and instead of regarding the matter in the light of accident, assurance ought to be made doubly sure and relieve the public mind.

We will endeavour to narrate as nearly as we can the circumstances which have reached us. The gentlemen went on board the flat to enjoy themselves, and at half-past nine took leave, the unfortunate gentleman remaining on board. Every exertion was used to induce him to accompany his friend home, but he chose to remain on board. In the course of the night the captain of the flat waited upon the friend who had been most urgent in wishing the gentleman to leave, and who, in fact, was his employer, and had, besides his friendship, an interest in seeing him safely bestowed, and told him that there was mutiny on board his flat. That was scouted. The gentleman did not believe it. He thought it simply an excuse to coax him to go again on board the flat. The captain came again after a little while and said that the gentleman whose loss we deplore was drowned. Gone! A lame and disjointed story. Who saw him drowned? He was a most expert swimmer. The serang on board the flat said that he fell overboard shoreward. In such event he would almost have reached the shore. Being told this, he suddenly says he fell overboard riverward. But beyond this contradiction there is a palpable fact which must be explained. The bad was made on the deck for the missing man, which in the morning was found saturated with blood! How is this to be accounted for? Does the captain know? Have these men been questioned? Have measures been taken to discover why this blood came, or how? It is within the knowledge of the parties interested that the men on board the flat were seen washing the traces of the blood from the bed and deck. Have they been secured? Has any one moved in the matter? The whole of the men on board that flat ought to undergo a rigorous examination, and be placed in safe custody until the truth appears. Murder will out. The body even has not been found. The gentleman, as we have stated, was a powerful swimmer. The presumption is that he has been beaten by the truculent and brutal natives on the boat and thrown overboard. Everything conspires to point to this conclusion. At all events the circumstances are of so suspicious a nature, that more than the usual pains ought to be taken to clear up the mystery, and bring the murderers to justice, and we hope we will shortly be able to announce that the criminal has been discovered. The captain of the flat makes affidavit that the man was drowned. Did he see him drowned? Is it hearsay? Let him specify the circumstances. Did he quarrel with the man and push him overboard? Let him specifically state the circumstances under which he saw the man drowned—let him explain how. Let him account for the blood on the bed and deck, and if he is captain of his own ship, as men are fond of boasting, let him prove it. He says he was wounded in the mutiny on board. Let him prove the unfortunate man was not killed in it.

Nobody knows! Happy Allahabad, the seat of Government North Western Provinces. It's a dangerous place, my masters, is this Allahabad. There's no one safe. And if you are lost, there is no one to look after you. Nobody knows!—Allahabad Gazette.

COLONELS' ALLOWANCES.

The decision of the Secretary of State upon the following point has been published for information. When the authorised number of colonels' allowances fixed for the staff corps, viz., one to thirty officers of all ranks, has been completed by the succession of officers who have served twelve years in the substantive rank of lieutenant-colonel, it is the intention of her Majesty's Government that vacancies shall be filled up as they occur, according to seniority, without requiring a qualifying term of service.

It was not intended that the despatch of the 31st of December, 1861, should be set aside by that of the 31st of July, 1862.

His Excellency the Governor-General calls attention to the necessity for all applications from colonels of artillery and engineers, who are desirous of retiring on the annuity now sanctioned as below, being sent in to the office of the adjutant-general of their respective Presidencies before the 31st of August next.

The announcement of this annuity is preceded by an admission from Sir C. Wood, that the prospects of a certain limited class of officers of high rank were injured by the reduction of Colonels, with Colonel's allowances, and that it "is unreasonable to expect that in the extensive changes lately made in the army, some individuals should not suffer. Still, as Government wish to remove as far as possible all just grounds of complaint, it has been determined to offer a limited number of retiring pensions to each brigade of Indian Artillery, and each battalion of engineers. This pension is one of £200 a-year to one Regimental Colonel in each brigade and each battalion, in addition to the pension to which he may already be entitled.

These annuities will be allotted to applicants according to seniority in their respective cadres:—

Bengal Artillery	7
Madras	4
Bombay	3
Bengal Engineers	8
Madras	2
Bombay	2

Application to be made on or before the 31st August next.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RUMOURS OF STRANGE IMPORT reach us every day from various parts of the upper provinces. To-day it is from Delhi, to-morrow from Peshawur, again from Rawulpindee, then from Loodiana, and even from Barrackpore, there are simmerings the real import of which the Calcutta papers are carefully keeping dark from the public. There are fanatics at Rawulpindee and other stations fomenting the Punjabees, by seditious harangues and inflammatory pamphlets. Who would not place faith upon any of these rumours? but we are glad to see that the Punjab authorities are not pool-pooling them as those at Meerut did in 1857, who reaped the consequences. We cannot think that there is much chance at present for our dusky brethren, if they attempted to rise on their Saxon rulers; but still we think the rulers should ever be on the alert to put down sedition and prevent a disturbance of the peace, however slight.—Allahabad Gazette, June 23.

THE SIKHS.—We hear that a pretty strong and well-pronounced display of Sikh self-will was made not many days ago in one of the regiments of the Punjab N.I. at Barrackpore; and we are glad also to learn that the measures of repression and punishment adopted were prompt and decisive; though, if we are rightly informed, their adequacy, as regards severity, is very much open to question. The Sikhs, as a race, have commanded our respect by their bravery when arrayed against us in the field, and well deserved our good will when fighting on our side; but these feelings must not be allowed to interfere with the maintenance of strict military discipline amongst them when enlisted under our standards, where their wayward and turbulent spirit will always require to be curbed and repressed with the strong hand of the military law and power.—Englishman.

OPIMUM.—The probable out-turn of opium for the year 1864 is estimated by the Scindian at 27,000 chests of Patna, and 20,000 chests of Benares. This result may be depended upon, from the fact that "the whole of the drug has now been gathered, and is in course of manufacture into cakes." Notwithstanding the depressed state of the market for this drug in China, prices are maintained, but may be "expected to fall towards the end of the year," consequent upon the increased quantity that will be brought forward in 1864. Our contemporary is of opinion that "it is quite beyond the bounds of probability that the drug should in any case fall so low as Rs. 1,250, the average fixed by Sir Charles Trevelyan in his budget for 1863-64."

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF will very likely have a standing camp next cold weather, formed either at Lucknow, Lahore, or Delhi, or some other large station in these parts. More definite information will, we suppose, be given when the relief is published, which may be looked for about the end of July. There is no truth in the report of Sir Hugh Rose's immediate return to Europe.—Delhi Gazette.

MAJOR WILSON, 7TH HUSSARS, is to succeed Lieut. De Montmorency as assistant-secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Oude. Lieutenant De Montmorency goes to Hyderabad.

SIMLA GOSSIP.—SIMLA, June 15.—I think I mentioned in a former letter that even we, denizens of the hills, had not escaped altogether from the disagreeable visits of the locusts, which have for months past been devastating the Punjab and adjacent districts. Since then three or four large flights have again passed over and through the station, the young shoots of the potatoes having been the greatest sufferers from them during their temporary halts. We have not had a large criminal calendar this year. The only case worth recording is one of forgery, one of the native officials of the treasury being the victim. The utterer of the forged document has been taken into custody, and it is expected that the disclosures which he promises to make will implicate some European at present unknown. Major Goad still engages the time of the Civil Court and the attention of the Simla public; he is just now occupied in bringing an action for damages against the stewards of the Umballa Sky Races for prohibiting his entering his horses. His legal adviser, in order to evade the provisions of the Act, which forbids a civil court taking cognisance of anything in the shape of a betting or a gambling transaction, has advised Major G. not to sue for the value of the stakes which he might have won, but for the increase of value which would have accrued to his horses should they have won any of the plates, &c., a curious kind of plaint, and one which, I fancy, will hardly succeed in carrying damages, particularly if the case be brought before a jury. After this business has been decided, Major Goad is going to sue the proprietor of a certain advertising journal published at Simla, for libel. The libel is said to be contained in a narrative which has lately appeared in the columns of the Advertiser, one of the principal characters in which, a drunken old black-guard with a mauve coloured nose, the gallant Major assumes, rather rashly, I think, to be a portrait of himself. Sir Hugh Rose has of late been very quiet in the shady retreat of Barnes' Court. Whether it is that we were last season so surfeited with stories and reports about him that now we can fully eschew the subject as flat, stale, and unprofitable, or whether his Excellency has of late been behaving himself with somewhat more discretion, I know not, but certain it is that this season we hear little or nothing of him. It was not so two months ago; then you could not go to the club, racket court, or any place of public resort, but some well-informed bore would seize you by the button, with "Well, old fellow, heard the last about the Chief?" or else some curious soul would beg you to ask Snooks, the A. D. C., whether Sir Hugh Rose had really knocked down his English groom with a boot-jack, &c., &c. But now all is changed, and barring that the canny Scot occasionally comes out rather strongly at his Excellency's dinner parties, when the champagne is not quite the thing, and the sherry is not to be spoken of without a shudder; when the hermetically sealed provisions have evidently been purchased in the bazaar, and not from an European tradesman—except, I say, these and such like rumours, scandal has no more dared this season to touch Sir H. Rose than it dared in former days to sully the maiden fame of good Queen Bess.

THE ACCOUNT DEPARTMENT.—We (Phoenix) are given to understand that Sir Charles Trevelyan intends personally to revise the office establishments in the account department. He has already visited the establishment of the Financial Secretariat and of the Accountant-general. He proposes to perform the duties now performed in the office of the Auditor general of India in the Financial Secretariat, and he does not require any establishment. He considers the present strength of office establishment under Mr. Lushington quite sufficient to perform both duties, and thus he hopes to make considerable savings.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—In consequence of his early departure for Europe, Mr. F. Schiller has resigned the honorary post of committee-man of the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. R. B. Mackay, of the firm of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co., has been elected in his stead.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.—We stated a few days ago that the heirs of Colonel Chester, who, as Adjutant-General of the Bengal Army, was killed at the battle of Budlee ke-Serai on the 8th of June, 1856, had sent out a claim for Delhi prize money on his account: and we have now to notify that the claim has been allowed, and a first instalment of Rs. 1,489 has been remitted to England. We should very much like to know at what date, according to the authorities ruling in these matters, the sieges of Delhi commenced; and it would be also instructive to be informed, from the same source, at what date the siege terminated. The reason that we feel any curiosity on these points is that, as we said the other day, Colonel Chester never saw the walls of Delhi, he having been killed prior to the British army investing the place, and yet receives money as a captor. On the other hand, officers who never came near Delhi until long after the city was taken—the late General Penny, for instance—were also adjudged a share of the Delhi prize in a similar manner. It is impossible rationally to justify these incongruous arrangements and donations; but it is in this manner that the Delhi prize-money has been frittered away and scattered about broad cast. People who had nothing whatever to do with the siege or capture of the city getting large gifts—for they are nothing else—of the spoil, and bringing the receipts of the real captors down to a very poor figure indeed, compared to what they well earned and deserved. One of the prize laws in the British military code was to the effect that, in case of a city taken by assault, none but those actually present in the camp of the attacking force on the day of the storm should share in the resulting prize; and this law was, if we mistake not, in full vitality when Delhi was captured. This law may have involved injustice to some of the besiegers, such as those officers and men wounded during the siege operations, and obliged to quit the camp; but the law which Sir Charles Wood arbitrarily substituted for it involves injustice to the whole Delhi force, seeing that it gives the money earned by the actual captors of Delhi to people who had no more to do with the siege of that city than they had with the siege of Jerusalem under Titus. Delhi was taken when India was under the Company's government, and when the Indian prize law above referred to was still in force; but Sir Charles Wood set that law aside, and sent out orders to the effect that the Delhi prize money was to be distributed "on the Crimean scale." It was not previously known that the British got anything but hard knocks in the Crimea; and it may here be asked, if the British army before Delhi had done their work "on the Crimean scale," what would have become of the Anglo-Indian Empire in 1857? We believe it is the case that not a few of those who besieged Sebastopol "on the Crimean scale," and could not take it, made occasional visits to England during the slow progress of the siege, to see their relatives, or their dentists, or their Queen, like Lord George Paget, and afterwards came in for high honours, and decorations, and rewards. We suppose on the same principle that those who never took the smallest part in the siege of Delhi have received prize money "on the Crimean scale" by Sir Charles Wood's command. Two officers of the Guards who were present on the staff at the commencement of the siege left the army one fine morning to take care of itself, capture the city and save the Empire, and never stopped till they got safe to London; and for this they received promotion, and medals, and have drawn Delhi prize money "on the Crimean scale." This is another specimen of the manner in which the hard-earned money of the unfortunate army of Delhi has been lavished upon claimants who, if they had any refined sense of honour, or estimate of true desert, would refuse to receive what they never contributed to capture.—Englishman.

ONE OF THE REBELS.—LUCKNOW, June 16.—The trial of another of the rebels took place last week; he was implicated in the murder of the party of Europeans brought in from the Mithowlee district. The prisoner is defended by Mr.

Sandye, who objected to the prosecution putting in letters written by the late Captain Orr to his brothers, when a refugee, on the ground that if regarded as a dying declaration such declaration is admissible only when the circumstances of death are the subject of such declaration, and this is not the case with the letters from Captain Orr. Mr. Sandye also objected to the reception of a brochure by Mrs. Rose, relict of Captain Orr, entitled "The English Captives in Oudh," on the ground that, to render a deposition of any kind of evidence acceptable against a party, it must have been taken on oath, and the party should have an opportunity to cross-examine the witness. The Court allowed this objection, and Mrs. Rose has been subpoenaed from Calcutta; the case is postponed, therefore, till she arrives. The general opinion here is that the evidence is not strong enough to convict the prisoner.

MR. J. W. MASTERS, late Extra Assistant Commissioner at Golaghaut, made a tour last year through the principal tea-gardens in Upper Assam. His journal, together with dried specimens of every variety of tea plant he met with, and samples of the soil they thrive in, was presented by him to Government through Major Agnew, Officiating Commissioner of Assam. These specimens are to be deposited in the Museum of the Horticultural Society of India, and will prove doubtless of great value to those interested in the cultivation of tea. The remarks made are full of importance to every tea-planter, and Mr. Masters is justly commended for his public spirit. He agrees with practical men in far preferring the indigenous to the China plant. Tea planting and manufacturing are still so much of an experiment, and each experienced planter so keeps his knowledge to himself, that Mr. Masters has done a service of some value.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the last meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society Lieutenant Tickell presented two stone shot dug up out of the ramparts of the Old Fort of Arakan, by Captain Hamilton, Superintendent of Police. He furnished also a list of Kings who reigned in Arakan, holding their courts in the city and fort. The city was called the "Old City" (Myohoung) or "Myouko," (the Yam) indifferently. It was commenced in 1430, A.D., by Khyawmoon, but not completed till 1531, by Mengba, who armed the fort and established in the ramparts the magazines, which have now been dug into. The shot are made very symmetrically. It is possible they may have been purchased, with some mortars, from old Portuguese or other European voyagers. Of guns not a trace has yet been met with in or near the fort; and it is probable they were carried away by the Burmese invaders subsequent to the last Arakan King, Sanag, in 1652. The society have agreed to address Lady Elliott, offering to publish, with the assistance of a State grant, the valuable materials which the late Sir Henry Elliott had collected for his work on the Mahomedan Historians. The late Board of Control in 1856 sanctioned a sum of £500 for the printing of the first four volumes and their editing by Mr. Morley, who died.

THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.—We hear that the office establishment of the Adjutant General has been revised, and that grades of appointments of Rupees 50, 100, 200, 300, 400, and upwards, have been created. This system, we are informed, will come into operation from the first of next month. It is believed that by the new arrangement, some clerks in the offices, receiving less than 50 rs. will be sent away, or pensioned, or (if found qualified) promoted to the first or 50 rs. grade.

DR. ALLAN WEBB.—The numerous friends, both European and native, of Dr. Allan Webb, surgeon of the native hospital, will be sorry to hear that a severe attack of fever and dysentery has so seriously told upon his constitution that he has deemed it necessary to proceed immediately to England on six months' leave. Dr. Baillie, who is shortly expected in Calcutta, will, we understand, succeed Dr. Webb.—Bengalee, June 24.

THE COMMAND OF THE EAST INDIAN REGIMENT has been given to Lieut.-Colonel Carey, formerly in the Quarter Master General's department.

ACCIDENT ON THE RAILWAY.—We are sorry to hear that a collision took place on the 27th June, between the passenger train and an empty engine about four and a-half miles from Benares. There were no lives lost, but several injuries received. Both the engines were smashed to pieces, and the carriages more or less broken.—Delhi Gazette.

MAJOR CHAMBERLAIN, of the Thuggee department, has been appointed city magistrate of Lucknow.

WASTE LAND SALES.—Nearly five lacs of rupees were received by the public officer at Darjeeling in March and April last as sale proceeds of waste lands.

HUMEERPORE.—The Government of India have finally determined on retransferring the district of Humeerpoore to the Allahabad division. This district, with the two important pergunnahs, Mahoba and Jeetpore, was taken from the Allahabad and made over to the Jhansie commissionership in 1858. The latter is now a regulation.

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—We have reason to believe that changes are hanging over the management of the East Indian Railway Company. Mr. George Noble Taylor, a Madras civilian, who gained some credit for his report as Enam Commissioner, is now in Calcutta, engaged in a special inquiry into the present system of administration; and it is in contemplation that for the future all the office business of the railway shall be transacted at Howrah.

MADRAS.

HEALTH OF TROOPS IN MADRAS.

The Madras Athenaeum has an article on the health of the European troops in that presidency, based upon the statistical, sanatory, and medical reports of the Army Medical Department for the year 1861. The Madras Presidency shows the lowest death rate of either of the three presidencies for the year 1860, as well as the smallest proportion of sick men. As a remarkable instance of what may be effected by good sanatory regulations, and other precautions for the health of the troops, it is stated that in the old Infantry barracks at Secunderabad many years ago, the yearly number of European soldiers who fell victims to the climate was sixty-four out of every thousand—"whilst for a period of twenty years after improving the buildings, though still keeping to the same objectionable site, the mortality was in the proportion of forty-eight per thousand." During this same period the mortality among the artillery was only twenty-seven in every one thousand. These figures appear extraordinarily high, when compared with the average number of deaths during late years. We find it stated, that during the last two and a-half years, the average number of European troops stationed at Secunderabad has been three thousand five hundred, "and the ratio of deaths has been rather below twelve per thousand." This really as astounding reduction has been brought about by providing for the soldier better accommodation, "and treating him in accordance with the common principles of humanity, instead of allowing him to die as did his predecessors, through official apathy and neglect. The present comparatively low rate of mortality in the sister Presidency is attributed, not so much to the superiority of the climate, "as to the attention paid to the causes likely to influence the sanatory condition of the troops." While prepared to admit that arrangements for the health and comfort of the troops are not yet perfect, or the officials faultless, our contemporary nevertheless claims that Madras mismanagement "is not so glaringly evident," as in Bombay or Bengal. If the report of the cholera commission should ever see the light, "a tale will be unfolded which will provide many a text for a sanatory sermon, and show besides, in a tolerably clear light, why the mortality of troops in Bengal has so much exceeded that in the other Presidencies." The following table gives the ratio of sickness and death for the three Presidencies during the year under notice:—

Ratio per Thousand of mean Strength.	Admissions.	Deaths.
Bombay	1,933	31-79

Referring to this return, it is stated that the mortality in Bengal and Madras was "much less than in the years of peace preceding, whilst in Bombay, on the contrary, it was in excess of the average of the same years. During the mutiny there was a marked increase in sickness and death among the troops employed on active service; "but since the suppression of all disturbances, and since better accommodation has been provided for the troops, and their actual necessities have been more carefully looked after, there has been a greatly diminished bill of mortality in all the Presidencies, though in Bombay the year 1860 was in this respect exceptional." The military stations throughout the Madras Presidency are classified in the report "according to their geographical peculiarities, rather than to the artificial sub-divisions of the military." The statistics are considered with reference "to the effects of climate on the sea-coast, to the lands, mountain plateaux, and Burnah." This division is characterised by our contemporary as a defective one, on the ground that amongst the table-land stations are included Bangalore and Kamptee, "places which vary exceedingly both as regards temperature and elevation, while the sea-coast stations include Madras on the one side of the Peninsula, and Cannanore on the other, than which, no two tropical coast towns could be more dissimilar as regards climate." Dysentery and diarrhoea are shown to be more prevalent on table-lands than on the seacoast, while "fevers, though less common, are more fatal in the hills than anywhere else." It is considered that troops at hill stations are not so liable to cholera as those quartered on the plains, and it is remarked that troops "coming down suddenly from the hills to the plains seem, if anything, rather more liable to contract cholera than those who have never been away from its haunts." Our contemporary is of opinion that it is not looking too far ahead to expect that "in the course of twenty or thirty years the present disadvantages (in a sanatory point of view) of a term of tropical service may be even fewer than at present, and that the discrepancies now existing between the ratio of invaliding and mortality of troops on home and foreign service, may in a great measure disappear."—Bengal Hurkaru, June 24.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY is making rapid progress, if we may judge from some recent returns published by the Madras Government. On the 31st of December, 1862, four hundred and forty-seven miles were open for traffic. The receipts per mile were four shillings and eleven pence three farthings, while the expenses were only three shillings and sixpence three farthings, showing a clear working profit per mile of one shilling and five pence. This result exhibits a marked and steady increase in the traffic. During the year ending December, 1862, more than a million of passengers were conveyed without the slightest accident, a fact which, as the report complacently adds, "no other railway in the world could perhaps boast of." The speed attained on the Madras lines of railway is stated to be quite equal to that on the Bombay and Bengal lines. The entire absence of casualties is attributed "to the excellent system which prevails, and to the constant carefulness of the officers and servants of the company."

CULTIVATION OF HOPS.—The Madras Government propose to introduce the cultivation of hops on the Neilgherry Hills, where the soil and climate are represented to be admirably suited to the growth. Dr. Cleghorn, under instructions from the Government, has undertaken to obtain the necessary number of plants during his present tour in the Punjab. The most favourable time for removal is in the cold weather of December and January. We extract the following paragraph from Dr. Cleghorn's letter to the Madras Government, under date of the 18th of May:—

"I have seen this useful plant, under trial at various points from Dehra Dhoon to Hazara, thriving with various degrees of success. The best limit for its growth in North India appears to be from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea; this may probably be equivalent to 6,000 feet on the Neilgherries. The hop prefers a deep loamy soil, with a dry bottom; the plants ought to be put down six feet apart. I take this opportunity of sending a packet of the seeds of the Chinese tallow tree 'Stillingia sebifera,' alluded to in Circular No. 97 of the Financial Commissioner, Punjab, and which grows freely in the tea districts. The plant is chiefly valued for the stearine and elaine contained in its fruit. The kernels yield 30 per cent. of oil suitable for lamps, and the refuse cake is much prized as a manure. The seeds ripen here in December and January, at which time a large quantity can be forwarded if required."

The Government has directed the seed of the last-named plant to be forwarded to the Collector of Coimbatore, "who will consult Mr. McIvor as to the best place for trying it, some being given to private individuals inclined and able to try the experiment."

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.—The directors of the Madras Military Fund have come to the determination of addressing Sir Charles Wood on the subject of the proposed confiscation of the capital of that fund. Sir Charles, it is understood, has been requested to guarantee all claims on the fund, to submit to the reduction of ten per cent., "and, in short, to deal honestly with the subscribers, provided the money be handed over to him." The directors further observe that they "are bound to look after the interests of the Madras army at large, and that Sir Charles must give them such guarantees as will enable them to recommend the subscribers to acquiesce in the contemplated changes." The fund in question amounts to about one hundred and six lakhs of rupees.

BOMBAY.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

We had hoped that, after the notice recently taken by us of the state of the thoroughfares at the Fort Gates, no further reference to the subject would have been necessary. The condition, however, of the road at the Apollo Gate since the rain has fallen has become such that we are again compelled to direct the attention of the authorities thereto. An effort seems to have been made to make the main entrance fairly practicable, but the new thoroughfare at the other gate is allowed to remain in a state almost inconceivable. Carriages have to plough their way through heavy mud a foot deep, ruining one's horses, and endangering every vehicle that attempts the passage. We regret sincerely that Sir Bartle Frere is not at this moment in Bombay. Had H.E. been upon the spot, the Garrison Engineer would not, we believe, have dared to show the contemptuous disregard of the public convenience he now thinks it safe to display. Were any adequate effort being made to render the new thoroughfare practicable, we should not have noticed the matter; but having to pass through it daily, and seeing with our own eyes the scandalous neglect of all attempt to make it so, there is nothing left but to bring public opinion to bear upon the engineer's establishment. If Captain Southey were giving due attention to the work of his office, by daily inspecting the works under his conduct, he would know that the evil could be remedied only by putting 200 or 300 coolies upon the work of rolling and metalling the surface. A good and practicable road might be made within twenty-four hours, and would be made within that time by any railway engineer in India. With such point-blank evidence before us of the sort of material of which the Public Works Department consists, we are almost ready to join our contemporaries in the demand that the department should be swept away altogether. If apathy and incapacity, so patent and so irritating, characterise the department under our very nose, it is not very difficult to infer what goes on in the Mofussil. If Sir Bartle Frere had been in Bombay during the last six weeks, Captain Southey would either have had to vacate his appointment, or the thoroughfares in question would have been made practicable. We have had some experience of road making ourselves, and, without being engineers at all, would undertake to make a good practicable road at the Gate within twenty-four hours of receiving notice to do so. Captain Southey cannot do this. He has no authority to do it. He has contrived to make a decent thoroughfare at the Main Gate through which the European community chiefly passes, but as the Apollo Gate is simply the road to Colaba its residents may wait his leisure.

We had hardly written the above, than the following letter was put into our hands:—

12th June, 1863.

Sir,—Our attention has this morning been drawn to a letter in the Times of India, signed "Argus," in which the words "I think it behoves the Government to take notice of the imbecility of their present garrison engineer, who appears in this case to be the responsible officer." Inasmuch as the passage, so far as regards Captain Southey, the present garrison engineer, is utterly false and libellous, we are on his behalf instructed to call on you for an apology—to be inserted in your paper, and that the apology be given at once and in to-morrow's Times of India.

Hoping that you will see the propriety of at once acceding to our request, and thereby avoid the necessity of resorting to legal measures,—We are, Sir, your obedient servants,

KELLY & HORE.

To the Editor of the Times of India.

Our reply to Messrs. Kelly and Hore is this—that so scandalous has been the conduct of the parties responsible for the state of these thoroughfares, that if Captain Southey be that party, he deserves to be removed from his appointment, and placed upon dewanny allowances. If Messrs. Kelly and Hore will tell us that Captain Southey is not responsible for their state, we will make him an apology with pleasure; otherwise none whatever. He has merited far severer handling than he has received. Upon the supposition that he is responsible for their state—and we believe he is—he is unfit for his appointment. We have this moment heard that the state of the Bazaar Gate-road up to yesterday was even worse than that of the Apollo.

Were the Government of India well advised, we believe it would take steps to reorganise the Public Works Department, from its foundation. The age for the employment of military engineers in India upon road-making and tank-repairs is passing away, and the sooner we recognise the fact the better. The conduct of the works being prosecuted at this moment in Bombay, is a fair illustration of the working of the present system. The garrison engineer is an officer of standing in the corps to which he belongs, and would think it extremely infra dig. to be found personally inspecting the new thoroughfares in a glazed hat and waterproof coat. He cannot condescend to anything of the kind. If the work cannot be properly done, without his personal inspection and oversight, it must be left undone. All that Captain Southey can undertake to do, is to drive down to office, in faultless uniform, at eleven o'clock in the morning, to receive reports from his subordinate officers, until the time arrives to display himself at the bandstand in the afternoon, in the midst of other military and civil big wigs. We are not making this a matter of special reproach against Captain Southey; it is part of the traditional system we have inherited, and must get rid of. Military engineers of rank are not the right sort of men to serve the public in the humble capacity of road-makers, and it is not they who are to be blamed for the fact, so much as ourselves that appoint them.

We would wager a considerable sum that Capt. Southey has never once to this hour personally inspected the state of the thoroughfare at the Bazaar Gate. But why should we blame him for that? It never enters his mind that it is his duty to do anything of the kind. He is under the full conviction that if he has ordered Govindrao, the inspector, to see that the thoroughfares are made practicable, he has done all that he ought to do. That he should come down at six o'clock in the morning, on an emergency, personally to urge forward works, upon the completion of which the traffic of half a million of people is dependent—never once suggests itself to him as part of his duty. And the moral of all this is plain. We must get some one in Captain Southey's room, who will think it part of his duty to do as we have suggested. Military men are altogether out of place in such positions as Captain Southey now occupies. In the old time before us, say when the ramparts were being put up, there was no help for such appointments; but the case is somewhat different when we are taking them down, for the convenience of one of the wealthiest populations in the world. From the day when the decree went forth for dismantling the fortress the appointment of garrison engineer should have ceased. The work of levelling the ramparts and constructing the new town are purely civil works, and will be best discharged by the servants of the people.

The utter disregard of the public convenience, shown by the Garrison Engineer, affords illustration enough of the anomalous position he occupies. If the ramparts are to be taken down rapidly, and with a decent regard to public convenience, the work will have to be entrusted to engineers who think it no degradation to superintend it in person. It is very pleasant to see Captain Southey twice a day in uniform, driving a tandem, or lounging at the bandstand; but for the sort of work that lies before us for the next ten or twenty years, we require a different class of men as our engineers. We leave the public to determine whether these comments are suggested by common sense or not.—Times of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUT. TRAFFORD.—We regret to announce the death, from liver complaint, of Lieut. Thomas H. Trafford, 18th Brigade Royal Artillery.

CAPT. EDGEWORTH.—We (Times of India) regret to announce the death of Captain William Edgeworth, of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, which melancholy event took place on the 29th ult., at the Sanatorium. The immediate cause of the gallant officer's death was cholera, to which disease he succumbed, about twenty-four hours after he was attacked. Captain Edgeworth was not in good health, being away from his regiment on sick leave. The deceased officer served in H.M.'s 8th Regiment of Foot at the siege of Delhi in 1857, and as a volunteer with the Artillery during the breaching of the city walls and the assault; he was afterwards severely wounded in the action of Bulundshur. The remains of the deceased officer were interred with military honours.

AN ENGLISH SCHOOL FOR NATIVE GIRLS.—At the third day's funeral ceremonies consequent on the death of his eldest son, Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee, Second Judge of the Small Causes Court, and Sheriff of Bombay, contributed a sum of 1,000 rupees for a school to be opened in Bombay for the education of Parsee or native girls in English. It is expected that this sum will be considerably enlarged by Mr. Cursetjee Nusservanjee Cama, who has always proved himself a great friend of native female education, and by other friends of Mr. Manockjee. Accommodation for the school will be afforded in Mr. Manockjee's own house at Byculla, until the funds are sufficiently large for other premises being rented.

NEW BANK OF BOMBAY.—The preliminary arrangements connected with the establishment of a new bank, to be called the Bank of India, have been completed. The capital of the bank is to be one crore of rupees, in forty thousand shares of Rs. 250 each, with power to issue twenty thousand additional shares. Mr. Peebles, at present manager of the Chartered Mercantile Bank, is to be the London manager.

MR. H. BIRDWOOD.—We understand that Mr. Herbert Birdwood has been appointed deputy secretary to Government in the Political and Judicial Department, in succession to Mr. Raymond West. Mr. Birdwood is one of the most distinguished of the competition wallahs.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON, who appears to be gifted with more practical wisdom than any other Indian Governor of the day, has proposed the abandonment of the Grand Jury system in India. Even in England the Grand Jury is beginning to be looked upon as an obsolete institution; but in India the materials for composing it are absolutely wanting. We have here neither peers nor wealthy landowners; there is in reality only one class in Indian society, and nothing can be more absurd than for the law to endorse the caprice of a clique who affect to consider themselves the aristocracy of the land, and demand to have their importance marked by being ticketed as grand jurors, and set apart from the common herd. The practice of making everybody who has more than Rs. 500 a month a grand jurymen is carried to such an excess in Bombay that there are very few Europeans left to sit on the petty jury, and the consequence is that nearly all the criminal cases in the High Court are decided by juries composed of Framjees and de Silvas, who understand very little English, and know nothing of law.—Bombay Saturday Review, July 4.

THE COMMAND of the 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers has been given to Lieut. colonel J. D. Carmichael, C.B., 94th Regiment.

PARSEE MUNIFICENCE.—The truly princely offer made in the following letter, in reply to our appeal on behalf of the Strangers' Friend Society, needs no comment from ourselves:—"My dear Mr. Knight,—I have read with warm approval the prospectus of your Strangers' Friend Society, and I will myself undertake to build a suitable home for the society, if the cost should not exceed, say, one lakh of rupees, and the Government is willing to meet me half-way in it. If the cost should be less than Rs. 1,00,000 so much the better. I am willing to subscribe one-half the amount, so long as the call upon me does not exceed Rs. 50,000. Yours sincerely, COWASJEE JEHLANGHER. Bombay, July 6, 1863." We are almost distressed at the display of such munificence. An incident of this kind, testifying of native good-will to our countrymen, will certainly not be lost.—Times of India.

MR. G. R. CAMPBELL.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. George Richard Campbell, a step-son of G. I. Glasson, Esq., of Calicut. The deceased gentleman was drowned in crossing a nullah, on the 22nd ultimo, in Wynaad, we believe. Mr. Campbell was but twenty-three years of age, and was engaged in opening a large coffee estate at Ballie Parah, above the Pambercherry Ghaut. "Put the event in your paper," says our correspondent, "and how he was beloved by the natives as well as by his own countrymen. Many a heart under a dark skin will beat for him, poor lad." A testimony worth living for, after all, we think; and many of our readers will think so too.

MAJOR C. J. TROWER.—We are informed that the commanding officer of H.M.'s 103rd Regiment leaves shortly for England, after a protracted period of active service in India. The departure of Major C. J. Trower has given rise to various rumours as to his successor in the command of the "Old Tongs." Major Trower has won the respect of men of all ranks in the army. In striving to introduce the new Line Regulations into the oldest regiment in the late company's service (no enviable task) he had obstacles to overcome which to any man of less resolution would have been insurmountable. His kindness is proverbial, and though at times acting under a sense of duty he may have seemed harsh to some, yet every one will regret the loss of so favourite a commander.

SNAKES V. TIGERS.—The fact that thirty-one human beings were carried off by tigers, within a period of six months, in the hill ranges of Vizagapatam, has induced our Madras contemporaries to press upon Government the advisability of continuing the payment of an enhanced rate of reward for the killing of these animals for another half-year; and Government has very sensibly complied with the suggestion. What this enhanced reward is, we are not informed, but it must be a pretty handsome one, as it spurred the sportsmen to action, during the first six months it was granted, when eight tigers fell to their aim. In Sind a reward exists also for the destruction of these brutes, which amounts to Rs. 12 for a full grown specimen. Although this is very well, the reward seems to be granted more to indemnify the shikaree for the terrible risk he runs of being torn limb from limb than because tigers commit great ravages. The number of casualties, unless among those who follow this exciting and dangerous sport, is insignificant compared with the deaths that result from snakebites. In this province, we have heard of two occurrences only in which these animals have figured. Both took place in the Shikarpore collectorate, we believe; the first consisting of a tiger pouncing upon a native who was picking up fuel in the jungle, and whom the beast contented to use rather roughly, and the second, being the carrying off of somebody's calf. Against this we have to offer that one hundred and seven fatal cases of snake-bite are recorded in sixteen weeks, between the months of June and November of the same year, while the probability is very strong that during the twelve months the deaths from this source of mortality in the province cannot have been much less than one hundred and thirty. And yet, Government continues to pay the higher price of Rs. 12 for a tiger's head, and will not revive the paltry donation of one rupee for a whole dozen of snakes' heads or one anna per head for every one produced under that number.—Sindian.

NEEMUCH, June 8.—A heavy thunder-storm passed over the station yesterday, and has been repeated on a smaller scale to-day. We have had no hot weather to speak of, but the change is refreshing. Strange to say, no rain fell in the town of Neemuch yesterday, though here it came down in torrents. Is Government going to do anything for us in the way of increasing our pay to meet the unavoidable expenses of living? Glance over the following contrasted rates, per rupee, of a few of the necessities of life before and after the mutiny, and solve the problem "How to make both ends meet" under the circumstances:—

	Before the mutiny.	After the mutiny.
Bread ...	lbs. 15	... 6
Dhal ...	" 85	... 14
Ghee ...	" 5	... 2½
Wheat ...	" 45	... 20

and everything else in proportion. House-rent, servants, Europe stores—everything has risen in proportion, and there is no sign of any reduction, rather the contrary.

Courts Martial.

Head Quarters, Simla, May 18.—Several cases have occurred recently of applications for general courts martial having been sent to head quarters in an incomplete state, and especially without that previous minute investigation and summary of evidence which is necessary for the Commander in Chief to form a correct judgment of the case.

The result has been delay in bringing men to trial, and what is of far greater importance, that soldiers have been needlessly confined with a view to being brought before a court martial, and that the proceedings of these military tribunals, often convened at great inconvenience to the service, and to that of officers brought from a distance to compose them, have proved purposeless and unnecessary.

The Commander in Chief desires the particular attention of commanding officers to this important duty, and directs that no circumstances, however trivial, connected with the commission of crimes, may be omitted in the summary of the evidence taken before them in the preliminary investigation, and that all evidence given should be recorded in the first person.

Any statement which the prisoner is desirous of making in exculpation of himself, or any evidence of witnesses in his behalf, should be recorded, after due warning to him, according to the regulations. When the prisoner has no statement to make and no witnesses to call, an entry to this effect should be made.

E. HAYTHORN, Colonel, Adjutant general.

Children of the Lawrence Military Asylum.

Head Quarters, Simla, May 21.—H.E. the C. in C. having had under consideration the mode of defraying expenses incurred on account of children sent from the Lawrence Military Asylum to England, is pleased, with the sanction of Government, to issue the following orders on the subject:—

1st. Children belonging to the asylum, when ordered to be sent to England, are to be placed, whenever practicable, in charge of trustworthy persons proceeding home with the invalids of the season from one of the regiments at neighbouring stations.

2nd. Remuneration is to be paid to such persons at the rate of Rs. 30 for each boy, and Rs. 40 for each girl.

3rd. Outfit allowance is to be granted at the rate of Rs. 40 for each boy, and Rs. 50 for each girl.

4th. Free carriage and rations are to be supplied by the commissariat for all such children proceeding to England.

5th. The outfit allowance is to be drawn by the Principal of the Lawrence Asylum, and the remuneration to the person taking charge of the children is to be drawn in a contingent bill by the officer settling with the invalids at the port of embarkation.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

INDIAN REVENUE, &c.

ON the 23rd ult. there were several Indian questions before the House of Commons—Sir Charles Wood's statement on the finances of India, the Mhow Court-Martial, the Indian Staff Corps, the seat of the Anglo-Indian Government, claims upon Oude, and the East India Council. All these subjects were touched upon; and one of them, the most important, was treated at great length; and yet that subject—the finances of India—created so little interest amongst British legislators that Mr. Vansittart despondingly remarked that there was very little inducement for any one to take part in the discussion of Indian affairs in the House of Commons. When Colonel Sykes, he remarked, was making his speech there were not more than sixteen persons present. He might have added that even when the Secretary of State for India was making announcements of the most triumphant and gratifying character respecting the prosperity of our splendid possessions in the East, there were but eight-and-twenty members present altogether, including Sir Charles Wood himself. And yet Sir Charles had to tell a tale that ought to excite the attention of the whole civilised world—all who are interested in the history of mankind. Every British man might be expected to listen to such an announcement with peculiar pride and satisfaction; and there can be no doubt that the Governments and people of other lands will receive it with a mingled emotion of envy and admiration. What must be thought of the might, and majesty, and wealth of England if her senators can afford to regard such an exemplification of her vast resources in a distant land with such perfect indifference? The Indian Secretary of State had to inform the representatives of the British nation that India, which a few years ago the world imagined we were on the very eve of losing for ever—which had been reduced to a state of universal anarchy and hopeless bankruptcy—by the wisdom and energy of her rulers, had been raised in half-a-dozen years to a condition of unprecedented prosperity. Though the expenditure in India had been much beyond what had been anticipated, and great public works of utility had been carried on in a style of regal munificence, Sir Charles Wood had the proud gratification to announce that a deficit of the preceding year was changed in the present year to a surplus of one million two hundred and eighty thousand pounds! This news was worth the listening to, and yet it was told to empty benches, and Sir Charles Wood wasted his sweetness on the desert air. However, it matters not much how apathetic on Indian subjects the majority of members of the House may be, so long as every word that was uttered will reach not only every corner of this kingdom, but every quarter of the world, and add to the great name and extensive moral influence of our noble fatherland.

PARLIAMENTARY REPORT OF THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

THE Return of the famous Mhow Court-martial has at last been issued to Members of Parliament and to the public. It extends to 181 folio pages pretty closely printed, and may be had for a florin. We shall keep our copy of it at hand for reference, and perhaps may be able to make important use of it before long. At present we need only say that the perusal of this long report confirms us in the opinion which we have already expressed—that Paymaster Smales, who was cashiered and ruined for accusing Colonel Crawley in an informal or irregular manner of being absent from muster parades, was very harshly dealt with. Colonel Crawley's mode of addressing his officers was enough to try the patience of a saint. That such an indiscreet gentleman as Captain Smales should have been provoked by him into an act that was in breach of military rule is anything but surprising. But it is surprising that his brother officers, the members of the court-martial should have laid all the blame on the weaker party, and have punished him with such extreme severity. He was charged with malignant falsehoods against his commanding officer; but how can that charge be said to be proved when a dozen officers of the regiment, at the risk of their commanding officer's vengeance, swore that what he said of Colonel Crawley was no more than the truth? The colonel's reply was a mere verbal quibble. He was present, he said—that is to say, he was within sight of the parade! But another officer commanded in his place, and superintended the muster, and he (Colonel Crawley) did sign the muster-roll, as asserted. Though the colonel says that he saw the officers and men on a certain muster morning, many of them swear that they did not see him. And yet he has the face to talk of the utter falsehood of the allegations against him. Even granting that the charges against Paymaster Smales were not in every respect exactly true, it cannot be said of them, as was said of Colonel Crawley's charge of conspiracy against the three sergeant-majors whom he put under close arrest, that they "were without a shadow of foundation." Yet Colonel Crawley, before the court-martial, had the audacity to say of these witnesses against him—whom he seems to have put under arrest that they might come before the court as prisoners, and at a great disadvantage—that he "put their evidence quite out of court, as they were guilty of conspiracy against him." We shall not weary our readers just now with any further remarks on this stale and disagreeable subject; but we may soon be obliged to return to it.

We had written thus far when we received intelligence that her Majesty has been graciously pleased to grant a pardon to Paymaster Smales. He is not, indeed, to go back to his old regiment, but he is eligible now to an appointment in another regiment. The military secretary writes:—"The Judge-Advocate-General has represented to his Royal Highness that, in consequence of further information having been obtained concerning the manner in which your trial by general court-martial was conducted, the proceedings are, in his opinion, vitiated." We should like to know what further information is alluded to. There was quite enough information before the authorities a year ago to have justified this reversal of the decision of the court-martial. We have all along complained that Paymaster Smales had been treated with cruel severity, if not actual illegality and injustice. Now that the proceedings and decision of the unfortunate Mhow court-martial are laid before the nation, the authorities are fairly ashamed of having sanctioned and confirmed them. The whole case of Colonel Crawley and the Inniskilling Dragoons has involved a series of improprieties and faults and blunders that have thrown discredit on almost every one who has been in any degree concerned in it.

JOINT-STOCK HOTELS IN THE EAST.

THE extraordinary success of the Calcutta Joint-Stock Hotel Company has suggested to some wealthy and influential gentlemen, now at home, but who have spent their best years in India, and who are still more or less connected with Indian interests, the scheme of an "Oriental Hotel Company" on a much larger scale. Full particulars will be found in our advertisement columns.

All old Indians remember the day when, to speak somewhat paradoxically, all private hospitality was public; that is to say, an Englishman's house in India was not his castle, but an inn, where almost every fresh arrival from Europe, every respectable visitor, was warmly welcomed, and made himself thoroughly at home, and had no bill to settle at his departure. Every well-to-do house-holder held the position of a Harcastle, the hospitable gentleman-landlord in Goldsmith's famous comedy, and his domicile might very naturally have been taken for such an hotel as the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and his fellow-directors are about to establish at every important railway station in India. The hospitable times we refer to have long gone by, and India is Anglicised. There is now little entertainment there for man and horse that is not paid for in hard cash. Every stranger at an Indian Presidency must take his ease at an inn. Even the late Governor of Madras and present Financial Minister for Bengal, on his arrival at Calcutta, went at once with bag and baggage to Spence's Hotel. Travellers in India may now repeat with truth the melancholy stanza of Shenstone:—

"Who'er has travelled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
His warmest welcome at an inn."

Dr. Johnson repeated these lines with "great emotion," and yet he consoled himself with the thought that "there is no private house at which people can enjoy themselves so well as at a capital tavern." "No man," he added, "but a very impudent dog indeed, can as freely command what is in another man's house as if it were his own. No, sir, there is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn." If Doctor Johnson's view of the matter be correct, Sir John Peter Grant and his fellow-directors are about to bestow on India no trifling boon. The question of whether inns or private houses are most agreeable we need not attempt to settle, nor need we now say whether we ought to revert with regret to the past of India, and lament its present condition, or congratulate the friends of progress on the prodigious changes which are now taking place in every quarter of that vast and most valuable British possession; but we may without a moment's hesitation admit the fact that hotel accommodation for travellers in India has become a positive necessity, and that great numbers of the most respectable settled residents there are resigning all the vexations of house-keeping, selling off all their furniture, and removing with their families into well-conducted hotels, where they can really live at less cost and in more comfort than in private houses with a large and troublesome staff of domestic attendants. Comparatively but a few years ago there was not a single decent hotel in the City of Palaces. What inns there were, were mere pot-houses, and no gentleman could enter them without disgrace. There are now in Calcutta some excellent hotels on a large scale, in which Englishmen of high social position take up their residence,—but at least five times as many are required. Yet Calcutta is better supplied with houses of public accommodation than any other part of India. The new company—with its experienced, able, and highly respected Chairman, and its brilliant list of influential directors—may make sure of a great commercial success, and while they benefit themselves, will add largely to the comforts and conveniences of their fellow-countrymen in India.

We understand that already, while the scheme is only in its infancy, the shares in this new Company are at from one to two premium.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

Mr. CONINGHAM asked the Under-Secretary for War whether he would lay upon the table a copy of the warrant granted to the Commander-in-Chief in India, authorising him to confirm sentences of general courts-martial upon officers, and whether he would state the reasons of the removal of Lieutenant-adjutant Fitzsimon from the adjutancy of the Enniskillen Dragoons.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said there was no objection to lay on the table a copy of the warrant referred to. As to the other question, if the hon. member would look at the Army List, he would see that Lieutenant Fitzsimon had not been removed from the adjutancy of the Enniskillen Dragoons. He had, however, been suspended by Colonel Crawley from acting as adjutant. The Commander-in-Chief had resolved to defer any action in the matter until the conclusion of the court-martial on Colonel Crawley. As one of the most important questions in that case involved a difference of statement between Colonel Crawley and Lieutenant Fitzsimon, it would clearly be improper to discuss it now—(hear, hear).

Mr. BOUVERIE said it would be in the recollection of the House that two memorandums in connection with this case had lately been laid on the table. After the first of these was made public, he had reason to believe that there was another memorandum from the Adjutant-General to the Commander-in-Chief in India on the same subject, and he invited his noble friend the Under-Secretary to produce it. Since then a memorandum, marked "Privately sent to the Commander-in-Chief in India," had been laid on the table. That was a document which, being of a private character, he had never asked for, and which, in his opinion, the House was not entitled to see—(hear). He had been led to understand that there was another communication from the Adjutant-General to the Commander-in-Chief in India, and he now begged to ask whether that was not the case, and whether the private memorandum had not been laid on the table through an inadvertence.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said it was perfectly clear from the statement of his right hon. friend that the memorandum laid before the House was not the one he wished to see, and that he had never intended to ask for a private document. At the time he said that he did not think the paper in question would bear out what the right hon. gentleman had stated, but his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief was personally anxious that, as it had been mentioned, it should, although private, be laid on the table. There had been a great deal of correspondence between the military authorities at home and those in India on this subject, and he had no doubt that there was some letter in that correspondence such as his right hon. friend had referred to; but it would be extremely inconvenient and unfair to publish one out of a long series of letters. The proper course would be for his right hon. friend or some other member to move for the whole correspondence, and then it would be for the consideration of the Secretary of State whether it should be produced. He could, however, assure the House that no communication had emanated from the Horse Guards modifying, in any material point, the view promulgated by his Royal Highness in his first memorandum—(hear, hear).

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

Colonel DUNNE asked the Secretary of State for India what were the qualifications required for the Staff Corps in India; and whether the selection for this service was made by the military authorities in that country, or the civil authorities in England.

Sir C. WOOD said there was no general qualification for the Staff Corps, and the appointments were made in India, subject to the approbation of the home authorities.

CLAIMS UPON OUDE.

Sir A. BULLER asked the Secretary of State for India the reason why the claims of the representatives of the Calcutta bankers, Monohur Doss and Dwarcab Doss, upon the Government and State of Oude, were to be referred for investigation in India; seeing that the agents of the claimants were in England, that the documentary evidence on which their claim was founded was also here, as well as all the official proceedings relating thereto, that the reference to an Indian judge or other local functionary would be unsatisfactory and inconclusive, and would involve great unnecessary expense and personal inconvenience, and exclude the services of persons most cognizant with the facts and merits of the case; what was the nature of the inquiry proposed to be made, and whether it was to be limited, like the inquiry contemplated by the right hon. gentleman's predecessors in office, Mr. Vernon Smith and Lord Stanley, to the question whether the claims submitted fell within the category of "public and bona fide debts of the King of Oude;" or whether he proposed to leave it to the Indian judge or commissioner, whoever he may be, to re-open the entire question, and to report his opinion as to the moral and equitable liability of the British Government; and whether, in finally dealing with these claims, he was prepared to adhere to the principles laid down by Lord Stanley in that House, when Indian Minister, that "the transfer of the revenues of Oude to Great Britain did carry with it a liability for such debts of the former Government as were fairly and justly contracted.

Sir C. WOOD stated, in reply to the long question of the hon. member (a laugh), that an inquiry was ordered by his predecessor to be made into the subject referred to, and he had merely acted ministerially in carrying out the instructions given by the noble lord the member for Lynn. He had given no directions whatever; in fact, as the responsibility of ultimately deciding what was to be done would devolve upon him, he had carefully abstained from going into the merits of any one of the cases.

EAST INDIA COUNCIL.

On the motion of Mr. VANSITTART, an address was agreed to for a return of the names of the members of the Indian Council and their salaries; also, of all other salaries, pensions, and emoluments which they individually receive, either from the Crown or from the Indian revenues.

THE SEAT OF THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

Mr. G. DUFF called attention to the expediency of transferring the seat of the Indian Government to some point more eligible than Calcutta. He condemned Calcutta on the ground of its position and unhealthiness, and argued that the proper capital should be situated in Western India. The two most desirable points were Bombay and Poonah; but he gave the preference to the latter, not only because of its climate, but also because of the means which its fastnesses afforded for successful resistance until reinforcements had reached India from this country. But wherever they might place the seat of power, let them at least determine to leave Calcutta, and convoke in the meantime councils periodically in different parts of the country.

Mr. GREGSON said it appeared to him that the wishes of the hon. gentleman had been practically carried into effect, and therefore he saw no reason for any alteration.

Sir C. WOOD said the question had undoubtedly excited considerable attention in India, and some persons had thought it desirable to remove the seat of Government from Calcutta, but he thought very little light would be thrown upon the subject by a mere repetition of the debate of last year. He could not approve of the advice of those hon. members who recommended that the Government should be wandering over the land till it found a place of rest. Calcutta had been for many years the seat of Government, and all the public offices were there, and he thought it would be most inconvenient to remove those establishments. With regard to council meetings, the Governor-general had proposed that in the ensuing autumn his council meetings should be held in some part of Upper India, but the chief difficulty was the trouble and expense of removing the large staff of clerks and servants. The last four Governors had expressed an opinion against any alteration of the seat of Government.

Mr. LIDDELL wished to know whether the Governor-general had power to order troops upon foreign service without the previous sanction of Parliament.

Sir C. WOOD said that under ordinary circumstances no such orders would be given, but, under extraordinary circumstances, the Governor-general had power to do so.

Mr. W. E. FORSTER thought the answer of the right hon. gentleman left it very desirable that some information should be given as to the employment of the Indian army. What had happened in China, what had probably happened in Japan, and what they had been told was to happen in New Zealand, showed clearly that the Crown had the disposal of a much larger army than was voted by Parliament. It was necessary that the position of the Indian army should be clearly understood. When the Indian Bill was passed the Chancellor of the Exchequer introduced a clause to prevent the employment of Indian troops beyond the limit of India, except in cases of urgent necessity, without the previous consent of Parliament. If the present proceedings were allowed to continue the Crown might soon have 200,000 troops which had not been voted by the House.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY wished to know how those troops were to be paid when they went beyond India. The executive took upon themselves the employment of the troops, but the House had to pay for them, and he should like to have some explanation not only upon the constitutional, but upon the financial question.

Lord PALMERSTON said it would be an exaggeration to suppose that the Government would ever have the command of the whole of the Indian army. Indian troops were paid in India out of the Indian revenue, and they could not be employed elsewhere unless provided for out of the general revenue of the country. Only a limited number would ever be sent away by any Government, and then it would be upon the supposition that the expense would be sanctioned by Parliament. With regard to New Zealand, a sudden insurrection had broken out, and 3,000 men had been applied for, and he thought the Governor-general of India would have been guilty of a neglect of duty if he had refused to comply with that request—(hear). Next session it would be the duty of the Government to propose a vote for the extra expense.

Colonel SYKES said that in sending thousands of Indian troops to slaughter the aborigines, when they were in the right and we were in the wrong, we were using those troops for an oppressive, despotic, and unjustifiable purpose.

SIKHS FOR NEW ZEALAND.

Mr. W. FORSTER asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the despatches lately received from New Zealand confirmed the statement in a public journal, that the Governor of New Zealand had sent a request to the Governor-General of India asking him to send Sikh troops to aid in suppressing the disturbances in New Zealand.

Mr. C. FORTESCUE said that no application had been made by the Governor of New Zealand to the Governor-General of India. By the last mail, however, Sir G. Grey wrote home that there was the greatest reason to apprehend that the murder of the soldiers which had lately taken place at Taranaki would be the signal for a renewal of the war between the natives and settlers. Under these circumstances Sir G. Grey had, with the advice of his ministers, applied to her Majesty's Government to augment the forces in the colony by one European regiment and two Sikh regiments, it being the opinion of military men out there who had served in India that the latter troops would be remarkably well adapted for warfare in New Zealand.

INDIAN FINANCES.

Sir C. WOOD made his statement on the finances of India. After detailing the amount of the revenue and expenditure for the year 1861-2, and the increase and diminution of the receipts from the principal items, he stated that the regular estimate for 1862-3 exceeded the Budget Estimate by £2,134,000. The expenditure in India had been higher than was anticipated by £140,000; on the other hand, the expenditure in England had been less by £395,000; and, on the whole, there would be an estimated surplus of £1,340,000. The revenue for the current year 1863-4 was estimated at £45,306,000, and the expenditure at £44,490,000, leaving a surplus of £816,000. The Government of India had thought it would be wise to reduce taxation to the amount of £335,000, which would make the probable surplus £480,000. After showing the progressive reduction of expenditure in India, he proceeded to offer explanations and comments upon particular points,—the discontinuance of the Indian navy, the health of the army, the expenditure upon public works, the extent of railway and water communication opened, sales of waste land, the cinchona plantations in the Madras provinces, the cultivation of cotton, the increased consumption of English salt, &c. He concluded by congratulating the House (barely numbering thirty members) upon the finances of India having in so short a time reached their present satisfactory condition. He then moved a series of resolutions setting forth the net revenues and charges thereon in the several Governments of India for the year ended the 30th of April, 1862, the interest on the registered debt, and the charges defrayed in England on account of India for the same period.

Observations upon various matters referred to in the statement were made by Colonel SYKES, Mr. VANSITTART, Mr. GREGSON, Mr. KINNAIRD, Mr. BUXTON, and Mr. BAZLEY, whose suggestions on the subject of cotton cultivation in India led

Mr. AYRTON to inveigh against the groundless accusations to which the Government was subjected for its supposed neglect of the interests of Lancashire by not encouraging and assisting the production of Indian cotton. He touched upon the salt-tax and the opium revenue, urging the onerous character of the former, and warning the Government of the precarious nature of the latter item.

Mr. BAZLEY protested against the remarks of Mr. Ayrton in relation to Lancashire.

After a brief reply by Sir C. WOOD, the resolutions were agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 24.

THE CHINESE INDEMNITY.

In reply to a question from Colonel SYKES, relative to the distribution of the indemnity obtained from the Chinese Government under the treaty of Nankin,

Mr. PEEL said the financial accounts did not show the separate appropriation of the principal divisions of the Chinese indemnity of the year 1842. The total amount was twenty-one millions of dollars, consisting of twelve millions of dollars for the war, six millions for the value of the opium, and three millions for the debts due to the Hong Kong merchants. The sum paid into the Exchequer was carried into the financial account of the year 1843.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 27.

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

Mr. CONINGHAM announced his intention, in consequence of the lateness of the period when the necessary papers were laid on the table, to bring the subject of the Mhow court-martial on an early day next session. He proposed at the same time to call attention to the anomalous position of the Commander-in-Chief with respect to the Indian army, and to propose an inquiry as to the reasons why military life should be less secure in India than in other portions of her Majesty's dominions.

THE CAPTURE OF HERAT.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs if the Government had received intelligence that Herat had been taken by Dost Mahommed's forces, if the Persians were preparing to retake it, and if Dost Mahommed were still alive.

Mr. LAYARD said that there appeared to be a great deal of mystery hanging over the affairs of Herat. It was true, that some time ago her Majesty's Government received a telegram from the mission, stating that Herat was taken, but since then no confirmation of the report had been received. As to the Persians having recaptured it, he was not aware that any steps had been taken by the Persian Government to send troops there for the purpose; and with regard to the death of Dost Mahommed, contradictory telegrams had been received on the subject.

THE TELEGRAPH BETWEEN KHANIKIN AND BUSHIRE.

Colonel SYKES asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs the reason of the delay in signing the convention with Persia, for the establishment of telegraphic communication between Khanikin and Bushire?

Mr. LAYARD replied that there had been no actual delay in signing the convention, but that there was yet an agreement to be come to with regard to the use of the wires, of which there was to be a double set. When the convention was signed, it would be laid on the table of the House. In regard to another notice, which the hon. and gallant member had on the paper, for copy of the correspondence between the English and Russian Governments on the subject, the hon. member recommended that it should be postponed until next session.

THE BANDA PRIZE MONEY.

In reply to Mr. S. FITZGERALD, The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the distribution of the Banda and Kirwee prize money would not take place until the decision of the Treasury had been brought under the review of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 28.

THE SUZ CANAL.

Mr. D. GRIFFITH asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether there is any truth whatever in the assertion made by M. Lesseps in his report to the shareholders of the Suez Canal, in which, for the purpose of palliating or defending the employment of forced labour on that work, he undertakes to say, "The company of the English steamers, in their establishment at Suez, is provided by the Egyptian Government with the porters and labourers necessary for the embarkation and debarkation of their cargoes by means of forced labour (travail obligatoire)."

Lord PALMERSTON said that he really could not be answerable for any assertion made by M. Lesseps. He did not know whether it was a fact or not that the Peninsular and Oriental Company employed forced labour for the purposes mentioned by the hon. member. It might or might not be so; but it was quite certain that wherever, by the order of the Sultan, forced labour was to be put an end to, the order would apply equally to the Peninsular and Oriental Company as to any other persons employing forced labour in any other work in Egypt.

THE MHOW COURT-MARTIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

Sir,—I believe I can assist Mr. Bouverie in describing the document bearing on the Mhow court-martial, which he asks the War-office to produce.

Two memoranda, emanating from the Horse Guards, have been read by Colonel Crawley to the assembled officers of the 6th Dragoons. They are, therefore, clearly not private letters, but public documents, which the House of Commons is entitled to see. The first of them is dated December 18, 1862, and has been published; the second, which was communicated by Colonel Crawley to the regiment at Mhow about the end of April or the beginning of May, 1863, is probably the document which Mr. Bouverie wishes to elicit. I have a resumé of it before me. It cannot possibly be identical with the letter dated "Horse Guards, February, 1863," privately sent to the Commander-in-Chief in India by the Duke of Cambridge, which has since been produced, inasmuch as a private document of that nature would certainly not have been formally read to the assembled officers of any regiment. As it is thus clear that two public memoranda from the Horse Guards have been read to the officers of the 6th Dragoons, there can be no real difficulty in ascertaining the identity of the second memorandum, and no well-grounded objection to producing it.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

A CIVILIAN.

POSITION OF OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN BRIGADES OF ARTILLERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

Sir,—As great misapprehension exists regarding the position of officers in the Indian Brigades of Artillery who were induced to record their names for general service, under a misinterpretation of the amalgamation orders on the subject, may I request the favour of your publishing the following extracts from Bengal and Madras general orders, which clearly show that all Artillery officers who accepted general service have been formally released from such engagement, and are at liberty to volunteer for general service at any time, which means (as laid down by the Secretary of State for India in his despatch) that any officer of Indian Artillery may at any time, and at his own convenience (if his services can be spared), exchange with any officer of the Home Artillery of similar rank, who may be willing to serve in India.—I am, yours truly,

July 28.

AN OLD INDIAN.

"A.O., No. 25, 20th of December, 1861.—A reference having been made to army head quarters, as to whether or not officers of the artillery who recorded their names for general service, under the impression that their elections were required by superior authority at once, should not, under paragraph 48 of letter No. 819, dated 10th of August, 1861, from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, published in G.O.G. 1st of October, 1861, page 550, be allowed to reconsider their choice and declare for general or local service at their own time and convenience, the following decision* of the Government of India on the subject is published for general information:—

“Letter from the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, Fort William, 28th of November, 1861, No. 1,098, to the Secretary to Government, Military Department, Fort St. George.

“In acknowledging the receipt of your letter, as per margin,† I am directed to acquaint you for the information of the Government of Madras, that the Governor-general in Council can see no objection to officers of artillery making, under the terms of the general order quoted in your letter, fresh elections for general or local service at their own time and convenience.”

MISCELLANEOUS.

APPOINTMENTS.—(Foreign-office, July 18.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint George Hugh Wyndham, Esq., now Second Paid Attaché to her Majesty's Legation in China, to be a Second Secretary in her Majesty's Diplomatic Service.—(India-office, July 23.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Mr. Henry Pendock St. George Tucker, of the Bombay Civil Service, to be a Judge of the High Court at Bombay.—(Downing-street, July 27.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Wilberforce Wilson, Esq., to be Assistant Surveyor-general for the Colony of Hong Kong.

PERSIAN ORDER OF THE LION AND SUN.—(Whitehall, July 31.)—The Queen has been pleased to give and grant unto Julius de Gorroguer Dolmage, Esq., who is actually and entirely employed beyond her Majesty's dominions in the military service of the Shah of Persia, in which he holds the rank of Colonel, her Majesty's royal licence and authority that he may accept and wear the Insignia of the Persian Order of the Lion and Sun, of the Third Class, which the Shah of Persia has been pleased to confer upon him.

THE SUEZ CANAL is approaching the status of an accomplished fact. M. de Lesseps' energy has proved too much for Lord Palmerston's opposition. The military results of the colonisation of the Isthmus are likely to prove more important than its commercial consequences, as we may find out should there be any active revival of the difficulties of what is called the Eastern Question. The elaborate report of M. Lesseps and M. Voisin contains many interesting facts concerning the progress and condition of this vast work.

POSTAGE ON LETTERS, &c., FOR INDIA AND CHINA, BY FRENCH PACKET.—Arrangements have been made with the French Post-office, by which, after the 1st August next, letters and printed papers may be forwarded to India and China by the French line of mail packets, at the same rates of postage as are chargeable on letters and printed papers sent via Marseilles, for conveyance by British packet, as shown in the following table:—Letters addressed to Aden, Ceylon, Madras, Calcutta, and Pondicherry, not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 10d.; above $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., and not exceeding 1 oz., 1s. 8d.; above 1 oz., and not exceeding 2 ozs., 3s. 4d.; above 2 ozs., and not exceeding 3 ozs., 5s.; each additional ounce, 1s. 8d. Letters addressed to Cochin China, Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Singapore, not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 1s. 4d.; above $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., and not exceeding 1 oz., 2s. 8d.; above 1 oz., and not exceeding 2 ozs., 5s. 4d.; above 2 ozs., and not exceeding 3 ozs., 8s.; each additional ounce, 2s. 8d. Newspapers 3d. each, not exceeding 4 ozs. Other printed papers, not exceeding 4 ozs., 6d.; above 4 ozs., and not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., 1s.; above $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., and not exceeding 1 lb., 2s.; every additional $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., 1s. Letters, &c., intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed “by French mail packet from Marseilles.” Upon letters for Ceylon the postage must be prepaid, but upon those for the British possessions in India and Hong Kong, the postage may either be paid in advance, or left to be paid on delivery, at the option of the sender. In all cases, however, where the postage is not prepaid, an additional rate will be charged on delivery. The prepayment of postage on letters for Pondicherry, Saigon (Cochin China), and Shanghai (at which places France has Post-office agents) is optional, without any fine for those sent unpaid. The postage on newspapers, books, and other printed papers, must in all cases be prepaid, according to the regulations in force with respect to similar articles sent by the British packets. The French packets leave Marseilles on the 10th of each month for Alexandria, in correspondence with a line from Suez, proceeding to Aden, Point-de-Galle, Madras, Calcutta, Singapore, Cochin China, Hong Kong, and Shanghai. Letters, &c., intended to be forwarded by them must be posted in, or reach London, at the latest, in time for the day mail to France of the 18th. By command of the Postmaster-general, Rowland Hill, Secretary.—General Post-office, 29th July, 1863.

INDIGO SALES.—The quarterly sales of indigo, which commenced on the 14th ult., terminated on the 23rd ult. Altogether 11,322 chests were announced; but 4,355 having been withdrawn, only 6,967 were sold. The high price of cotton has very adversely influenced the trade in indigo. It is reported that, in consequence of the want of cotton, the calico printers have in a great measure been prevented from actively pursuing their occupation, and that the deliveries of indigo have been more than sufficient to meet the requirements. The stock during the past year has been increased by 5,000 chests, and the price per lb. has receded about 3s. 3d. for the best descriptions, and 2s. 6d. for inferior qualities. In fact, so small has been the demand, that in the intervals of the last three sales the staple could hardly find buyers at the rates established by the auctions. The wool dyers of Yorkshire and the West of England, as well as many German houses, have bought rather largely during the sales. Fine Bengals were taken for Russia, at a small decline from the rates obtained in May; medium qualities fell 3d. per lb.; pale dull qualities, Oudes and ordinary, 4d. to 8d. per lb.; Kurpah, 3d. to 6d.; ordinary Madras, 3d. to 6d.; while good Madras was held for 3d. advance. Several marks of low earthly Madras, amounting to 300 chests, sold at prices averaging 1s. 2d. to 1s. 7d. per lb.

BALANCE OF THE CHINESE INDEMNITY.—By a parliamentary paper, published on Wednesday, the 22nd ult., it appears that the balance at the Exchequer of the sum of 3,000,000 dols., received from the Chinese Government, under the treaty of Nankin, in payment of the debts due by Chinese merchants to British subjects, amounts to 451,008 dols. 26c.

OUTRAM'S STATUE.—We regret to hear there is a difficulty about the site of Sir James Outram's statue. Mr. Cowper objects to any addition being made to the sculptured beauty of Trafalgar-square, and it is rumoured that the committee will offer the statue to Scotland, or to the birth-place of the gallant soldier in Derbyshire. Surely London is the place where the image of the Indian Bayard should find a fitting pedestal. As Mr. Cowper has declared the Government cannot replace the missing limbs of the elegant equestrian image of George II. in Leicester-square, where it offers such a pleasant proof of our taste and artistic culture to the "intelligent foreigner," and as the authorities have no concurrent jurisdiction with the felina to whom the enclosure belongs, perhaps the committee would find no one to interfere with them if they placed the statue there for the time. It really is a creditable work of art. It would grace Trafalgar-square far better than the statues of those great soldiers whose most glorious field of labour and fame the sculptors have delicately symbolised by enormous cloaks, hanging, in some mysterious resistance to the laws of gravitation, from the sharp end of the shoulder—meant to typify the heat of India in general. Where do our generals get these cloaks from? They are never seen except in their statues, and must be prepared ad hoc. But at all events Sir James Outram, who was honoured by a funeral in Westminster Abbey, is entitled to such a recognition of his services and his fame as would be implied by the permission to place his statue in some appropriate locality in the metropolis.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE COMING COURT-MARTIAL.—We understand that the mode of proceeding in the court-martial about to be held on Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley for the alleged illegal imprisonment, resulting in the death of Sergeant-Major Lilley, has been fully arranged by the authorities, and that the intention is to keep the inquiry within the narrowest possible compass. We are informed that the only question raised will be whether or not the subaltern officer exceeded his instructions in the mode of placing the sentry. A strong point in Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley's defence will be, we have reason to believe, to throw the blame of the sergeant-major's premature death upon Dr. Turnbull, who, it is alleged, made no report to his commanding officer as to the state of the prisoner's health. We have full confidence that the parties interested will have a satisfactory answer to these allegations; but "forewarned is forearmed," it is but right that they should know in time the sort of case against which they will have to contend. As the court-martial upon Corporal Blake will form an important feature in this inquiry, it is a fortunate fact that the soldier who was orderly-room clerk of the Inniskilling Dragoons during its progress is now in England, having purchased his discharge, and is ready to be produced as a witness upon the trial.—United Service Gazette.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Himalaya, iron screw troopship, Capt. Edward Lacy, having been brought alongside Portsmouth dockyard, embarked the 2nd battalion of the 25th regiment on Tuesday morning, July 28, for conveyance to Ceylon. The hired sailing transport Herefordshire, sailed from Spithead the same morning with the head-quarters of the 5th Lancers on board, bound to Calcutta. The troops comprise Captains Wyatt (commanding), Carden, Vanderleur, and Smith; Lieuts. Sedley, Weaver, and Gwyther; Cornets Harrane, Ewen, Shriber, and Andrews; Paymaster Major Biggs, Surgeon Major Andrews, Assistant-surgeon Sutherland; 316 non-commissioned officers and privates, together with 76 women and children. The following drafts left Chatham, for Gravesend, on Wednesday, July 29, to embark on board the Star of India:—60 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 1st battalion, 19 regiment; 40 men of the 51st Light Infantry; 128 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 109th Bombay Infantry; and 63 men of the 94th regiment, making a total of 291, all ranks. The following officers go out in charge to join the service companies:—Major H. E. Jerome, V.C., 1st, 19th, and Ensign

Theodore B. Emerson, 1st, 19th; Captain Spencer, H. H. Edwards, and Lieut. H. W. Roberts, 89th; Lieut. Edward D. Oliver, 51st King's Own Light Infantry; and Ensign Stanford N. M'L. Nairne, 94th. On Friday last Ensign Cumberland and seven rank and file of the 82nd Regiment, and Ensign Vigne, of the 97th, left the camp at Colchester to join the service companies of those regiments in India. In the course of the last week 54 rank and file of the 103rd Regiment, and 38 rank and file of the 98th (accompanied by Capt. Edwards and Ensign Roberts), left the camp with the same object. Further draughts of officers and men are expected to leave the camp on Thursday or Friday for India.

SMALL-POX IN A TROOP SHIP.—The Windsor Castle, from London for Bombay, with troops, put back to Plymouth on Sunday last, small-pox having broken out on board. Two cases have been landed.

THE SIKHS AND THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.—It has been decided by the Government not to carry out their original intention of employing a force of Sikhs in what we fear we must consider the forthcoming New Zealand war. The reasons for this change have nothing to do with the remarks made in the House of Commons upon the constitutional question supposed to be involved in the employment of Indian troops out of India. It arises from financial considerations alone, it being found that, as a matter of direct economy as well as financial symmetry, it is desirable to have the whole force in New Zealand composed of Europeans. The Sikhs would receive, for instance, the Indian rate of pay and allowances, while the line regiments associated with them in the field would only get the ordinary pay. Hence we should either anticipate a feeling of great and not unintelligible jealousy and discontent on the part of the English soldiers, or prepare to pay the whole force upon the Indian scale. Upon consideration, therefore, the Government have determined, and we think wisely, to substitute European for Sikh soldiers in New Zealand. It was originally intended to send General Cameron 3,000 additional troops, and this number will be adhered to. As we mentioned last week, the 50th regiment will go on to New Zealand as soon as the Himalaya has landed the 2nd battalion 25th regiment in Ceylon. The 65th regiment, to relieve which the 2nd battalion 18th regiment have arrived about this time in the colony, will be detained, and in addition, two of the regiments which were ordered home from India will be despatched to New Zealand, to remain there until hostilities shall have ceased. The regiments ordered home are the 1st battalion 13th regiment from Bengal; the 74th, 69th, and 68th from Madras; and the 43rd from Bengal. It is not decided which two out of the five are likely to be selected for New Zealand. It would probably be the 68th and 69th, from the fact of their having actually the shortest term of foreign service; but we find that at the present moment there are over twenty officers of the 68th at home, who, being on leave or at the depot, have not been sent out, in consequence of the anticipated return of the regiment at once. Possibly the choice may be left to the Indian authorities, and one from Madras and one from Bengal may be sent, in which case the 69th and 43rd would appear most likely to go. The Indian establishment will be left for the moment short of a regiment by the diversion of the 50th to New Zealand, but this will not cause practical inconvenience, and it is not intended to send out the 55th, the corps now standing first on the roster for foreign service. When these arrangements are completed, General Cameron will have under his command the 1st battalion 12th, 2nd battalion 14th, 2nd battalion 18th, 40th, 50th, 57th, 65th, 70th, and two battalions from India, making ten in all, or a force of about 7,000 bayonets.—Army and Navy Gazette, August 1.

THE MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH.—A re-actu, which had been moved for by Mr. F. Peel, was published on Tuesday morning, the 21st ult., respecting this line of telegraph. The total net cost of laying it was £436,283. 10s. 8d. Towards this the amount voted was £261,247, and that contributed by the Indian Government, £174,493. 8s. 4d., leaving £543. 2s. 4d., advanced from civil contingencies. From November until the end of March, Government sent 382 messages, and private persons, 25,575; total, 25,957—the gross receipts being £50,427. 9s. 0d.

EUROPEANS AND EURASIANS IN INDIA.—Official returns show that the European population in India is much smaller than many persons suppose. Exclusive of the army, and the wives and children of soldiers, it would not fill a thriving English town. At the census of 1861 the British-born in all India were 84,083 officers and men of the army, 22,556 civilians, and 19,300 women and girls. A certain number of soldiers marry Indian wives; and the children of the two races, known as Eurasians, or half-castes, amount to a considerable number. At the census of 1837 they exceeded the English in the city of Calcutta.

OUTRAM'S STATUE.—We regret to hear there is a difficulty about the site of Sir James Outram's statue. Mr. Cowper objects to any addition being made to the sculptured beauty of Trafalgar-square, and it is rumoured that the committee will offer the statue to Scotland, or to the birth-place of the gallant soldier in Derbyshire. Surely London is the place where the image of the Indian Bayard should find a fitting pedestal. As Mr. Cowper has declared the Government cannot replace the missing limbs of the elegant equestrian image of George II. in Leicester-square, where it offers such a pleasant proof of our taste and artistic culture to the "intelligent foreigner," and as the authorities have no concurrent jurisdiction with the felix to whom the enclosure belongs, perhaps the committee would find no one to interfere with them if they placed the statue there for the time. It really is a creditable work of art. It would grace Trafalgar-square far better than the statues of those great soldiers whose most glorious field of labour and fame the sculptors have delicately symbolised by enormous cloaks, hanging, in some mysterious resistance to the laws of gravitation, from the sharp end of the shoulder—meant to typify the heat of India in general. Where do our generals get these cloaks from? They are never seen except in their statues, and must be prepared ad hoc. But at all events Sir James Outram, who was honoured by a funeral in Westminster Abbey, is entitled to such a recognition of his services and his fame as would be implied by the permission to place his statue in some appropriate locality in the metropolis.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE COMING COURT-MARTIAL.—We understand that the mode of proceeding in the court-martial about to be held on Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley for the alleged illegal imprisonment, resulting in the death of, Sergeant-Major Lilley, has been fully arranged by the authorities, and that the intention is to keep the inquiry within the narrowest possible compass. We are informed that the only question raised will be whether or not the subaltern officer exceeded his instructions in the mode of placing the sentry. A strong point in Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley's defence will be, we have reason to believe, to throw the blame of the sergeant-major's premature death upon Dr. Turnbull, who, it is alleged, made no report to his commanding officer as to the state of the prisoner's health. We have full confidence that the parties interested will have a satisfactory answer to these allegations; but "forewarned is forearmed," it is but right that they should know in time the sort of case against which they will have to contend. As the court-martial upon Corporal Blake will form an important feature in this inquiry, it is a fortunate fact that the soldier who was orderly-room clerk of the Inniskilling Dragoons during its progress is now in England, having purchased his discharge, and is ready to be produced as a witness upon the trial.—United Service Gazette.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Himalaya, iron screw troopship, Capt. Edward Lacy, having been brought alongside Portsmouth dockyard, embarked the 2nd battalion of the 25th regiment on Tuesday morning, July 28, for conveyance to Ceylon. The hired sailing transport Herefordshire, sailed from Spithead the same morning with the head-quarters of the 5th Lancers on board, bound to Calcutta. The troops comprise Captains Wyatt (commanding), Carden, Vandierlen, and Smith; Lieuts. Sedley, Weaver, and Gwyther; Cornets Harrane, Ewen, Shriber, and Andrews; Paymaster Major Biggs, Surgeon Major Andrews, Assistant-surgeon Sutherland; 316 non-commissioned officers and privates, together with 76 women and children. The following drafts left Chatham, for Gravesend, on Wednesday, July 29, to embark on board the Star of India:—60 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 1st battalion, 19th regiment; 40 men of the 51st Light Infantry; 128 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 109th Bombay Infantry; and 63 men of the 94th regiment, making a total of 291, all ranks. The following officers go out in charge to join the service companies:—Major H. E. Jerome, V.C., 1st, 19th, and Ensign

Theodore B. Emerson, 1st, 19th; Captain Spencer, H. H. Edwards, and Lieut. H. W. Roberts, 89th; Lieut. Edward D. Oliver, 51st King's Own Light Infantry; and Ensign Stanford N. M'L. Nairne, 94th. On Friday last Ensign Cumberland and seven rank and file of the 82nd Regiment, and Ensign Vigne, of the 97th, left the camp at Colchester to join the service companies of those regiments in India. In the course of the last week 51 rank and file of the 103rd Regiment, and 38 rank and file of the 98th (accompanied by Capt. Edwards and Ensign Roberts), left the camp with the same object. Further draughts of officers and men are expected to leave the camp on Thursday or Friday for India.

SMALL-POX IN A TROOP SHIP.—The Windsor Castle, from London for Bombay, with troops, put back to Plymouth on Sunday last, small-pox having broken out on board. Two cases have been landed.

THE SIKHS AND THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.—It has been decided by the Government not to carry out their original intention of employing a force of Sikhs in what we fear we must consider the forthcoming New Zealand war. The reasons for this change have nothing to do with the remarks made in the House of Commons upon the constitutional question supposed to be involved in the employment of Indian troops out of India. It arises from financial considerations alone, it being found that, as a matter of direct economy as well as financial symmetry, it is desirable to have the whole force in New Zealand composed of Europeans. The Sikhs would receive, for instance, the Indian rate of pay and allowances, while the line regiments associated with them in the field would only get the ordinary pay. Hence we should either anticipate a feeling of great and not unintelligible jealousy and discontent on the part of the English soldiers, or prepare to pay the whole force upon the Indian scale. Upon consideration, therefore, the Government have determined, and we think wisely, to substitute European for Sikh soldiers in New Zealand. It was originally intended to send General Cameron 3,000 additional troops, and this number will be adhered to. As we mentioned last week, the 50th regiment will go on to New Zealand as soon as the Himalaya has landed the 2nd battalion 25th regiment in Ceylon. The 65th regiment, to relieve which the 2nd battalion 18th regiment have arrived about this time in the colony, will be detained, and in addition, two of the regiments which were ordered home from India will be despatched to New Zealand, to remain there until hostilities shall have ceased. The regiments ordered home are the 1st battalion 13th regiment from Bengal; the 74th, 69th, and 68th from Madras; and the 43rd from Bengal. It is not decided which two out of the five are likely to be selected for New Zealand. It would probably be the 68th and 69th, from the fact of their having actually the shortest term of foreign service; but we find that at the present moment there are over twenty officers of the 68th at home, who, being on leave or at the depot, have not been sent out, in consequence of the anticipated return of the regiment at once. Possibly the choice may be left to the Indian authorities, and one from Madras and one from Bengal may be sent, in which case the 69th and 43rd would appear most likely to go. The Indian establishment will be left for the moment short of a regiment by the diversion of the 50th to New Zealand, but this will not cause practical inconvenience, and it is not intended to send out the 55th, the corps now standing first on the roster for foreign service. When these arrangements are completed, General Cameron will have under his command the 1st battalion 12th, 2nd battalion 14th, 2nd battalion 18th, 40th, 50th, 57th, 65th, 70th, and two battalions from India, making ten in all, or a force of about 7,000 bayonets.—Army and Navy Gazette, August 1.

THE MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH.—A return, which had been moved for by Mr. F. Peel, was published on Tuesday morning, the 21st ult., respecting this line of telegraph. The total net cost of laying it was £436,283. 10s. 8d. Towards this the amount voted was £261,247, and that contributed by the Indian Government, £174,493. 8s. 4d., leaving £543. 2s. 4d., advanced from civil contingencies. From November until the end of March, Government sent 382 messages, and private persons, 25,575; total, 25,957—the gross receipts being £50,427. 9s. 0d.

EUROPEANS AND EURASIANS IN INDIA.—Official returns show that the European population in India is much smaller than many persons suppose. Exclusive of the army, and the wives and children of soldiers, it would not fill a thriving English town. At the census of 1861 the British-born in all India were 84,083 officers and men of the army, 22,556 civilians, and 19,306 women and girls. A certain number of soldiers marry Indian wives; and the children of the two races, known as Eurasians, or half-castes, amount to a considerable number. At the census of 1837 they exceeded the English in the city of Calcutta.

OUTRAM'S STATUE.—We regret to hear there is a difficulty about the site of Sir James Outram's statue. Mr. Cowper objects to any addition being made to the sculptured beauty of Trafalgar-square, and it is rumoured that the committee will offer the statue to Scotland, or to the birth-place of the gallant soldier in Derbyshire. Surely London is the place where the image of the Indian Bayard should find a fitting pedestal. As Mr. Cowper has declared the Government cannot replace the missing limbs of the elegant equestrian image of George II. in Leicester-square, where it offers such a pleasant proof of our taste and artistic culture to the "intelligent foreigner," and as the authorities have no concurrent jurisdiction with the felons to whom the enclosure belongs, perhaps the committee would find no one to interfere with them if they placed the statue there for the time. It really is a creditable work of art. It would grace Trafalgar-square far better than the statues of those great soldiers whose most glorious field of labour and fame the sculptors have delicately symbolised by enormous cloaks, hanging, in some mysterious resistance to the laws of gravitation, from the sharp end of the shoulder—meant to typify the heat of India in general. Where do our generals get these cloaks from? They are never seen except in their statues, and must be prepared ad hoc. But at all events Sir James Outram, who was honoured by a funeral in Westminster Abbey, is entitled to such a recognition of his services and his fame as would be implied by the permission to place his statue in some appropriate locality in the metropolis.—Army and Navy Gazette.

THE COMING COURT-MARTIAL.—We understand that the mode of proceeding in the court-martial about to be held on Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley for the alleged illegal imprisonment, resulting in the death of, Sergeant-Major Lilley, has been fully arranged by the authorities, and that the intention is to keep the inquiry within the narrowest possible compass. We are informed that the only question raised will be whether or not the subaltern officer exceeded his instructions in the mode of placing the sentry. A strong point in Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley's defence will be, we have reason to believe, to throw the blame of the sergeant-major's premature death upon Dr. Turnbull, who, it is alleged, made no report to his commanding officer as to the state of the prisoner's health. We have full confidence that the parties interested will have a satisfactory answer to these allegations; but "forewarned is forearmed," it is but right that they should know in time the sort of case against which they will have to contend. As the court-martial upon Corporal Blake will form an important feature in this inquiry, it is a fortunate fact that the soldier who was orderly-room clerk of the Inniskilling Dragoons during its progress is now in England, having purchased his discharge, and is ready to be produced as a witness upon the trial.—United Service Gazette.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Himalaya, iron screw troopship, Capt. Edward Lacy, having been brought alongside Portsmouth dockyard, embarked the 2nd battalion of the 25th regiment on Tuesday morning, July 28, for conveyance to Ceylon. The hired sailing transport Herefordshire, sailed from Spithead the same morning with the head-quarters of the 5th Lancers on board, bound to Calcutta. The troops comprise Captains Wyatt (commanding), Carden, Vandeleur, and Smith; Lieuts. Sedley, Weaver, and Gwyther; Cornets Harrane, Ewen, Shriber, and Andrews; Paymaster Major Biggs, Surgeon Major Andrews, Assistant-surgeon Sutherland; 316 non-commissioned officers and privates, together with 76 women and children. The following drafts left Chatham, for Gravesend, on Wednesday, July 29, to embark on board the Star of India:—60 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 1st battalion, 19th regiment; 40 men of the 51st Light Infantry; 128 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 109th Bombay Infantry; and 63 men of the 94th regiment, making a total of 291, all ranks. The following officers go out in charge to join the service companies:—Major H. E. Jerome, V.C., 1st, 19th, and Ensign

Theodore B. Emerson, 1st, 19th; Captain Spencer, H. H. Edwards, and Lieut. H. W. Roberts, 89th; Lieut. Edward D. Oliver, 51st King's Own Light Infantry; and Ensign Stanford N. M'L. Nairne, 94th. On Friday last Ensign Cumberland and seven rank and file of the 82nd Regiment, and Ensign Vigne, of the 97th, left the camp at Colchester to join the service companies of those regiments in India. In the course of the last week 54 rank and file of the 103rd Regiment, and 38 rank and file of the 98th (accompanied by Capt. Edwards and Ensign Roberts), left the camp with the same object. Further draughts of officers and men are expected to leave the camp on Thursday or Friday for India.

SMALL-POX IN A TROOP SHIP.—The Windsor Castle, from London for Bombay, with troops, put back to Plymouth on Sunday last, small-pox having broken out on board. Two cases have been landed.

THE SIKHS AND THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.—It has been decided by the Government not to carry out their original intention of employing a force of Sikhs in what we fear we must consider the forthcoming New Zealand war. The reasons for this change have nothing to do with the remarks made in the House of Commons upon the constitutional question supposed to be involved in the employment of Indian troops out of India. It arises from financial considerations alone, it being found that, as a matter of direct economy as well as financial symmetry, it is desirable to have the whole force in New Zealand composed of Europeans. The Sikhs would receive, for instance, the Indian rate of pay and allowances, while the line regiments associated with them in the field would only get the ordinary pay. Hence we should either anticipate a feeling of great and not unintelligible jealousy and discontent on the part of the English soldiers, or prepare to pay the whole force upon the Indian scale. Upon consideration, therefore, the Government have determined, and we think wisely, to substitute European for Sikh soldiers in New Zealand. It was originally intended to send General Cameron 3,000 additional troops, and this number will be adhered to. As we mentioned last week, the 50th regiment will go on to New Zealand as soon as the Himalaya has landed the 2nd battalion 25th regiment in Ceylon. The 65th regiment, to relieve which the 2nd battalion 18th regiment have arrived about this time in the colony, will be detained, and in addition, two of the regiments which were ordered home from India will be despatched to New Zealand, to remain there until hostilities shall have ceased. The regiments ordered home are the 1st battalion 13th regiment from Bengal; the 74th, 69th, and 68th from Madras; and the 43rd from Bengal. It is not decided which two out of the five are likely to be selected for New Zealand. It would probably be the 68th and 69th, from the fact of their having actually the shortest term of foreign service; but we find that at the present moment there are over twenty officers of the 68th at home, who, being on leave or at the depot, have not been sent out, in consequence of the anticipated return of the regiment at once. Possibly the choice may be left to the Indian authorities, and one from Madras and one from Bengal may be sent, in which case the 69th and 43rd would appear most likely to go. The Indian establishment will be left for the moment short of a regiment by the diversion of the 50th to New Zealand, but this will not cause practical inconvenience, and it is not intended to send out the 55th, the corps now standing first on the roster for foreign service. When these arrangements are completed, General Cameron will have under his command the 1st battalion 12th, 2nd battalion 14th, 2nd battalion 18th, 40th, 50th, 57th, 65th, 70th, and two battalions from India, making ten in all, or a force of about 7,000 bayonets.—Army and Navy Gazette, August 1.

THE MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH.—A return, which had been moved for by Mr. F. Peel, was published on Tuesday morning, the 21st ult., respecting this line of telegraph. The total net cost of laying it was £436,283. 10s. 8d. Towards this the amount voted was £261,247, and that contributed by the Indian Government, £174,493. 8s. 4d., leaving £543. 2s. 4d., advanced from civil contingencies. From November until the end of March, Government sent 382 messages, and private persons, 25,575; total, 25,957—the gross receipts being £50,427. 9s. 1d.

EUROPEANS AND EURASIANS IN INDIA.—Official returns show that the European population in India is much smaller than many persons suppose. Exclusive of the army, and the wives and children of soldiers, it would not fill a thriving English town. At the census of 1861 the British-born in all India were 84,083 officers and men of the army, 22,556 civilians, and 19,300 women and girls. A certain number of soldiers marry Indian wives; and the children of the two races, known as Eurasians, or half-castes, amount to a considerable number. At the census of 1837 they exceeded the English in the city of Calcutta.

The deficiency of Hotel accommodation in India, China, and other places in the East to which Europeans now resort in large and annually increasing numbers, is a subject of general complaint; and it is evident that the development of the means of transit by Ocean and River Steamers, and by Railways, which has been in rapid progress now for some years, must imperiously fulfil all its important objects, so far as European intercourse with the East is concerned, until this want is adequately supplied.

In England, and on the Continent of Europe, it is now an ascertained fact that the Joint-Stock system may most successfully be applied to the establishment of Hotels of the first class. If this be so where good private Hotels before existed in large numbers, there seems no reason to doubt that an equal degree of commercial success is attainable by the application of capital, upon the same system, to the same object, in countries where, though the demand is great and increasing, it may almost be said that good private Hotels do not exist.

In Calcutta a Joint-Stock Company has lately purchased and undertaken the management of a hotel, and the prospects of the enterprise, as a commercial speculation, may be inferred from the very high premium at which their shares are quoted in the Calcutta market, see Times July 17, the Englishman's Weekly Mail of June 8th, 1863, and Allen's Indian Mail, viz.,—£25 paid, present value £42½ ex div., equal to 70 per cent. premium, and the payment of a dividend of 10 per cent. for the half-year ending 30th April last, equal to 20 per cent. per annum. Bombay offers a wide field for the establishment of a Hotel of a first-class character. The early completion of vast lines of railway converging in the island of Bombay, and the more frequent steam communication between that port and Europe, which will soon take place, must very much increase the demand for such accommodation. The same may be said of Madras.

It is under these circumstances that the Oriental Hotels Company (Limited) is established, in the confident belief that the application of European capital to India in this form will be not less profitable than useful. It is proposed, in the first instance, to supply the urgent requirements of Bombay and Point de Galle. There are other equally important places which will naturally engage the early attention of the Company, such, for example, as Madras, Singapore, and Kurrachee; not to speak of many very important Railway Stations in the interior of India, where there are now no Hotels at all, and where, at a comparatively small outlay, there is a large field for profitable operations.

The larger class of the Company's Hotels will afford all the conveniences of the best European Hotels, adapted to the climate, and to the habits of those for whom they are intended; whilst, in even the smallest class, the health and comfort of the inmates will be carefully studied.

It is intended to constitute Local Committees of Management in each Presidency, where Hotels may be established. In the event of two-thirds of the first issue of shares not being subscribed for, no allotment will take place, and the deposits will be returned to the subscribers, without deduction.

It is proposed to pay to Shareholders 5 per cent. interest upon the capital as paid up, until the first dividend is declared. Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be had on application to the Bankers, the Broker, or the Secretary.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfection with the most unerring accuracy, are secured, while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS.—STEAM COMMUNICATION between LONDON and INDIA by the MAGNIFICENT FLEET of STEAMERS belonging to the EAST INDIA and LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY. The well-known Clipper Auxiliary Steam-ship MAURITIUS, 2,135 tons, 300-horse power, T. THORNHILL, Commander, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 15th of AUGUST, embarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 20th of AUGUST, for CALCUTTA, calling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE and MADRAS. This magnificent Ship, built expressly for the Indian trade, has been thoroughly refitted, has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardess. The average passage of these steamers has been seventy-one days to Madras; some of them making the shortest passages on record. The line will be continued on the 20th of each succeeding month, with the strictest punctuality, by one of this Company's fleet of auxiliary screw steam-ships. For freight or passage apply to GRINDLAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Brokers, ALFRED BRETT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Mincing-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made. RICHARD DREW, Secretary. East India and London Shipping Company (Limited), 9, Mincing-lane, E.C.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!—C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chubb, Rhoads, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post. 23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer. They will never change colour, and are so constructed as to require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

TENDER & DECAYED TEETH STOPPED with ANODYNE CEMENT, which instantly allays the most violent pain, and fills up cavities, however large, and answers where every other kind of stopping has failed. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta and Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from 11 till 4. No connection with any person practising in the same profession.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As shown at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER. For which a Prize Medal was awarded to the Producer at the International Exhibition, 1862.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in furs, and every other species of insect. SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying Fleas in their Dogs, as also Ladies for their Pet Dogs. It is perfectly harmless in its nature, and may be applied without any apprehension, as it has no qualities deleterious to animal life. Sold in packets 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, or post free for 14 or 36 postage stamps, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C. Take notice each genuine packet bears the above name and address. See "The Field," October 7th and 9th, pp. 263, 263, and 294.

SARSAPARILLA. WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alternative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness is inviolable. "A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper. "We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet. "We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Lastly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations. IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINODINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

IMPORTANT TO OFFICERS.—Have all your BOTTLED ALES, WINES, &c., PACKED IN SEYMER'S REFRIGERANT STRAW ENVELOPES, which entirely prevent Heating, Fermentation, and Breakage; will use repeatedly as Wine Coolers, prevent all litter on board ship or in quarters, and save 20 per cent. in space and freight. Patentee, J. CALKIN, Sole Agent. Wholesale and Retail, JOHN WEISS and Son, 62, Strand, London. Price, in case, 5s. 6d.; post free, 6s. 6d.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer, Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss—16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage 1s. Double Truss—31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage 1s. 8d. An Umbilical Truss—12s., and 52s. 6d. Postage 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT. ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c., &c.—VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c.—They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s., and 16s. each. Postage 6d. JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—DESIRABILITY OF HEALTH.—To feel well is the greatest blessing known to man. With health all is sunshine, without it all is gloom. Holloway's Pills have long been noted for purifying the blood, promoting appetite, assisting digestion, and creating regularity throughout the body. They are a help to the sick, a comfort to the weak, and a solace to the pained. They may be taken with advantage in the slightest indisposition and the severest malady. Few can estimate the great blessings Holloway's medicine has for thirty years conferred upon mankind. The Pills are composed of the finest balsams, which act kindly on every organ, and cause no violent revulsions in the system—a fact of immense importance to the public.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 10th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE present mail is remarkably barren of anything like interesting matter. We have no further intelligence about the Nana Sahib, except by a telegram from Bombay, of July 24, to the effect that he has been "identified by a Chiab Brahmin, who was taken with him and has turned Queen's evidence." The same telegram reports that "a plan for a general rising in the cold weather is said to have been organized." People in general do not feel quite certain yet that we have got hold of the real Nana. The next mail from Bombay will probably furnish us with more satisfactory details.

The press of India, native and English, is in a state of considerable excitement on the subject of Dr. Duff's retention of a young Hindu, in opposition to the will of the boy's father and Sir Mordaunt Wells's decision that the boy must be given up to his parent's guardianship. The Friend of India is vehemently condemnatory of the judge. This organ of the missionaries stated that Sir Mordaunt Wells's judicial speech on the occasion had been toned down by the reporters. This was positively contradicted. "We assert," said the Friend of India, "that if the public had listened to that decision, those who left the court with feelings higher than such as are experienced after watching a mountebank would have felt mingled sadness and indignation that a question of so important a character had been dealt with in such a manner and by such a judge." This is a pretty case, indeed, of "contempt of court." The native press express great delight at the decision of the High Court of Calcutta. The Bengalee says:—"The Hindu nation is indebted to the earnest, sound-hearted Sir Mordaunt Wells for the legal sanction to a doctrine that has had already a universal moral sanction."

The Government of India is said to have received authentic intelligence of the death of Dost Mahommed.

The Lieut.-governor of Bengal left Burrisaul on the morning of the 28th of June, and arrived at Doudkandy early on the 30th, continuing his route to Tipperah in the evening of the same day. At Burrisaul his honour inspected the school and other public buildings, and was everywhere received with unusual demonstrations of respect and attachment. On preparing to land he was gratified to find that a jetty had been run out into the stream for the convenience of himself and his party, and on entering the place they had to pass under a triumphal arch bearing the word "Welcome."

The directors of the Bank of Bengal have declared a dividend at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, for the half-year ending 30th June.

The Bank of Bombay has declared a dividend for the half-year at 16 per cent. per annum.

We learn from the Bengal Hurkaru that the Burney case is going on but slowly. A commission for the examination of the Commander-in-Chief reached Simla on June 20. Colonel Burney is said to be determined to spare no trouble or expense in the vindication of his character.

Sir C. Wood invites the several Governments in India "to lose no time" in bringing into operation the new scale of postage arranged with the French Government (vide Allen's Indian Mail, August 4, page 675). As respects India, the alteration consists of the abolition of the recent rate of French postage (3d. per quarter-ounce), and the substitution of a rate of 4d. per half-ounce.

A long list of appointments in the Engineers, connected with the Public Works Department, Madras, appears in our current Madras Official Gazette.

A public meeting has been held at Lahore to take into consideration Sir Herbert Edwardes's proposition of presenting to the Prince and Princess of Wales a wedding gift, consisting of an inlaid steel shield filled with figures in high relief. It was agreed that subscriptions for the purpose should be raised as soon as possible.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal was at Dacca on the 4th of July.

The Madras Times of July 14 states that there is a report that a deficiency to the amount of twelve thousand rupees has been discovered in the cash chest of the Civil Treasury at Cannanore, of which the Deputy Paymaster of Malabar and Canara is in charge. The cashkeeper and shroff have been arrested, and the matter is at present undergoing judicial investigation.

THE BOMBAY MAIL.

MALTA, Aug. 14.

The Valetta leaves with the Bombay mail at 7 p.m. to-day for Marseilles, where she may be expected on the 17th inst.

The Ceylon, with the heavy portion of the mail, will sail at midnight. She may be looked for at Southampton about the 23rd inst.

The Malta brought the mail to Suez, arriving there at noon on the 10th inst.

DEATH OF LORD CLYDE.

Field-Marshal Lord Clyde, G.C.B., K.S.I., died at the residence of General Eyre, at Chatham, yesterday (Friday) afternoon, at the age of 71. His disease, we believe, was atrophy. We present our readers with a few particulars of the career of this eminent Indian officer.

On the 20th of October, 1792, was born in Glasgow, Colin Campbell, the son of Colonel John Campbell, who served with the late Duke of Kent on the staff for a very long period. When quartered in Glasgow, Colonel Campbell made what is called a Scotch marriage, with a good looking young woman, much his inferior in station, and by her had a daughter and a son,—the latter was Lord Clyde. The mother died while the children were very young, and the Colonel was sent abroad with the Duke. On his departure the children were left with the mother or with her relatives. The mother's name is believed to have been M'Liver, and the children may have borne that name until Colonel Campbell returned from foreign service, when he took charge of them. They certainly were then called by the name of Campbell. Through the Duke's interest Colonel Campbell obtained a commission for his son, who embarked for the Peninsula, and two days after landing was at the battle of Vittoria. In one of the engagements under Sir Thomas Graham (the late Lord Lynedoch), the young officer distinguished himself so highly, that Sir Thomas sent for him, and said that if he could be of service to him at any time he was not to hesitate in seeking his good offices. When Sir Thomas commanded the army before St. Sebastian an opportunity presented itself, and Lieut. Campbell claimed the fulfilment of the promise; and when asked how he could be served, replied, "By giving me the command of the forlorn hope." This he obtained, and gained the breach, but was forced back wounded, in consequence of the support not coming up quick enough.

Lord Clyde proceeded with the 9th Regt. to the Peninsula in 1808, and was present at the battle of Vimiera, in the advance and retreat of the army under Sir John Moore, and at the battle of Corunna. He served in the expedition to Walcheren, in 1809. Returning in 1810 to Spain, he was present at the battle of Barossa, and at the defence of Tarifa. In 1812 he was attached to the army of the Spanish General Balasteros, and was engaged in several affairs. He accompanied the expedition which relieved Tarragona. Rejoining the army under the Duke of Wellington in 1813, he was at the affair of Osmá, and present at the battle of Vittoria, and siege of St. Sebastian. In the latter, he received two severe wounds, when leading a column at the first assault. He was again severely wounded at the passage of the Bidasoa. In 1814-15 he served in America as Captain of the 60th Rifles. We next find him on active service in the West Indies. He was Brigade-major of the troops engaged in quelling the insurrection in Demarara in 1823; promoted to the rank of Colonel, he commanded the 98th Regiment in the expedition to China in 1842, including the capture of Chin-kiangfoo, and subsequent operations near Nankin.

In 1851-2, when Brigadier-general, commanding the Peshawur districts, he was constantly engaged in operations against the Hill Tribes, surrounding the valley, including the forcing of the Kohat Pass under Sir Charles Napier, and numerous other actions. He was appointed to the command of the 3rd division of the army of the Punjab, and at Ramnuggur, Chillianwallah, and Goojerat, earned the name of the ablest of Indian generals. Returning home, he commanded the Highland Brigade, and subsequently Division, throughout the Crimean campaign of 1854-5, including the battles of the Alma and Balaklava, and the siege and fall of Sebastopol.

When we were startled by the Indian mutiny in 1857, it was not a favourite in high places or a dilettante soldier who was selected to save our tottering empire. There was a sigh of satisfaction and content throughout the country when we were told that Sir Colin Campbell had at a moment's notice, and with alacrity best described, perhaps, as Napierian, started off to take command of the forces engaged in putting down that which history will call the Great Mutiny. And history will tell how it was put down. From the time that Sir Colin Campbell took the field and set his columns in motion, rebellion, the offspring of mutiny, withered and died. We can only in a limited space describe his work.

Sir Colin Campbell left Cawnpore on the 9th of November, 1857, and joined the troops under command of Brigadier-general Hope Grant the same day at Camp Buntara, about six miles from Alumbagh. He waited till the 12th to commence his advance. On that day he marched on Alumbagh with a force of 700 cavalry and 2,700 infantry, and encamped in the place the same evening. On the 14th he received a further reinforcement of 600 or 700 men. The Delkoosha and Martiniere were then both occupied. The attack on the Secunderbagh was next commenced, and the place was taken by storm in the most brilliant manner. There never was a bolder feat of arms (writes Sir Colin in his despatches), and the loss inflicted on the enemy, after the entrance of Secunderbagh was effected, was immense; more than 2,000 of the enemy were afterwards carried out. The mosque of the Shah Najeeb, another stronghold of the enemy, was next stormed. It was defended with great resolution against a heavy cannonade of three hours. It was then stormed in the boldest manner by the 93rd Highlanders, under Brigadier Hope. The withering fire of the Highlanders effectually covered the naval brigade from great loss; but it was an action unexampled in war. On the next day another stronghold—the barracks—was stormed and carried. The troops then passed forward with great vigour, and lined the wall separating the mess-house from the Mote Lall, which consisted of a wide enclosure and many buildings. The enemy here made a last stand, which was overcome after an hour, openings having been broken in the wall, through the troops poured with a body of sappers, and accomplished the desideratum of opening a communication with the residency. "I had (writes Sir Colin), the inexpressible satisfaction shortly afterwards of greeting Sir James Outram and Sir H. Havelock, who came out to meet me before the action was at an end." The relief of the beleaguered garrison had been effected.

After withdrawing the heroic garrison of Lucknow from the scene of their undying glory, Sir Colin Campbell reached Cawnpore, just in time to redeem the disasters caused by General Windham's overweening carelessness. Having provided for the safety of the gallant little band he had rescued from destruction by such a tremendous sacrifice of life, the Commander-in-chief proceeded to chastise the insolent fury of the Gwalior Contingent, and drove the discomfited rebels, with terrible slaughter, as far as Calpee. Before the termination of the year he effected a junction with the victorious column under Colonel Seaton; and on the 3rd January, 1858, marched into the town of Furruckabad, after having signally defeated the forces of the usurping Nawab. It was thought that Sir Colin would then have pushed on to Bareilly, and cleared the Province of Rohilkund, but the Governor-General decided, for political reasons, that Lucknow should first be reduced to submission. Sir Colin, therefore, halted at Futteghur, and on the 4th February had returned to Cawnpore. Four days afterwards he was at Allahabad, in close conference with Lord Canning, but soon hurried back to superintend the great strategic movements which were to result in the final reduction of the capital of Oude. The advanced post, indeed, of Alumbagh, almost within sight of that great city, had never been abandoned. A small, but efficient, force, under Sir James Outram, held their ground unsupported, until the flower of the British army in India could again be concentrated on that point. On March 1st the Commander-in-Chief arrived at Alumbagh, and operations at once commenced. So determined, however, was the resistance offered by the enemy, that it was only on the 19th that Lucknow again became a British possession. From that time it has been maintained without opposition.

After a long and tedious interval of inaction, it became evident that a hot weather campaign must be undertaken for the recovery of Rohilkund. Accordingly, in the latter part of the month of April, Brigadier Walpole commenced operations by a serious repulse before the walls of an insignificant fortress, which cost the life of that brilliant officer, Colonel Adrian Hope. This disaster, however, was quickly repaired by a series of successes, and on the 6th of May the cantonments at Bareilly were once more occupied by British troops. The pacification of Rohilkund was then gradually effected, and on the 25th of May the Commander-in-Chief had returned to Futteghur on the way to Cawnpore and Allahabad, arriving at the latter station on the 9th of June. Here he remained until the 2nd of November, on which day he again entered the province of Oude, but now as Lord Clyde of Clydesdale. He was created a peer August 16, 1858. At last he stood on the banks of the Raptée, and, looking over the wide expanse of Hindostan, could feel that he had made safe the supremacy of the Queen he served.

When his labours in the field were over he returned home to receive the acknowledgments of the whole country, the thanks of Parliament, the approbation of his Sovereign, and the honours he so valued as a soldier. On the 23rd June, 1858, a pension of £1,000 a year was conferred on Sir Colin Campbell by the East India Company, and the Government granted him another pension of £2,000. Lord Clyde retired from the command of the Indian army at the close of the year 1859, and was succeeded by General Sir Hugh Rose. Lord Clyde was made a Field-marshal in 1862.

After fifty-five years' service, Lord Clyde had received the war medal with five clasps, the Chinese medal, the Punjab medal with two clasps, the Crimean medal with three clasps, the Turkish medal, and the Indian medal with two clasps. We may recount, as his most recent honours, that he is a G.C.B., Knight of the Star of India, Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour, Grand Cross of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus, and First Class of the Mejidie. He was raised to the peerage for his services in reducing the Indian revolt.

Lord Clyde was Colonel of the Coldstream Regiment of Foot Guards at the time of his death. The dates of promotion of this distinguished officer are given in the Army List as follows, viz.:—Ensign, May 26, 1808; lieutenant, June 28, 1809; captain, November 9, 1813; major, November 26, 1825; lieutenant-colonel, October 26, 1832; colonel, December 23, 1842; major-general, June 20, 1854; lieutenant-general, June 4, 1856; general, May 14, 1858; field-marshal, November 9, 1862; colonel of the Coldstream Guards, June 20, 1860.

STAFF CORPS.

The Governor-General in Council having referred home to the Secretary of State for India, the absurd and unfair rule according to which a staff officer appointed to a full vacancy draws only half the staff salary for the first six months of his tenure of office, and having strongly recommended that it should be rescinded, and the full pay should be given for the full work, Sir Charles Wood has replied that the rule must stand, but of course giving no rational grounds for upholding an irrational order. Very often the first six months of an officer's holding a staff appointment are those in which, from the newness of the work, he has the greatest trouble, and exerts himself most; and why he should not in those months be as well paid as in all those after ensuing we cannot understand.

When, after the Indian Staff Corps had existed for a sufficient time to enable qualified observers to judge of their success and stability, people began to think that they showed strong symptoms of turning out something very like a failure, the home authorities, both at the India House and at the Horse Guards, at first pool-pooed the very idea. They then flatly denied, in and out of Parliament, that there was any foundation whatever for such an opinion; circumstances subsequently made them begin to fear that it might turn out well founded; further circumstances compelled them to fear that it would resolve itself into solid fact; and now, as we learn from letters by the last mail, Sir Charles Wood and the Duke of Cambridge, the very sires of these bantlings, the Staff Corps, fully admit that they are a mistake, and will not do. The home authorities are at their wits' end to know what to do in the matter of these Staff Corps, which, as we have said for a considerable time past, are a failure—simply a collection of company's officers; and, as such, destined to die of decay as those officers drop away in the progress of time and the natural course of things. Amongst other remedies in this difficulty, the return of the Staff Corps officers to the regimental lists, turning the italics of the cadres into plain type, and a very near approach to the old state of things, were spoken of in England; but amongst other impediments, it was found that the promotions which had been made in the Staff Corps could not be cancelled, and were, of course, incompatible with the return of the officers belonging to those corps into their former regiments. What will be the next idea of the home wiseacres regarding the incipient, but eventually certain, decay of these Indian Staff Corps it would be difficult to imagine; but we are glad that the authors of those institutions now plainly see, and fully admit, that there is no hope for them, that officers of the British line will never join them in sustaining numbers, and that some other medium than the Staff Corps must be found to procure successors to Malcolm, Mackeson, Outram, Nicholson, and a host of other worthy children of the bygone Company.

A General Order has recently been issued, and is published at length elsewhere, in which the Viceroy reminds military officers of an old order forbidding all military officers from having any connection with banks or other companies save as simple shareholders, excepting, of course, such as are or may be ex officio directors of the Presidency Banks. Officers of the Invalid establishment are not included in this rule. — Englishman, July 8.

THE HINDU-CHRISTIAN CASE IN THE HIGH COURT.

We alluded two mails since to a case of great interest to a large number of our home readers, and of the highest importance to both natives and Europeans in this country. The case of Hemnauth Bose, claimed by his father from the custody of the missionaries, under writ of habeas corpus, has now been thoroughly sifted, and both sides of the controversy raised thereon have been fully argued, and we only regret that it did not occur a little earlier, in order that Exeter Hall might have had something more practical to discuss than such generalities as we saw reported respecting missionary proceedings in India during the great May meetings. We give in another place the principal articles which have appeared on the subject since the first disgraceful attack upon the judge before whom the case was tried in the columns of the Friend of India, which appeared in our last overland paper. The Friend of the Missionaries having committed himself to gross misrepresentations both of fact and argument, broadly asserts that the law reporters, the judge, and the press conspired to mis-report the proceedings; in short, that in Serampore Scriptural phrase "all men are liars" except the Friend and his friends. The Indian Reformer is a native reflex of the Friend, and was established, we believe, by the native Christian preacher and missionary Lal Behari Dey, who was associated with Dr. Duff in the defence of this case. These two journals, then, we may safely assume to state the full strength of their case in the best manner. Every impartial reader must conclude that reason, courtesy, and right are all on the Hindoo side of the controversy; and we must say that the native journals deserve the highest credit for the moderation and candour with which they have set their opponents an example, which, for the sake of the Christianity they profess, they will do well to imitate in any future case. There is no doubt that, though with the best intentions, Dr. Duff and his staff strained the law and passed the limits of mere teaching to keep their hold upon a youth of uncultured intellect and puerile nature, and that his father was perfectly justified in reclaiming, and the judge in delivering, the boy to his natural guardians. The lad has been represented as conversant with the principles of Christianity, of firm resolve, and under moral durance in his father's house. None of these things were so. We have taken means to assure ourselves that his knowledge of the Scriptures is of the most limited and superficial character. We have a hill minah which we could cram with as much and pretty nearly as deep knowledge of the New Testament in three months. As to his resolve, one of his companions brought him down stairs to leave the Mission-house with him two days before the writ was issued, when he was induced to remain by one of the mission; and we have had before us a letter written by himself, and without any solicitation the day after his return home, announcing to his fellow-students his satisfaction at the result, and asking them to come and see him. The only durese to which he has been subjected, of which any evidence appears, is the moral pressure of the missionaries. It is true there have been, ere now, Christian martyrs of fifteen, but they were of a different race and very different stuff from Hemnauth Bose, and the growth of a very different teaching. The only argument urged with any show of reason for the mission is that they could not turn him out of the premises, and so shut him off from the exercise of liberty of conscience. And this argument is most unsound. If the boy were strong enough to forsake father, mother, home, and caste, on the foundation of his Christian faith, surely the missionaries should have had faith enough also to teach him that for a few months his Christian principle must sustain him through the trial of the few months that intervene before the time when he might assert his right to independent action. The whole case is one which shows that the great work of Christianising India is, so far as these missionaries are concerned, attempted by minds too narrow and by means too petty to do justice to the grand principles which they profess to teach, but have yet, in a great measure, to learn. — Calcutta Englishman, July 8.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—Another accident occurred on the East Indian Railway line on Saturday last. A ballast engine was taking in water at Mogul Serai about the time that the six A.M. down passenger train from Benares was due. From some hitherto unexplained cause the engine suddenly started off without either driver or fireman being at his post, and rushed straight on to meet the Benares train. The driver of that train, seeing an engine approaching at speed from the opposite direction, did all in his power to warn the other to stop. Failing in this, he consulted his own safety by jumping off his engine, an example that was followed by his fireman. The ballast engine then ran into the passenger train, doing severe damage both to its engine and carriages, but without further injury to the passengers than a few bruises. A strict investigation into all the circumstances of the case is being instituted by the railway authorities, and we doubt not that due punishment will be inflicted on those who were answerable for allowing an engine under steam to stand in such a position as to endanger the safety of the line. We are bound to add, in conclusion, that the railway managers on this line have made no mystery of the affair; but, in the most frank and liberal manner, have offered every facility for the prosecution of inquiries. — Englishman, July 6.

A PUBLIC RECANTATION.—The Punjab Government is in the same disagreeable predicament with ourselves, and has been obliged to withdraw a censure too hastily conveyed. The Lieut.-Governor has publicly retracted the harsh judgment he previously passed, without sufficient grounds, on Messrs. Cooper and Macnaghten, for supposed irregularities in their proceedings in the case of the notorious Mr. Fenwick. All blame is now transferred from the shoulders of those gentlemen, and laid upon Mr. P. S. Melville, who comes out of the affray with his colours trailing through the mud. The position is, certainly, a humiliating one for any Government, but it is well that Sir Robert Montgomery has had the moral courage to avow an error, and make the only reparation in his power to two meritorious servants of the Government unjustly condemned. We give the ipsissima verba of the official retraction. "The Hon. the Lieut.-Governor concurs entirely in the view taken by Judicial Commissioner. His Honour considers that the proceedings of the authorities at Delhi were legal, and accordingly not deserving of the censure conveyed in the letter of the secretary to this Government, No. 69, dated 24th January, 1863, to the address of the Judicial Commissioner. The censure passed on Mr. Cooper and Mr. Macnaghten is therefore withdrawn. His Honour considers, also, that there are no grounds for the criminal prosecution which Mr. Fenwick has entered in the Delhi court against Messrs. Cooper and Macnaghten, and accordingly disallows any action being taken thereon by the court. The Lieut.-Governor expresses his dissatisfaction with Mr. P. S. Melville for having proposed a censure on erroneous grounds."

COTTON.—The cultivators of Sea Island cotton may be glad to learn the existence of a very simple antidote to the ravages of the insect that has, in many places, proved so destructive to the cotton-pods. All that they have to do is to sow a thin row of any kind of hemp—though the sun hemp is thought the best for the purpose—along the borders of the field. A few plants interspersed here and there with the cotton shrubs will be equally serviceable, and the sale of the seed will amply pay for the ground they occupy, independently of their salutary agency in protecting the crop from obnoxious insects. What the peculiar virtues of the sun may be that effect this desirable result is not stated, but our informant assures us that actual experience has established the efficacy of the means he suggests, to save the cotton-pods of the Sea Island variety from destruction.

ECCLESIASTICAL ESTABLISHMENTS.—A rumour prevails touching the wholesale reduction of the ecclesiastical establishments of India, so soon as this can be brought about; the Secretary of State considering that chaplains should hereafter be entertained only for the service of European regiments, both official and non-official, must bear the charge of all others required to officiate on their behalf. A reduction of the kind is most likely contemplated, although not, perhaps, to quite the extent spoken of, but it can only be gradually carried out, as existing chaplains die off or retire. If the step has been finally resolved on, there will be of course no more ecclesiastical appointments.—Madras Athenaeum, July 14.

ANGLO-INDIAN SCANDALS.—A few months ago we had the unpleasant task imposed upon us of chronicling the accession of one of those visitations of misconduct and misfortunes amongst military officers which fortunately occur only at intervals, leaving between them long and pleasing lulls of uneventful monotony. We have now, sooner than we could have expected, got into another drift of scandals and immoralities, in all of which the general female element of mischief is mixed up. The ground-swell of the first Dinapore equal has not subsided, but it is still rolling in the law courts here; and a few days ago we had to refer to another gale at that station which, as we stated, will most probably end in two officers being brought to court-martial. The recollection of the Meerut tragedy of last month is but just beginning to subside, when we hear of an escapade at Fyzabad, in Oude, in which an officer of the regiment stationed there, and the wife of an assistant-surgeon were primarily concerned, and the assistant-surgeon himself secondarily, by having attempted to take the life of the Captain under circumstances which fully justified him in doing so, but failed by the gun which he presented and snapped at him not going off; the whole affair ending in an elopement. We hope that this is the last of the present crop of stirring incidents to all of which the old question "who is she?" is most apropos.—Englishman, July 8.

CANNING TOWN, ON THE MUTLAH.—As the town rises so will the jungle of the Soonderbunds disappear, to be replaced by cotton and rice, and cane fields, on an expanse of soil so veined and arteried by creeks and rivers and rivulets that it will resemble the Netherlands in all but its superior fertility and tropical climate. It is but an hour from Calcutta by rail, and will, doubtless, in a few years be Calcutta's port: so putting an end to the wrecks in the Hooghly, to the expensive pilot service, to Calcutta docking schemes, and mayhap, after a time, to Calcutta itself; for as cultivation widens around Canning Town, the place, from its greater contiguity to the sea, will be far healthier and pleasanter for Europeans than the city founded by Job Charnock on the strip of marshy land between the corpse-bearing Hooghly and the pestiferous salt water lake. The chief promoter of this great Mutlah scheme is Mr. F. Schiller, of the firm of Borrodaile and company, who is now about to revisit Europe, possibly to cause to be flooded in on the Soonderbunds a gush of that English capital which is ever on the look-out for localities where it may employ and expand itself. Nigh seven years ago Mr. Schiller first took up the notion that a great town and port might be created at Mutlah. Despite much cold water thrown upon his scheme he has steadily pursued it since; and may now exult that he was wiser than those wise people who prophesied that, for at least a century nothing could come of the project. He got up the Mutlah Railway Company, boldly making a line to a town which had yet to be built! That line is now opened, and must pay from the produce and passengers it brings to Calcutta from the district it runs through. There are now two ships at the new port, and others are expected. Every thing, in fact, connected with the Mutlah project looks most promising. The town lands are altogether about some twenty thousand beegahs. The Government of Bengal has made them over to the Mutlah Municipal Commission, of which Mr. Schiller is the president. The commissioners propose to raise a loan of £400,000 in England for municipal expenditure—on roads, town buildings, wharves, &c.

TALOOKDARS AND THE PRESS.—The Talookdars of Oudh and some others have bought up the Oudh Gazette, which will henceforth be called the "Oudh Gazette and Talookdars' Journal," under a new editor.

THE SHERIFF OF CALCUTTA.—Mr. Stuart Gladstone, Sheriff of Calcutta, subscribed ten rupees for the preliminary expenses of a public meeting in the city, designed to agitate the question of bad khansamahs and dear food. At the same time he refused to comply with the request of three hundred memorialists, to call the meeting officially. Except for his inconsistency, we cannot join in the outcry against the Sheriff. The question was started prematurely, for on Wednesday next the new Municipal Act will check an undeniable evil. The agitation was promoted foolishly, for the authorities have no power to interfere with the law of supply and demand in the manner proposed. But the memorialists have done some good in eliciting from the Chief Justice the opinion that sheriffs in India are not bound by law to call public meetings on any requisition. To ask them to do so is merely a matter of courtesy to their office, but neither their sanction nor presence is requisite to make a meeting valid. The Sheriff is annually appointed by the high court to execute certain of its processes, which he does through a professional deputy—and nothing more. At the same time, even in this respect his functions are valuable, as securing the liberty of the subject to some extent.—Friend of India.

PUNJAB EXHIBITION.—Though Bengal was first in the field, the Punjab promises to surpass it in the Exhibition of Arts, Produce and Manufactures to be held at Lahore in November. The presence of the Viceroy alone will give the latter eclat, and the articles exhibited promise to be most varied, as the produce of a people who surpass the Bengalees in manufactures, and of districts which enjoy every kind of climate. The articles will be arranged in four divisions closely following those of the International Exhibition—Raw Materials, Manufactures, Machinery and Fine Arts. The collection of woollen fabrics ought to be unequalled. Under the head Machinery there will be, besides the ordinary agricultural and trade implements, musical instruments and models of boats, carriages and railway plant. Under fine arts there will be photographs of tribes, localities and buildings of architectural or historical interest; specimens of the written characters in use, paintings on ivory such as Delhi is famous for; and models, paintings and engravings of objects of interest in the Punjab. Contributions from other provinces, if sent free of expense, will be gladly received. We trust the tea-planters of Kangra will not be unrepresented. Indeed, both Exhibitions at Lahore and Belvedere might take hints from each other. As that at Lahore will be held first, it would be wise for Belvedere to send a commissioner to report on it. While Lahore charges no fee for admission, Belvedere hopes to pay its expenses by the tickets, and so runs some risk of failure. How is it that the Lahore Exhibition is to have no display of animals? It ought to be made more of an Agricultural Exhibition, like that of Bengal.—Friend of India.

DEATH OF A VETERAN.—The Delhi Gazette records the death of a veteran. Sergeant Patrick Fleming was bazaar sergeant of Delhi when the rebellion broke out, in which he lost eight relatives. He escaped to Umballa with his wife and his grandson, the child of Conductor Scully, whose deed at the Cashmere Gate will never be forgotten. Though 67 years old, he returned to fight in the ranks of the 2nd Europeans before the walls of Delhi. There he remained till wounded. The wound in 1859 caused total blindness, and in 1863 he died, after "enjoying" a pension of Rs. 80 a month. It does seem hard that the home authorities refused to increase it. His old widow, who with Scully's child was also at the siege, is left to starve.—Friend of India.

STAFF OFFICERS.—Sir Charles Wood approves of the decision of the Governor-General, that so long as there are officers of the Bengal army available for employment, he will not sanction the appointment of Madras or Bombay officers to corps on the regular Bengal establishment. Officers of other presidencies have always been freely employed in the Punjab and Hyderabad and other irregular forces under the orders of the Government of India, and are of course still eligible for such situations. In special cases, however, staff officers of one presidency may be employed in another.—Friend of India.

ZUHOOR-OOI-HOOSAIN.—Several months ago we entered at length into the charges against Zuhoor-ool-Hoosein, who, when a Vakeel of the Oudh Rajah, Lones Singh of Mithowlee, arrested the late Captain Orr and his party in November, 1857, and took them to Lucknow to be murdered, although Captain Orr had been the patron and friend of the miscreant. Captain Orr's party consisted of himself, Sir Mountstuart Jackson, Miss Jackson, Mrs. Orr and child, Lieutenant Barnes, and Serjeant-major Morton. The case has long been lost sight of, but we see from the Oudh Gazette that the murderer is at last to be tried by Colonel Barrow, C.B., Commissioner of Lucknow. He is defended by a Mr. J. J. Sandys. Mrs. Orr, the widow of Captain P. Orr, who with her child was so providentially rescued, and is now Mrs. W. G. Rose, has been summoned from Calcutta as a witness for the prosecution. For a lady to recal such a past as she went through will be a hard trial. Three letters written by Captain P. Orr to his brothers just before his death, declaring that he believed the prisoner to be a traitor, have been received as evidence in the case. The prisoner is accused under the law previous to the Penal Code, of being accessory before the fact to the murder of Captain Orr and party, of committing murder and of being a leader of rebellion.

ENSIGN DWYER.—of the unattached list, and barrackmaster of the Barrackpore and Dum-Dum cantonments, is under arrest at the former station, and about to be brought to trial by court-martial, on charges connected with public accounts and money stated to have been overdrawn, or wrongly drawn, or mis-applied.

FORT OF MOOLTAN.—A correspondent of the Delhi Journal asserts that the Viceroy has ordered the fort of Mooltan to be demolished, because, owing to its great size, it cannot be advantageously held by British troops. It would require at least three thousand men to garrison it properly. A small fortification capable of being defended by one hundred and fifty or two hundred men is to be at once constructed on a convenient site near the Cantonment, which in case of any disturbances would shelter the women and children, and leave the remainder of the garrison free for field operations. The fort has long been in a bad state. Once the finest specimen of native engineering in India, it was injured by heavy floods soon after it had been battered by General Whish's army.

MR. M. GUBBINS.—Are the experiences of Fifty-Seven in the Lucknow Residency partly the cause of the sad end of Mr. M. Gubbins, Sudder Judge of Agra, who lately committed suicide by hanging in his brother's house at Leamington? Mr. Gubbins should not have returned to India last year. An attempt of this kind which he made in Calcutta on his return led to his immediate departure for England. Mr. Gubbins did good service in the mutinies, and became widely known by his book and the controversies to which it gave rise.—Friend of India.

PHOTOGRAPHS IN INDIA.—The Allahabad Gazette states that a photographer is to be attached to the Thomason College at Roorkee, chiefly for the purpose of instructing the natives in the art, to enable them to show the progress of public works.

THE LATE GALE.—The last voyage of the S. S. Bengal, though very brief, was anything but a pleasant one. About three hours after discharging her pilot on the night of the 24th June, her screw shaft broke in two, and she was accordingly obliged to let go her anchor. An attempt was then made to splice the broken shaft, but at the first revolution of the screw the splicing gave way. In the meantime the wind began to rise rapidly, and by the morning it blew a heavy gale from the south-west, which continued for three consecutive days. Every precaution which long experience and skilful seamanship could suggest, was taken to insure the safety of the ship in such critical circumstances. Fortunately the holding ground was good, and the cable withstood the immense strain without yielding, so that with the exception of the discomfort usually endured by landsmen in a stormy sea, the passengers had not much to complain of. At the very height of the gale a seaman fell overboard from the top-gallant yard, but no sooner was the alarm given than an African seacundy, or "seedyboy"—as these men are usually called—caught hold of a life-buoy, and the end of a rope, and sprang into the raging sea. For one moment he got near enough to the drowning man to push the life-buoy within his reach, but the line snapped by the sudden jerk caused by the convulsive clutch of the poor wretch, and in the next instant both man and buoy disappeared in the surge. The brave African himself was saved with great difficulty, being hauled up by the rope to which he had clung throughout his dreadful buffeting by the waves. It is needless to add that a subscription was at once got up to reward his heroic, if unsuccessful, effort to save a fellow creature's life at the imminent risk of his own.—Bengal Hurkaru.

THE BRITISH EAST INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY have been no less unfortunate than their magnificent rival. The S. S. Sydney, lately purchased from Government, sailed from Calcutta on Wednesday the 24th June, having on board some 540 men, women, and children, belonging to the regiment of Sikh Pioneers, bound for Colombo. But no sooner did she fairly get out to sea than her total unfitness to be employed on such service was proved beyond a doubt. Between decks the water was frequently knee deep, and not a berth in the whole ship that might not have served as a bath. The misery of the poor soldiers, and their still more helpless wives and little ones, was truly pitiable, but they bore up manfully through their sickness, and worked at the pumps night and day. The greatest fear entertained was lest the fires should be put out, the danger of which was more than once very imminent; however, by constant exertions and by throwing a portion of her cargo overboard, she was kept afloat, and late on Saturday evening passed Saugor on her return to Calcutta. Another steamer, the Australian, likewise purchased by this company from the Government, was compelled in a similar manner to throw a portion of her cargo overboard on the run to Akyab. In fact, never was any company worse managed than this, which has acquired for itself the facetious designation of the "The Unlimited Screw." Through a false notion of economy the B. E. I. S. Navigation Company's steamers are continually out in their dates, and constitute anything but a sure channel of communication between Calcutta and the Eastern Provinces. The vessels lately purchased by them from the Indian Government require to be thoroughly overhauled, and then they will be nothing more than miserable makeshifts. A fine opportunity now presents itself for a liberal and really well-organized company to start a line of steamers to keep up a direct and punctual communication between the eastern and western shores of the Bay of Bengal—to which may be added a profitable coasting trade between Calcutta, Madras, Pondicherry, Ceylon, and Bombay.—Bengal Hurkaru.

MR. WHIFFIN.—We believe that Mr. Whiffin, who with Mr. Foster, of the Accountant General's Department of the War Office, is to supervise all Indian establishments, is to begin with the one which frightened even Colonel Balfour, C.B.—the Public Works Department.

A MUTINEER.—A general court-martial, held on 28th April at Lucknow, sentenced Sew Churn, subadar of the regiment of Loodianah, now the 15th Regiment of Native Infantry, to transportation for life for having, at Jaunpore, on or about the 6th June, 1857, joined in a mutiny of the detachment to which he belonged, and of which he was the senior native officer present; and having, on or about the same day, deserted from the service of the East India Company. This is an instance of punishment very slowly overtaking the evil-doer.

CACHAR TEA.—A correspondent of the Hurkaru describes the rejoicings of the Cachar Tea planters at Mr. Gladstone's reduction of the tea duty. On the 1st June 150 of them had a banquet at Bhaghunteepore, the only drawback to which was the want of ice. Transplanting was commenced about a month ago, but the weather has been unfavourable. Fevers are prevalent, not only in all the tea gardens, but throughout every village in the district. The dryness has retarded seriously the manufacture of tea.

BOMBAY V. BENGAL.—Again the residents of Bombay shame the wealthy men of Bengal. The Bombay Review says that the rich Jew, David Sassoon, has presented Rs. 20,000 to the Victoria Gardens for an illuminated clock tower to be placed at the Parell-road entrance of the Gardens opposite the Victoria Museum.

SIR J. P. GRANT.—The Bengalees have failed to raise sufficient funds for a statue of Sir J. P. Grant, but are content with a full-length portrait. What of Lord Canning's statue?

SIR B. FRERE.—The people of Kurrachee have been for some years about to erect a Hall and Museum in honour of Sir B. Frere who gained his first reputation as Commissioner of Sind. The Deccan Herald says the design of Captain Wilkins for the building has been selected. There were twelve competitors, of whom two were in England.

MADRAS.

MADHO RAO.

HYDERABAD, June 22.—I have always fancied that Madho Rao, who was captured at Barsee, tried at Sholapoor, and sentenced to transportation for life, was identical with the Brahmin who, under many aliases, was last year endeavouring to excite a rebellion here. And I have some idea that I had written to you to this effect:—"I now find, from one Kishen Rao being brought prisoner here with seven accomplices, that this is, and not Madho Rao, the individual who had made Hyderabad the stage of his operations for getting up a rebellion. He, with his accomplices, is now under trial. The apathy of the public about this matter, although the trial is likely to implicate some of the inhabitants of this capital, is rather surprising; the affairs of the house of Shumsool-Oomrah engage their attention more. I can quite understand this. Kishen Rao's fate is sealed and leaves him impotent for good or evil, whilst those of the house of the great nobleman have many contingent dependencies, which in their progress and result cannot be without interest to that part of the community which seems alone to be the reflecting portion. I wish a narrative of Kishen Rao's proceedings, his travels through the country, the principal towns and cities which he attempted to raise, the circumstances which induced him to prefer those places, and the measures which he pursued to procure the coalition of parties, and on what section of society he depended for his success, could be obtained from him. We had heard that he had resided at many places, and had been profuse in his gifts to his accessories. As this man, by all accounts, had been very confidential with Gujrajsing, the informer, his general revelations in respect to the communications made to him by Kishen Rao may lead, if properly managed, to useful discoveries. Kishen Rao must be an authentic source of information regarding the opinions which prevail in the principal localities and among the sects of India. I believe them to be well known to the Government, but we require confirmation from such sources to acquire full credit for them with our own public. If any revelation be made, I hope it may not be considered necessary to make a sealed packet of it. I have a notion, not very distinct, that when Moulvie Saleem, eighteen or twenty years ago, was preaching here a holy war (Jehad) against the Seikhs, in which he had engaged the participation of Moobarzood Dowla, own brother to the then reigning Sovereign, Nasirood Dowla, his emissaries, I mean Moulvie Saleem's, probably accredited by Moobarzood Dowla, had been sent to the towns principally inhabited by Mahomedans. Kishen Rao's actions have taken place most probably in Mahratta and Hindoo towns. As yet we have not heard that any Mussulman had been brought to take part with him; indeed, measures were not sufficiently ripe to have made it safe for any man to engage them, and though nothing has appeared, proposals may yet have been made and the confidences respected, and events waited for. There could be no difficulty in this; the time for reserve is past, and any one man may give his confidence indiscriminately almost to any other man in a matter of high treason without any fear of betrayal. Out of the eight conspirators now under trial it will be hard if some of them do not "peach" and "make a clean breast of it." I do not hear that Kishen Rao had used the precaution of making himself alone the depository of the engagements of others with him.

June 23.—I wrote to you some days ago that a Native officer of the subsidiary force was under trial, and that an order prohibiting Moulvies preaching in the mosques of the cantonments, and going into the sepoy's lines was published in connection with the above. I now hear that the Jemadar is dismissed. This part of my information is correct, but I have been told something in conjunction with it, of which the correctness is not equally well ascertained, that a Moulvie has been expelled the city. If so, something of a seditious nature must have appeared on the trial to make a reference to the Nizam's government for the punishment of the Moulvie necessary. There is a loose report that the Brahmin Kishen Rao is not satisfactorily identified. It would appear from what is said that the prosecutor did not bring a sufficiency of evidence to prove the identity of the accused, and that the dependence for proofs now rests upon his former associates, of whom such as have been produced, with two exceptions, deny all knowledge of him. The denial is allowed in the opinions of the people to counterbalance the affirmation. I do not know the modes of procedure practised in the courts here, but whether that be efficient or not for its purpose there will be no mistake in the matter. I have entire reliance that the vigilance and care of the minister and his commissioners will in the end lead to a right result. They give due importance to this affair, and will neglect nothing within their means to come to a right judgment upon the subject. They cannot but see the necessity of guarding the State from the seditious practices of the numerous disaffected persons even now spread all over India. —Englishman.

PASSAGE MONEY EXEMPTED FROM INCOME-TAX. —A circumstance that will interest military officers has lately occurred in the Madras presidency. A Captain Dick, attached to the 3rd Regiment L.L., embarked from Madras for England in April last. The sum of Rs. 1,400 having been allowed by Government to defray the cost of passage, the Madras Bank, with whom the money had been lodged, thought proper to deduct the sum of Rs. 55 on account of Income-tax. Captain Elliott, on behalf of Captain Dick, addressed the Madras Government with a view to ascertain whether this particular Rs. 1,400, granted for the specific purpose of defraying the cost of passage to England, could be held to be a part of Captain Dick's regular income. That Government, in reply to this communication, have ruled, by an order dated June 13, "that by Section 129 of the Income tax Act, allowances received by public officers from the State for travelling expenses are exempted from Income-tax. In the absence of any ruling to the contrary, passage-money granted by Government to a public officer comes within the scope of this exemption. Passage-money granted by any of the service funds, on the contrary, has been expressly declared liable to Income-tax."

MEDICAL SERVICE AT MADRAS.—The medical service here are anxiously looking out for the appearance of the long delayed amalgamation scheme about which so much has been written. A report, emanating from very good authority, purports that the district surgeoncies of Madras are to be done away with shortly, as one feature of the new arrangement, but by what means this measure is to be accomplished we have not heard. That the step will eventually be taken, is generally admitted, but well informed parties here doubt whether it has yet been determined on.

TIGER SHOOTING.—HYDERABAD, June 20.—Mr. J. H. Robinson, a young East Indian of some attainments, who came from Madras a few years ago, and set himself up in business at Secunderabad, went in a state of convalescence to a village called Idulabad, for a change. The village is about eighteen miles from this, and while occupying the dawk bungalow there for a day or two, his attention was attracted by a loud lamentation set up by a woman in the neighbourhood. On inquiring the cause he was told that her husband had an hour or two before been taken away and destroyed by a tiger. Luckily, there happened to be a large elephant belonging to a Nawab available, the animal having been sent a day previous for forage. Mr. Robinson took advantage of this circumstance, and for a consideration induced the mahout or keeper to go out the next day in search of the brute. Mr. Robinson, mounted on a bare pad, with his servant behind him, each having a double-barrelled gun, proceeded in search of the "man eater." After traversing a mile or two of dense jungle with difficulty, they suddenly came to a little open piece of ground covered with copse, and there on a patch of brushwood lay the big beast, evidently gorged with the flesh of a large buffalo he had also killed, and the carcass of which was lying not far off. The elephant was now within twenty-five feet of the tiger, stood steadily and faced his foe without flinching. The tiger turned his head and shook his tail, the first symptom of trying a spring, when Mr. Robinson coolly lodged his first bullet between, and a little above, his eyes. He then made an effort to rise, but could hardly do so as he was evidently brained, as Captain Shakespear says in his "Wild Sports of India." The second bullet immediately followed and lodged itself under his right ear. This gave him the coup de grace, and he never stirred after that. He was shortly after taken to the village in triumph, dissected and stuffed in due course. He measured ten and a-half feet from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail, the tail being only three feet in length. He was upwards of three feet in height, and was considered by the village connoisseurs to be seven years old. Mr. Robinson deserves great credit for his cool courage on the occasion, considering that this is the first tiger he had ever seen in its wild state, and one he had not the remotest idea of encountering, when he set out in a weak state of health, to seek a renovation by a change of air. He was rewarded for his toil and trouble, and the great risk he underwent, by the blessings of the whole village, many of whom came with little offerings, in acknowledgment of the obligations they were under to him, for having rid them of the monster. Some of the villagers, however, took good care to secure the fat and all the claws, the latter being considered by them to possess a peculiar charm, while the former is used by them as an ointment in cases of rheumatism, a remedy in which they place implicit faith.

SIR W. DENISON.—For a month, with patient assiduity, Sir W. Denison has presided at the examination of nearly every school in Madras. The work seems to be most congenial to the Governor, and it is harmless, if not useful. Sir W. Denison's remarks are never either very original or brilliant. They are rather such as the squire would give expression to when distributing cakes to a village school. It is, perhaps, well for himself, if not for the twenty-two millions he is supposed to govern, that he can find time for this innocent work. It must be a relaxation, after demolishing the "Essays and Reviews," and Professor Huxley. —Friend of India.

THE NEW RUPEE.—A lengthy correspondence, according to the Madras Athenaeum, is still being carried on between the Madras Government and the French authorities at Pondicherry, respecting the value of the new rupee issued from the Mint. The Indian Government pay to the French an annual bonus of £40,000, in consideration of the latter abstaining from the manufacture of salt, just as an allowance is made to Chandernagore for opium. But the Governor of Pondicherry has refused to accept payment by means of the new rupee, except at a discount of one-sixth of their nominal value, stating that an analysis of them compels him to demand this large discount.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PARSEE LIBERALITY.—Again the Bombay University is benefited by the liberality of the Parsee community. The Bombay Review mentions that Limjee Manockjee and Cowasjee Manockjee, Esqrs., have offered to the Vice-Chancellor of the University the sum of Rs. 5,000, for the purpose of founding an annual gold medal to bear the name of their father, the late Manockjee Limjee, Esq., and to be awarded every year for the best essay by a university student on some subject of Indian history or antiquities, or on some question connected with the introduction of European science into this country. Is there no shame among the Bengalees? The University, through the energy of the local Government, has secured Malabar College Library.

FATHER PALMARVE, an adventurous priest, has made his appearance in an extraordinary manner at Muscat. He belongs to the Syrian Mission, and appears to have been commissioned by the Pope to visit the country of Aman from Damascus to Muscat, to discover if there were any vestiges of Christianity left, and to make converts as well. He disguised himself as an Arab, had numerous hair-breadth escapes, and was finally wrecked and cast ashore near Muscat. A narrative of his travels is anxiously looked for.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.—In the Bombay Presidency, during the year 1862, an official report shows that thirty-one persons have been killed and fifty-seven injured on railways. Of this number, one killed and one injured were passengers, twenty-six killed and fifty-two injured were servants of railway companies or contractors, and four persons killed and four injured were neither passengers nor servants of the railway company. The proportion of passengers who have been killed and injured to the number conveyed on railways during the year, is one in 1,810,236. On railways in England the proportion of sufferers to the number of passengers conveyed is generally about one in 249,407, or two killed and fifteen injured out of every 4,339,919. In making this comparison, it must, however, be remembered that trains are run in this country at very reduced rates of speed, which considerably lessens the probability of accident; whilst, on the other hand, the long lengths of single line are more difficult to work safely than the double lines, which chiefly predominate in England.

SIR BARTLE FRERE.—It is singular that India hears so little of the Governor of Bombay. When Sir Bartle Frere was in the Viceroy's Council, none were so active as he, none so fond of publicity and of drawing the attention of all to the acts of Government. So far as the Bombay journals inform us, we would suppose that the presidency had no governor. It is left only to local correspondents to chronicle his arrival at this hill station and departure from that. Yet we believe Sir Bartle Frere is working as hard in Bombay as we know he did in Calcutta. He is in his own presidency, and though a prophet is said to have no honour in his own country, this does not apply in his case to the non-official public. Will his Excellency not publish a minute or two—about the political state and prospects of Kattywar, for instance? How is it that Bombay is the only province of India which has not issued rules for the sale of waste lands? Sir Bartle Frere laments Sir Charles Wood's obstructiveness, and cannot be less liberal than Bengal.

BOMBAY.—It is time Bombay had its direct communication with Liverpool and Glasgow, like Calcutta. The Bombay Review states that a company has been formed to establish a line of first-class iron ships between Bombay and Liverpool. Ship-builders are employed at home in building a large number of first-class vessels for the native merchants of Bombay. At Dundee, a magnificent vessel is under construction, of 1,100 tons builder's measurement, to class A 1 for fifteen years, and at Liverpool three large iron vessels have been launched, also built to order for a Parsee firm in Bombay. Messrs. George Smith and Sons, of Glasgow, also intend running a monthly line of their Cities to Bombay. A new line is about to sail regularly between Liverpool and Calcutta.

A PRIZE ESSAY.—A prize of Rs. 50, offered by His Highness Rama Vurmah, first prince of Travancore, for the best essay on the state of architecture, sculpture, and painting in ancient India, has been awarded to the Rev. W. Taylor, and a second prize of Rs. 25 will be awarded to C. Iyahsawmy Pillay, by the School of Industrial Arts, for the best set of photographic illustrations of the architecture and sculpture of Southern India to illustrate the prize essay. Mr. Taylor's essay shows little knowledge of architecture, such as a study of Fergusson would give, and does not do justice to the splendid works of the Temples in South India. But what could be expected for fifty rupees?

OFFICERS ENGAGING IN TRADE.

Bimla, June 26.—No. 90a.—H.E. the Gov. gen. finds it necessary to call attention to article 5, sec. XLVIII. of the military regulations, by which military officers "are strictly prohibited from taking any part in the management of banks in India, or from being connected with banks or any other trading companies, except as simple shareholders, the only exception to this rule being in favour of ex-officio directors or secretaries of the Govt. banks."

The late court of directors intimated in their despatch, in the financial dept., No. 42, dated Oct. 11, 1864, that this prohibition was not intended to apply to invalid officers, but no other class of officers is exempted from the operation of the foregoing rule.

June 27.—No. 91a.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to appoint Surg. H. Baillie, F.R.C.S., to officiate as presidency surg. during the absence of Surg. maj. A. Webb, or until further orders.

Military Dept., July 1.—No. 434.—The underment. officer is permitted to proceed to Europe on leave of absence on s.c.:

Capt. A. C. Gordon, of the Madras staff corps, dep. commissr., Nursingpore, for 15 mo.

SERVICES OF MR. TURNBULL.

Public Works Dept., Simla, June 26.—No. 64.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the annexed despatch from H.M.'s Sec. of State for India.—

India-office, London, May 16, 1863.

Railway.—No. 17.

TO H.E. THE RIGHT HON. THE GOV. GEN. OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

My Lord,—I have perused with much interest the notification, a copy of which was forwarded with your Excellency's despatch of Feb. 27 last, No. 8, in which is expressed your Excellency's sense of the meritorious services of Mr. Turnbull, lately chief engineer in Bengal, of the East Indian Railway Company.

H.M.'s Government are not ignorant of the great difficulties with which Mr. Turnbull has had to contend in the course of his professional career in India, or of the ability and patience with which those difficulties have been met; and by a letter [dated May 15, 1863], copy of which is transmitted herewith, Mr. Turnbull has been assured that the testimony borne in your notification to his talent and perseverance expresses not less their sentiments than those of your Excellency.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. WOOD.

Military Letters.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

My Lord,—I have received and considered in Council your letter dated Feb. 4, 1863, inviting a re-consideration of the decision conveyed in my despatch No. 429, of Nov. 13, 1862, that field-officers of the staff corps must be held to be in the same position as regards qualification for staff employ as the effective field-officers of a regiment.

2. You observe that in the British service substantive field-officers, if not effective field-officers of regiments, can hold the appointments of brigade-major or aide-de-camp, and that several substantive field-officers, unattached, appear to be holding those situations at home and in the colonies.

3. You consider the position of an unattached officer somewhat similar to that of an officer of the staff corps.

4. I have requested the opinion of His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief upon the subject, and have pointed out to His Royal Highness that officers of the staff corps have been declared subject to the regulation which limits their tenure of such appointments to five years, and that the effect of calling upon them to vacate on promotion to the rank of field-officer would be to throw an increased number on the unemployed list.

5. His Royal Highness has informed me, in reply, that he concurs in the opinion I had expressed as to the inexpediency of multiplying occasions upon which officers of the staff corps may be called upon to vacate appointments and remain unemployed.

6. His Royal Highness observes that in the British service field-officers on full pay are not allowed to hold staff appointments, as they have important regimental duties to perform from which they cannot be spared, but this is not the case with officers of the staff corps, who may be employed in any capacity most convenient to the Government of India.

7. His Royal Highness is of opinion, therefore, that they should be treated as are unattached officers on half-pay in the British service.

8. Officers of the staff corps will not be required, therefore, to vacate their appointments on promotion, but their rank, on first appointment, should be that laid down in the Queen's regulations as qualifying for the appointments in question, and they will still be subject to the five years' limitation rule.—I have, &c.,

C. WOOD.

COINS CURRENT IN INDIA.

Dr. Shekleton, of the Assay Office, has published a very elaborate table of the gold and silver coins current in India, in continuation of Tables VIII. and IX., by Mr. J. Prinsep. Among the gold coins the Mohur is, of course, predominant, though differing considerably in value according to its origin. The Ahmedabad mohur, for instance, current in Gujerat is to the Ahmedshah mohur current at Delhi as 98.040 to 100.896. The Afghan mohur, again, varies from 80.780 to 100.413, the former bearing the superscription of Shah Sooja, and the latter that of Zeman Shah. The doubloon, also, ranges somewhat widely—the Spanish doubloon being as 110.862 to 241.653 compared with that of Chili, Brazil, Columbia, Ecuador, Mexico, and Peru, are all represented by this coin, while Austria, Belgium, Hamburg, Holland, Hungary, Mantua (A.D. 1784 to 1797), Poland (A.D. 1781 to 1791) and the Papal States are distinguished by the ducat. The East India Company's gold mohur A.D. 1700 indicates the assumption of sovereign rights on the part of the merchant adventurers trading to the East. A less successful assertion of independence was that made by Moolraj, when, during the siege of Mooltan in 1848-49, he struck a gold rupee valued at 6.000 as compared with 100, the standard value of the gold mohur now current in British India. The silver rupee exhibits a range as wide as that of the mohur. The present currency, which dates from 1835, being taken at 100, we find the Arcot, or old Madras currency (A.D. 1759) quoted at 99.10-4, Peshawar (Hijri 1240) at 62.13-4, Hyderabad from 36.14-0 to 87.8-10, old Benares at 101.9-0, Neemuch and Ajmeer at 94.5-8, Bikaner, N.W.P., at 102.1-0, Bhopal at 90.7-8, Bindrabun at 80.14-0, Broach at 95.3-0, Budaon 95.5-4, Bukkur in Sindh at 100.15-4, Affghan at 64.1-8 (Shah Sooja's) to 97.7-4 (Timoor Shah's). A fine time, truly, for money-changers, but the Cashmere rupee, which Dr. Shekleton stigmatises as "debased," sinks to 36.11-7, while the highest of all was the rupee of Shah Jehan of Delhi, Hijri 1037 to 1068, valued at 103.2-7. In 1811 the Madras Government appears to have issued a double rupee, valued at 201.9-0. The English crown-piece stands at 244.8-10, that of France A.D. 1726 to 1793 at 244.7-1, and that of Germany A.D. 1753 at 215.10-5. The dollar represents the commerce of half the world, and takes one back to the days when Spain and Portugal were the Maritime Powers. The Chinese dollar is highest, being quoted at 318.4-5, while that of Manila is the lowest, 203.0-6. Between these range the Austrian, Bolivian, Brazilian, Central American, Chilean, Columbian, Mexican, Spanish, Peruvian, and that of the United States. The Dutch ducat, especially coined for the East India trade, and valued at 281.9-0, has not been issued since 1804. The old Madras fanams, which even now confuse one in financial reports from that presidency, seem to possess the eccentric quality of being one-third their double: the single fanam being 5.6-6, and the double fanam 15.4-4. The French five-franc piece is 210.7-5, the English florin 97.13-1, and the "splendid shilling" 48.14-7—blessings on its frosty pow!

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH CABLE.

The Times has startled and interested its readers with the important announcement of the forward state of the Indian telegraph cable. We have made room for a portion of the article, but the pressure on our space and its great length have prevented us from giving it entire. The Times states that there are upwards of 900 nautical miles of the cable now lying ready at Mr. Henley's works—huge coils of thick, black-looking rope, nearly one inch and a-quarter in diameter, weighing nearly four tons to the mile, and costing about £200 per mile—"the cheapest, strongest, and, electrically speaking, most perfect cable that has ever yet been made." 350 miles more of it have yet to be manufactured. But all will be ready by September next.

THE LATE MAHARANEE CHUNDA KOUR.

THE mother of Maharajah Dhuleep Singh has been laid in an English grave, but it seems a question whether she will be allowed to rest there. The Maharanee Chunda Kour was a Hindu in religion—a bigoted Hindu. Her chief native attendants, Utchul Singh and Kishen Singh, state that she was "so sensitive about the contact of persons of a different faith to herself that it was an effort on her part to bear the presence of her son." Her Highness is said to have "died delirious, without a lucid interval," and it is added that she would have been truly horrified if she had supposed that her remains would be laid in a Christian burial-ground. They now lie in the cemetery at Kensall-green, where they were interred, by order of her son, without any religious rites, Christian or Heathen. Her Highness's two principal Sikh attendants, just named, have written a sort of appeal to the British public against the disposal of the body of their late royal mistress. They demand that the body shall be burned, and the ashes sent to the Ganges. Her son was, perhaps, perplexed by the opposite wishes of his Christian advisers and the faithful native adherents of his Hindu parent, and took refuge in a very awkward and unsatisfactory compromise; for his mother's mode of burial can satisfy no party of any religion at all. We think, after all, that it would have been better to have allowed her native attendants to have honoured their Queen's remains after their own fashion and in the way that the old lady would herself have desired if she had been in the full possession of her faculties in her last moments. Some of the London editors who have discoursed on the subject of the late Maharanee's history have mistakenly described her as the wife of Runjeet Singh, the old one-eyed Lion of Lahore. She was only his concubine. It was made a question, even, by a political faction, whether Dhuleep Singh was the son of the great Punjab Chief.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS AND DR. DUFF, THE FAMOUS CALCUTTA MISSIONARY.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS, at the close of his judicial career, has had an opportunity to distinguish himself by a decision of great importance respecting a question of how far a Hindoo lad is entitled to defy the wishes or the authority of his parents while under the influence of the religious teaching of Christian missionaries. A Hindoo minor, Hemnauth Bose, left the parental roof and embraced Christianity. Dr. Duff, the famous missionary, received him with open arms, and refused to deliver him up to his father. The father applied to the High Court for a writ of habeas corpus. The boy was brought before the Court, and after all that could be urged pro and con, the judge decided that the boy should be restored to his parents. This is not an Indian or a Hindu question. It is a question of natural law, in which all nations are concerned, and though if Sir Mordaunt Wells had decided against the parents it would have given the greatest possible offence to, and have caused great alarm in, the Hindu community, that circumstance was not a matter for consideration in a Court of Justice. The sole important point for the decision of the Court was of a purely legal character. Was it a whit more lawful for a Christian priest to withhold a Hindu child from its parents than for a Hindu priest to withhold a Christian child from its parents—or would any Protestant parent think himself justly treated if a Roman Catholic priest were to act towards the Protestant's child as Dr. Duff had done towards the Hindu's child? The Court in its judicial capacity had not to decide which religion was the best—Hinduism or Christianity—but whether any man of any religion had a right to withhold a child from its own parents with the intention of inducing it to embrace a new creed. The Judge in this interesting and important case decided that the father had a right to the possession of his child in spite of all force to the contrary either physical or moral. In this decision Sir Mordaunt Wells acted not only on his impartial convictions as a judge, but on the feelings of a father and a man—and, let us add—a Christian: for Christianity teaches us to do unto others as we would they should do unto us.

THE "CHINESE AND JAPANESE REPOSITORY."

VOLTAIRE was never tired of writing and talking about the vast empire of China, and the wisdom of the people, and the antiquity of their institutions, and the pure morality and unaffected good sense of the great philosopher, Confucius. Perhaps he loved and admired the Chinese none the less for their expulsion of the Christian missionaries. He indignantly defended the people of China from the reproach of atheism, and maintained that they were ardent and humble worshippers of a supreme God, and lovers of virtue and morality. Their political constitution, he said, was the only one entirely established upon the principle of paternal authority. Very paternal, truly! Since Voltaire's day we have become better acquainted with the inside barbarians, and really know something of their best qualities and their worst. A vast quantity of most curious and interesting information respecting the Chinese—their literature and science, religion, political institutions, and manners—was collected in a periodical entitled the Chinese Repository, published at Canton. It was continued, we believe, for nearly twenty years. Why it was given up, at last, we know not, but its editors are said to have resigned their work with reluctance, and to have observed that it was "like cutting the unfinished web." They added the expression of a hope that the threads would be taken up by abler hands. For more than a dozen years neither stronger nor feebler hands resumed the work. At last Mr. James Summers, Professor of Chinese, King's College, London, has had the courage to revive this long-suspended periodical under the fuller title of the "Chinese and Japanese Repository," for we now know something of Japan as well as China, and are desirous to know more. The first number of the new series is now before us.* It has as much good matter as it has room for; but we wish it had more space for its good matter, and at a less cost. In these days of cheap periodicals half-a-crown seems too much for a magazine of only forty-two pages. As soon as the work becomes known to the curious in oriental lore, and the increase of the public appetite shall be found to grow with what it feeds upon, we have no doubt the editor will do his best to meet the larger demand, and on more reasonable terms. In fact, he pledges himself, in his introductory address, to enlarge the work as soon as it meets with a fair promise of public patronage, and he will then, no doubt, find himself in a condition to secure a better profit for the work at less cost individually to his subscribers. It is a significant peculiarity that this Asiatic work is published in our own metropolis. A few years ago this would have been almost impracticable; but steam has almost realised the lover's wish—almost annihilated time and distance. Peking and London are brought into nearer neighbourhood, and a trip from one capital to the other no longer occupies a full year; and contributions from China to a London editor may now pour in upon him with sufficient rapidity and punctuality. The articles in this first number of the "Chinese and Japanese Repository" are highly interesting and appropriate. The reader will pay them the compliment to wish they were longer and more numerous.

THE LAW OF FORFEITURE IN CASES OF SUICIDE.

A CASE of considerable interest and importance connected with India was decided by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on the 22nd ultimo. The question was—Whether the goods and chattels of a Hindu Rajah (Rajah Christenath Roy Bahadur, who committed suicide in Calcutta on the 24th of October, 1844,) were or were not forfeited to the Crown—Whether English law on this point was applicable to the Hindus under the English Government? The goods and chattels of Rajah Christenath Roy were valued at Rs. 987,063 within the City of Calcutta, and to Rs. 289,500 beyond its precincts. The whole property was claimed by the widow. The Bengal Government considered that the property was forfeited to the Crown. The Supreme Court of Calcutta decided that it was not so forfeited. The case was referred to the Privy Council, which has dismissed the appeal with costs, and confirmed the decision of the Court below.

* It is published on the third of each month by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., Waterloo-place, S.W., and at the London and China Telegraph office, George-yard, Lombard-street, E.C.

The following passage is a portion of the judgment, and will be read with interest:—

“Is the law of forfeiture for suicide one which can be considered properly applicable to Hindus and Mahometans? The grounds on which suicide is treated in England as an offence against the law, and punished by forfeiture of the offender's goods and chattels to the King, are stated more fully in the case of Hales v. Pett, in Plowd. Rep. 261, than in any other book which we have met with. It is there stated that it is an offence against nature, against God, and against the King. Against nature, because against the instinct of self-preservation; against God, because against the commandment, ‘Thou shalt not kill,’ and a felo de se kills his own soul; against the King, in that thereby he loses a subject. Can these considerations extend to native Indians, not Christians, not recognising the authority of the Decalogue, and owing, at the time when this law is supposed to have been introduced, no allegiance to the King of Great Britain? The nature of the punishment also is very little applicable to such persons. A part of it is that the body of the offender should be deprived of the rites of Christian burial in consecrated ground. The forfeiture extends to chattels real and personal, but not to real estates; these distinctions, at least in the sense in which they are understood in England, not being known to or intelligible by Hindoos and Mahometans. Self-destruction, though treated by the law of England as murder, and spoken of in the case to which we have referred in Plowden as the worst of all murders, is really, as it affects society, and in a moral and religious point of view, of a character very different not only from all other murders, but from all other felonies. These distinctions are pointed out with great force and clearness in the notes attached to the Indian Code, as originally prepared by Lord Macaulay and the other Commissioners. The truth is, that the Act is one which in countries not influenced by the doctrines of Christianity, has been regarded as deriving its moral character altogether from the circumstances in which it is committed: sometimes as blameable, sometimes as justifiable, sometimes as meritorious, or even as an act of positive duty. In this light suicide seems to have been viewed by the founders of the Hindoo code, who condemn it in ordinary cases as forbidden by their religion; but in others, as in the well-known instances of suttee and self-immolation under the car of Juggernaut, treat it as an act of great religious merit. We think, therefore, the law under consideration is inapplicable to Hindus, and if it had been introduced by the charters in question with respect to Europeans, we should think that Hindus would have been excepted from its operation. But that it was not so introduced appears to us to be shown by the admirable judgment of Sir B. Penckock in this case; and if it were not so introduced, then, as regards natives, it never had any existence. It would not necessarily follow that therefore it never had existence as regards Europeans. That question would depend upon this, whether, when the original settlers, under the protection of their own Sovereign, were governed by their own laws, those laws included the one now under consideration; whether an offence of the description was an offence against the King's peace, for which he was entitled to claim forfeiture; whether the factory could for this purpose be considered as within his jurisdiction. In that case it might be that the subsequent appointment of coroners by the Act of the 33rd George III., would render effectual a right previously existing, but for the recovery of which no adequate remedy had been previously provided. We are not quite sure whether the Court below intended to determine this point or not. Much of the reasoning in the judgment is applicable to Europeans as well as to natives, but the Chief Justice in his judgment says:—‘At present we have merely to consider the question so far as it relates to the goods and chattels of a native who wilfully and intentionally destroys himself, and who cannot in strictness be called a felo de se, and we now proceed to deal with that question, and with that question alone.’ The point so decided we think perfectly clear, and it is not necessary to go further. Since the new Code, which confines the penalty of forfeiture within much narrower limits than existed previously to its enactment, and does not extend it to the property of persons committing suicide, the case can hardly again arise. We have no doubt that it is our duty in this case humbly to advise her Majesty to dismiss the appeal, with costs.”

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

An extraordinary meeting of the proprietors of this company took place on Saturday, the 8th inst., at their offices, Gresham-street, for the purpose of considering the proposal of the Secretary of State for India, viz., to sanction, on the part of the Government of India, the immediate extension of the Eastern Bengal Railway from the Ganges as far as the Jumooa, and to guarantee interest at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum on the requisite capital; and also, if they should resolve to accept the said proposal, to pass a resolution sanctioning the raising of such additional capital. J. F. Neath, Esq., presided.

The Chairman, in explaining the objects of the meeting, said the shareholders had been informed at the last general meeting that the Government of India had offered to sanction the immediate extension of the line beyond the Ganges as far as Para Pukea, on the Jumooa, a distance of forty or fifty miles, and the raising of new capital to the amount of £650,000 on a guarantee of interest by the Government of India at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.; and that the directors had stated, in reply, that they would recommend the execution of such extension on the same terms as those granted by the original contract with the Government, including the guarantee of 5 per cent. on the capital required; but they advised the proprietors not to undertake the proposed extension on the terms offered. At that meeting the shareholders passed a resolution approving of the course taken by the directors on the subject, and that resolution was at once communicated to the Government of India. A deputation of that board afterwards waited on the Secretary of State for India, in order to more fully explain the views of the board and to ascertain those of the Government, and to come to some arrangement agreeable to both parties. At that meeting it was distinctly stated that the Government would not give a guarantee above the $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and it was proposed that the extension line should be carried on as a distinct and separate undertaking, but so far in connection with the original line as that it should be under the same direction and worked by the same staff of officers; supplementing the latter, at the cost of the new undertaking, where necessary, as had been done in the similar instances of extensions by the Madras, East Indian, Scinde, and Punjab Railway Companies, the last extension of the last-mentioned railway having been sanctioned by the Government only two months previously. In consequence, however, of a misapprehension on the part of the Secretary of State for India of what really passed at that interview, a new condition was attempted to be imported into the existing contract, which would prejudicially affect the interests of the original shareholders, by making the earnings of the present line, which are steadily increasing, liable to contribute to the payment of the interest to be guaranteed to a different class of persons, who were the shareholders of the extension line. The directors, therefore, felt that they had no alternative but that of submitting the whole matter to an extraordinary meeting of proprietors, and it would be for them to determine, by formal resolution, whether the offer of the Secretary of State for India to sanction the proposed extension of the line as part and parcel of the original undertaking, and not separated, should or should not be accepted, with all the necessary consequences, pecuniary and otherwise, of such amalgamation. After describing the great success of the passenger traffic on the main line, its receipts having increased since the 10th of January, 1862, from 32,268 rupees, to 71,145 rupees, in July of the same year, he dwelt on the injustice of the attempt of Sir Charles Wood to make the shareholders of the original railway pay to strangers the cost of guarantee of the extension. He further described the manner in which the company had been crippled in their operations by the delay and inactivity of the Government, both in auditing the accounts of the company, and neglecting their agreement with the company to make certain roads which were to act as feeders to the railway, none of which had yet been commenced.

Mr. Morgan moved a resolution, that the meeting declined to accept the offer of the Secretary of State for India, which was carried unanimously.

Dr. De Witt moved a resolution, giving the directors power to treat with the Government for the extension in question, on the ground that it should be a separate and distinct undertaking.

This was carried unanimously, and after some discussion, during which the conduct of Sir Charles Wood was described as “shabby”—the amount supposed to be saved by the course he pursued being only £1,500, whilst the expenses incurred would exceed £4,000 per annum—a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE REVOLUTION IN MADAGASCAR.—The Overland Sentinel of the Mauritius publishes some additional details respecting the late revolution in Madagascar, the colonial barque Bayonian have brought news to the Mauritius from Tamatave to the 16th of June. The formal accusations made against the late king and his companions were arranged under twenty heads. The principal charges comprise corruption in the administration of justice, the reception of bribes for nominations to rank and honours, protecting murderers and assassins from interested motives, the commission of incest and unnatural crimes, hostility to Christianity, &c. Several of the charges are trivial, others have an air of improbability, and some are contradictory. It would appear that religious parties have in no way participated in the revolution, and under the new order of things Christianity seems more firmly established than ever. Nothing is yet known of the intentions of the new Government respecting the treaties and concessions to foreigners, but it is believed the Queen will not make any unfavourable alteration.

MEDITERRANEAN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held at the London Tavern on the 7th inst., Mr. H. Moore in the chair. The report stated that the company had not been compelled to apply to her Majesty's Government for assistance under the guarantee, owing to the improvement that had taken place in the revenue, which would no doubt have been much greater but for the interruption that had occurred on the Malta and Alexandria line. No serious diminution in the receipts was expected, as it was believed that the interruption would only be temporary. Since the last report the transmission of messages between Malta and Great Britain had been very much improved by the submerging of the cable by the Italian Government then alluded to. The usual dividend on the preference shares was recommended, and the same dividend as last half-year upon the original shares. It also recommended the adding £544. 18s. 2d., being at the rate of 10 per cent. on the receipts to the reserve fund. The chairman moved the adoption of the report; he said that their net receipts for messages during the past six months had been £5,409. 1s. 3d., while those of the previous half-year were £5,440. 1s. 3d. The communication between England and Malta had been interrupted by the breaking of the cable between Alexandria and Bengazi, but it would, in all probability, be restored shortly. A cable had been laid since their last meeting, between Marala and Cape Carbonara, in Sardinia, from which they expected to derive much advantage. After the reception of the report, the meeting concluded in the usual manner.

THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.—If mechanical appliances are to be depended upon, and if the most careful and experienced supervision of all relating to the scientific perfection of a submarine cable is of any avail, the whole of England before next March will have at command a means of daily, if not hourly, communication with Madras, Calcutta, and Bombay. The activity of gray shirtings or the dullness of mule twist ought to be known here to the fraction of an anna every morning; and the news from China and Australia anticipated by exactly the difference of time between an overland passage and an overland telegraph, which means the difference between thirty days and five hours. So carefully have the plans been matured, so quietly has the cable itself been manufactured, that the announcement that the expedition will in a few days begin to leave these shores to accomplish such great results comes upon us with a suddenness that is almost startling, and the notion of being in instantaneous communication with all India soon after Christmas seems almost too good and too astounding to be capable of such immediate realisation. Such, however, is at least the object with which the expedition will start, and such, we have not the slightest doubt, is the object which it will accomplish with triumphant success. The Indian Government in making their cable have proceeded so quietly that, except to a few electricians and scientific men, the announcement that a cable to connect this country with Calcutta is nearly made will, we fancy, be quite a surprise to our readers. The India Board have placed the general superintendence and control of the line under Lieutenant-Colonel Patrick Stewart, R.E., an officer as well known for his gallantry during the Indian mutiny as for the great services he rendered the Government by the construction and maintenance of the telegraph lines through the wildest districts of Central and East India. For the immediate electrical and engineering superintendence of the line, and also for the arduous task of submerging it, the Indian Government have selected Sir Charles Bright and Mr. Latimer Clarke, and under such auspices and supervision its manufacture is now approaching completion at Mr. Henley's telegraph works, North Woolwich. Whatever may be its ultimate fate, it is quite certain that there never yet has been a cable manufactured with such care, or one which, in point of "conductivity" and insulation, comes so nearly up to the standard of absolute electrical perfection. The vessels which are to take this line will probably leave England about the end of next month, arriving on the scene of their operations in the Persian Gulf in January or February—the best time of the year in which to lay the cable. The process of submerging it and securing the shore ends is not likely to occupy more than a month or so. The total cost of the submarine sections of the line will be less than £350,000, including the expenses of laying it.—Times, Aug. 12.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for 4,00,000 rupees (£100,000) in bills on India took place on the 5th inst. at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were, to Calcutta, 22,00,000 rupees; to Bombay, 16,00,000 rupees; and to Madras, 2,00,000 rupees. The declared minimum price was as before, 1s. 11½d. per rupee on Calcutta, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay and Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to 1,30,00,000 rupees.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—This company, on the 5th inst., paid a further sum of £25,000 to the credit of the Secretary of State for India, on account of the extension capital guaranteed ¼ per cent, making a total of £100,000 paid on this account.

APPOINTMENTS.—(Foreign Office, Aug. 8.)—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. W. Brook as Consul at Maulmain, for his Majesty the King of the Belgians. The Queen has also been pleased to approve of Mr. W. R. G. Mellon as Consul at Port Louis, Mauritius, for the United States of America.

SIR HENRY MARSHAM HAVELOCK, Bart., son of the illustrious Havelock, is engaged to be married to the Lady Alice Morton, daughter of the late Earl of Ducie.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Ellora, which left on the 12th inst., took out £139,520, of which £132,020 was silver, and £7,500 gold, for Bombay.

AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.—The directors of the Agra and United Service Bank (Limited) have declared the usual interim dividend of £2. 10s. per share for the half-year ended June 30.

TELEGRAPH BETWEEN TURKEY AND INDIA.—The detachment of non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Engineers, selected from the companies at head-quarters to proceed to the East, for the purpose of laying down the electric telegraph between Turkey and India, have been medically inspected at Brompton Barracks, and only await final orders from the Horse Guards to embark for Constantinople. The officer selected to take command of the expedition is Lieut.-Col. Stewart, who has had considerable experience in surveying and other engineering operations. The Royal Engineers take out with them a very large quantity of all kinds of engineering stores, as it is probable they will be absent from England about five years. During the time they are employed in the work they will receive a considerable increase of pay. The party quitted head-quarters on the 13th, under the command of Lieut. Smith, who goes out in charge of the expedition.

Affairs of China.

[FROM LAST NIGHT'S "GAZETTE"]

FOREIGN OFFICE, Aug. 14.

The following despatch has been received from Sir Frederick Bruce, her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Chief Superintendent of Trade in China:—

PEKIN, April 30, 1863.

"MY LORD.—Referring to my despatch* of the 8th of September, 1862, I have the honour to state that Mr. Medhurst, before leaving Shanghai, published the letter to him which formed enclosure in that despatch. The publication has done good, by clearing up the misapprehension that prevailed as to the real position of foreigners at the Chinese ports open to trade, and as evidence that her Majesty's Government will not agree to any system which does not respect the territorial rights of the Chinese Government, and its exclusive jurisdiction over its own subjects. This exclusive jurisdiction of China over Chinese, and of each foreign nation over its subjects, is the foundation on which the international relations of China with the outer world is based.

"I am glad to say that Monsieur Berthemy enclosed to the French Government the paper containing my correspondence with Mr. Medhurst, as expressing the views entertained by him on this delicate question. They are fully concurred in by the Russian and the American Ministers.

"The British and American communities have appointed a committee to prepare a scheme for the municipal government of the large part of the settlement inhabited by them, in conformity with these principles, and I hope that, with the aid of their experience, a system may be found which will meet the requirements of the place, and to which the Chinese Government will give its assent.

"The growth of Shanghai is wonderful; its population is estimated at 1,500,000; and it bids fair to become soon the most important city of the East. The Chinese flock to it on account of the security it enjoys, and the silk manufacture which was destroyed by the Taiping occupation of Soochow and Hung-chow is taking root at Shanghai.

"It is a subject of great satisfaction to me that our resolution to save Shanghai from the destruction that menaced it at the hands of the Taiping hordes, has not only been productive of great benefit to trade, but has afforded a safe asylum and an escape from ruin to so large a body of the industrious and respectable native population.—I have, &c.,

PARSEE LIBERALITY AGAIN.—Mr. Cowasjee Jehangir Readymoney, a Parsee merchant of Bombay, has offered a prize of five thousand rupees to any Parsee who shall qualify himself to practice as a barrister before the high-court at Bombay. The conditions are, that the candidate or candidates "must enlist their names with the donor and proceed to England within a period of four months from this date, after which the offer will be withdrawn." Should more than one candidate offer, the first who returns to Bombay and practises as a barrister will be entitled to the prize. It will be necessary for the successful candidate to produce certificates of good character, and "any one receiving pecuniary assistance, either by public or private subscription, before leaving Bombay will not be entitled to the prize."

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVE-
MENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL
TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of introducing a system of efficient Hotel accommodation into India, China, and other places in the East.

In Calcutta a Joint-Stock Company has lately purchased and undertaken the management of a hotel, and the prospects of the enterprise may be inferred from the very high premium at which their shares are quoted in the Calcutta market, see Times, July 17, the Englishman's Weekly Mail of June 8th, 1863, and Allen's Indian Mail of August 4, viz.,—£25 paid, present value £45 ex div., equal to 80 per cent. premium, and the payment of a dividend of 10 per cent. for the half-year ending 30th April last, equal to 20 per cent. per annum.

It is proposed, in the first instance, to supply the urgent requirements of Bombay and Point de Galle.

In the event of two-thirds of the first issue of shares not being subscribed for, no allotment will take place, and the deposits will be returned to the subscribers, without deduction.

It is proposed to pay to Shareholders 5 per cent. interest upon the capital as paid up, until the first dividend is declared. Detailed prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained of the Secretary, Bankers, and Broker.

ORIENTAL HOTELS COMPANY (LIMITED).

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that NO APPLICATION for SHARES in the Oriental Hotels Company (Limited) will be received after this day, SATURDAY, the 15th August current, and Applications from the Country must be posted not later than MONDAY Evening.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the Provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to new Insurers Eighty per Cent. of the Profits, at Quinquennial Divisions, or a Low Rate of Premium without Participation of Profits.

Since the establishment of the Company in 1821, the Amount of Profits allotted to the Assured has exceeded in Cash value £660,000, which represents equivalent Reversionary Bonuses of £1,055,000.

After the Division of Profits at Christmas, 1859, the Life Assurances in force, with existing Bonuses thereon, amounted to upwards of £4,730,000, the Income from the Life Branch £207,000 per annum, and the Life Assurance Fund, independent of the Capital, exceeded £1,618,000.

LOCAL MILITIA and VOLUNTEER CORPS.—No Extra Premium is required for service therein.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, if such value be not less than £50.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written Notices of, received and registered.

MEDICAL FEES paid by the Company, and no charge for Policy Stamps.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property at Moderate Rates. Losses caused by Explosion of Gas are admitted by this Company.

PERSONS PROCEEDING to INDIA can effect ASSURANCES on favourable terms with the COLONIAL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

LOANS given to Civil or Military Officers proceeding to India on her Majesty's Service.

Agents at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, and in all the British Colonies, where premiums can be paid and claims settled.

The Colonial was established in 1846, and its present income is upwards of £130,000 per annum.

Constituted by Act of Parliament.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!—C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post. 23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile. GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints. Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder. It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea. Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints. The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As shown at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSELY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 5s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guinea.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

CORALIUM SILEX, an entirely new substance for ARTIFICIAL TEETH, which will neither discolour nor decay, remaining firm in the mouth, from one to a complete set, without springs, wires, or any visible attachment. It gives the greatest support to all loose or tender teeth, and answers most perfectly the purposes of mastication and articulation. No painful operation required. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, &c. At home from eleven till four. No connection with any person in the same profession.—No. 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square.

NO MORE ERUPTIONS on the SKIN.—MOLLARD'S PERFUMED TOILET SULPHUR SOAP and CREAM, entirely free from any unpleasant smell, and are sovereign remedies against fever, local or chronic cutaneous eruptions, rheumatism, pains in the joints, &c. The Cream possesses all the properties of the renowned Barège Waters for baths. Recommended by the most eminent Physicians. Prospectus and testimonials sent on application. Sold wholesale and retail by P. Newberry and Sons, 45, St. Paul's-churchyard; Dietrichsen and Hannay, 63, Oxford-street; G. Jozenu, 40, Haymarket; T. Keating, 79, St. Paul's-churchyard; P. A. Gerard, 390, Strand; Bainbridge and Pound, 60, Leinster-lane; and at the Central Depot, 2, Rupert-street, Coventry-street, W.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AQUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard-street, Perfumers to her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age. The Aqua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea per bottle.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE- SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. When combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervescent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial. It is prepared (in a state of perfect purity and of uniform strength) by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of two hundred medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided, a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer. MR. JOHN WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London. Price of a Single Truss—10s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 32s. 6d. Postage 1s. Double Truss—31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage 1s. 6d. An Umbilical Truss—22s., and 52s. 6d. Postage 1s. 10d. Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT. ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c., &c.—VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c.—They are porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 1s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s., and 16s. each. Postage 6d. JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

CHILDREN'S WORM TABLETS (KEATING'S).—The great remedy for these disorders in Children can now be administered in the form of a purely Vegetable Sweetmeat, at once agreeable and effective. Prepared and sold in Tins, 1s. 1d., and 2s. 9d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Church-yard, London, E.C., and Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World. OBSERVE the words "KEATING'S WORM TABLETS" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Tin, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—A certain remedy for diseases of the skin, ringworm, scurvy, jaundice, scrofula or king's evil, sore breasts, and the most inveterate skin diseases to which the human race is subject. They cannot be treated with so certain and speedy a remedy as Holloway's Pills, which act so wonderfully on the constitution, and so purify the blood, that these diseases are eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure obtained. They are equally efficacious in the cure of tumours, burns, scalds, glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism, and contracted and stiff joints. These medicines operate mildly but surely. The cure effected by them is not temporary or apparent only, but complete and permanent.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 24th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of letters or newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

LORD ELGIN has been ill of fever, but is now convalescent. His lordship, it is said, has summoned the members of the Imperial Council to meet him in Lahore in January next, though other reports have it that they are to assemble at Delhi. The Punjab Exhibition will be opened by his lordship in person, and it is expected to be a very grand ceremony. We hope some able reporters will be present on the occasion, to give Europe some idea of a scene in which there will be so strange a mixture of British and Oriental splendour. There will be an enormous gathering of native chiefs and grandees in gorgeous and fantastic dresses. It will be a sort of Field of the Cloth of Gold on an Oriental scale. It is uncertain whether the Viceroy will remain at Simla till January. There are hints of a tour through the Punjab, and an interview at Peshawur with Shere Dil Khan, or whoever may be the successor of Dost Mahommed.

The death of Dost Mahommed Khan has made our British politicians in India a little anxious about affairs in Afghanistan, for the people of that country need a ruler with a clear head and a stout heart. The late Dost was precisely the man for them. Not only his own people, but his British friends reposed the greatest confidence in him. His energy, and valour, and decision, were in strong contrast to the feeble and poor-spirited Shah Soojah, whose cause we had so injudiciously espoused; and since our treaty with the gallant Dost we have always found him far more faithful and straightforward than any other Indian ruler. His private character could not escape the censure of a moralist, but he had some noble qualities to redeem him from the contempt with which we cannot but regard too many of the native princes. It is said that during the preparations for the siege of Herat, he observed to the mourners about his sick bed; "Do not be discomfited; I will take Herat first, and then die." The word was prophetic. We wish only half of the prophecy had been fulfilled—that he had taken Herat, and had lived to turn his victory to good account.

The Indian papers are still vehemently discussing the case of the Hindoo lad Hemnath Bose. It is a curious fact that it is just thirty years ago that Dr. Duff got himself into a precisely similar scrape in his honest but-somewhat indiscreet attempts to increase the number of Hindoo converts to Christianity. We allude to the case brought before the Supreme Court of Brijonath Ghose, who was claimed from Dr. Duff by the boy's father. The counsel for the Hindoo father was the late Longueville Clarke, who attacked the missionaries so severely for invading the natural rights of parents as to lead to a most virulent controversy, carried on not only in the papers, but in pamphlets.

According to the Madras Daily News, his Excellency the Hon. Sir William Thomas Denison, K.C.B., has published a pamphlet on "The Gorilla," which has been received with "roars of derisive laughter," and "with no very complimentary expressions concerning the author."

Some further particulars relating to the Nana Sahib we have extracted from the Indian papers received by this mail. They are by no means so satisfactory as we could wish, and the British Indian community in general is not, we think, perfectly satisfied that there can be no mistake. We should have thought that before the mail left Calcutta, if the right man had been caught, his identity would have been placed beyond all possible doubt. The mistakes of personal identification are wonderfully numerous in India. Indian faces—speaking generally—want character; so that they are not easily remembered. The man who personated the Rajah of Burdwan, twenty years after the Rajah's body had been burnt in the presence of thousands of his countrymen, was not proved to be an impostor until after a tedious trial of half a year. Not only many natives swore that he was the Rajah, but the well-known David Hare and several other Europeans, including officers of Government of high standing, asserted that they had known the Rajah of Burdwan personally, and that they believed the present claimant to the guddee of Burdwan was the real man. The natives who have helped us to the discovery of the Nana are acknowledged to have deceived the police, wilfully or ignorantly, by pointing out the real supposed Tantia Topee, who long ago was sent to his account under the hands of British justice. We must wait for another mail before we can quite make up our mind that the Nana is alive.

The Dinapore scandal case has been brought to a close, and we are glad to hear that Colonel Burney has gained his case, recovering damages to the extent of Rs. 50,000.

Colonel Crawley has been relieved from the command of the Inniskillings, and Colonel Prior has been appointed his successor. Colonel Crawley is virtually under arrest. He has received notice that he is not to leave his station without leave.

John Johnson, a native of Finland, and a seaman of the British ship Dalkieth, has been tried in the High Court, Bombay, and found guilty of the manslaughter of Captain Flucker, but recommended to mercy; sentence has been reserved.

The British ship General Simpson, which left Bombay for Liverpool on the 7th June, was wrecked on a reef of rocks on the north-west side of Chittag, one of the Laccadives, on the 19th idem. The Coromandel brought to Bombay its captain, mates, and seamen of the ill-fated vessel.

Government have notified that all salaries of Government servants above Rs. 500 a-year falling due and being payable on the 1st of August next, and all interest on Government promissory notes falling due on the same date for the preceding half-year, shall be charged with the reduced rate of Income-tax, namely, 3 per cent.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Bengal army has announced the formation in Bengal of a fifth musquetry division, and a re-distribution of the several musquetry divisions has consequently ensued.

An order has been issued recognising the claims of officers of the Electric Telegraph department, to receive medical aid free of charge whenever required, and without additional cost to Government.

An additional tax of Rs. 1., 4 annas per chest, has been imposed on opium in supercession of the old Maunpore-road dues (the Agra and Bombay-road between Indore and Sindwah). As an experimental measure, the levy of transit duties generally on this road is suspended for one year.

New rules for the admission of Pleaders in the Courts of the central provinces of Bengal have been promulgated. They chiefly refer to the granting certificates of character and qualification, recommending care and strictness in the award of such certificates.

The son of a Captain Rotton, late of the Oudh service, has been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, and a fine of 400 rupees, as the principal in a dacoity case.

Casualties by Death in the Armies of India reported since last Publication.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.

The Western Daily Press, after giving a sketch of the life of the late Lord Clyde, says:—"The reference to his lordship's position in the Crimean war is the only point on which an erroneous impression prevails. Whatever may have been the public desire that he should have been put in command, his own view of the matter was characteristically modest and simple. In a letter of his, dated November 27, 1855, written to the proprietor of this journal, he says:—'I assure you you are quite mistaken in supposing I have any ground of complaint—I have none whatever.' Instead of seeking or coveting rank or station, we know, from his own lips, that he shrunk from them with something like morbid feeling. The peerage, he once told the writer, he would gladly have declined, if he could have done so without offence to the Sovereign by whom it was conferred. It was the same with the field-marshal's baton which he so lately received; he valued it, not because of fame, still less because of emolument, but simply as an acknowledgment of duties he had performed. No man was more scrupulously just—almost severely just—in the discharge of those duties. It could never be said of him that he employed his deservedly great influence at the Horse Guards in behalf of any protégé or friend. Being without relations who needed help, and having achieved his noble position by his own unaided efforts, he could afford to be thoroughly independent in every department of the public service. In his very last employment at the War-office—the disposal of the Indian prize-money—he could not brook the delays of lawyers and precedents, but wrote at once to Lord Palmerston; and had the satisfaction of an answer which enabled him to carry out his own views promptly and thoroughly. Although it may be supposed Lord Clyde's health suffered from his last campaign in India, he seemed himself unconscious of it, even when he returned home in the autumn of 1860. He took the precaution, however, of going to Vichy for the winter, and afterwards appeared as active and animated as ever. Instead of setting up a great establishment he contented himself, until a few months ago, with bachelor's quarters at the Albany, in Piccadilly, and met his friends regularly at the United Service Club, where he daily resorted on his way to and from the Horse Guards. Lately he occupied a mansion in Berkeley-square, and it was a favourite excursion for his lordship to run down to Chatham, to visit his old friend and companion in arms, Major-General Eyre. It was upon one of those visits that the gallant veteran succumbed to death. In June he had an illness which showed signs of atrophy, or gradual decay; but he rallied, contrary to expectation, and was well enough until about a month ago, when weakness again set in, and he sank gradually, expiring in General Eyre's house on Saturday afternoon. The writer called upon his lordship, at Chatham, on Friday morning, and found him somewhat better; in fact there were signs of recovery, for he had passed a good night, and General Eyre had gone for the day to Gravesend, on government business. It seems, however, to have been but a temporary rally, for the same night brought us the above telegram of his death. It must have been sudden, although the medical attendants had foretold it as inevitable. His lordship was in his seventy-first year, but looked scarcely so old, being very active, cheerful, and energetic. He had a noble presence, and his eye especially was quick and piercing; his manners were those of an accomplished soldier, who had seen much of life, and who could adapt himself to various circumstances. Under a somewhat austere expression of countenance there was much warmth and geniality of heart and affection. An only sister (Miss Campbell) is the sole surviving member of his family; but there are two, if not three, cousins bearing his father's name of MacIver."

On Saturday Dr. Summers, and other medical officers from Fort Pitt, made a post-mortem examination of the remains of this distinguished officer at the official residence of General Eyre, at Chatham. The result of the examination will be reported to the Horse Guards.

CAPTURE OF THE NANA.

[From the Times of India, July 24.]

While the Nana is a prisoner at Ajmere, the veritable Rao Sahib, his nephew, is believed to be at this moment in the hands of the Nizam, for trial as the instigator of the late conspiracy at Hyderabad. The story of the Nana's arrest, as far as it has yet been unravelled by us, is as follows:—A few months ago two of Captain Nuttall's detectives, Dwarka Tewarree (a Jemadar of the 18th N.I.) and Gya Persand, a native of Bithoor, having quarrelled with their chief, found their way down to Bombay to Mr. Forjett, police superintendent. Having introduced themselves to this officer, they complained that Captain Nuttall was completely in the hands of his agent Guzzarshing, and that they had resigned their service in disgust at the incapacity of that officer. They affirmed that the man he had in custody as the Rao Sahib was not the Rao at all, and that if Mr. Forjett would undertake to arrest him, they knew where to lay their hands upon him, as he was at that moment in Poonah. Disbelieving their story, Mr. Forjett excused himself upon the ground that Poonah was not within his jurisdiction, and dismissed them with the charge that they should induce the Rao to come down to Bombay. The two men left for Poonah, and a few days afterwards again presented themselves at the police office, stating that they had brought the Rao as far as Khandalla, but that he absolutely refused to come below the Ghaut, and that if Mr. Forjett ever intended to take him, now was the time.

In these circumstances, Mr. Forjett we believe stretched a point, and, though Khandalla is not within his jurisdiction seized the man there, and brought him to Bombay. It now turned out that he had been befooled, the prisoner being identified in the most satisfactory manner as a citizen of Poonah for some years. He had therefore to be quietly released, and a sop given him by the Government to keep him quiet. There would seem some reason to think that the two spies were merely seeking to make a diversion in favour of the real Simon Pure, captured by Nuttall's police; and that failing in this, they determined to eclipse the arrest of the Rao Sahib, by denouncing no less than the Nana himself. Accordingly, they gave Mr. Forjett to understand that the Nana was in the neighbourhood of Jeypore, and that if deputed by the Government to do so, they were prepared to betray him. Distrusting their statement, Mr. Forjett nevertheless communicated it to the Chief Secretary; and Sir Bartle Frere at once determined that whether groundless or not, it should be acted upon. These two men were accordingly despatched to Rajpootana a month or six weeks ago, in company with two of our own detectives: and the seizure of the Nana has been made, we learn, by these men tracking him from Saloomba to Poorkha. It is of course impossible to divest one's mind of the suspicion, that as they humbugged us in the one case, so they may also have done in the other; but there are not wanting in the present instance several circumstances that point very strongly to an opposite conclusion.

What, however, we ask, in the name of common sense, is Major Davidson doing all this time, that he leaves us in so much uncertainty? Beyond the most loose and scanty account of the man's arrest, and the expression of his own "moral conviction" that he has the Nana, he has nothing whatever to tell us about him. Not a deposition seems to have been taken from any party as to the circumstances of the arrest; not a word as to the account the prisoner gave of himself; not a letter upon the thousand points of enquiry that suggest themselves. The agent seems to have lost his mind, as well as the Nana his liberty. All he seems able to do is to keep telling the Government that he has got the prisoner safe, and to flourish the prison keys in our eyes. Has he lost his senses from the magnitude of the arrest? Is he afraid to open the prisoner's cage, to ask him who he is, lest he should fly away? What account does the man give of himself? What account do the detectives give? What do the spies say? At the time we write, Government knows no more, we believe, than the public does. It was Major Davidson's duty within twenty-four hours to lay full particulars of all the circumstances of the arrest, and depositions of all the parties concerned, before the Government. He has had the man in prison three weeks, and does nothing but reiterate that he has a "moral conviction" he is the Nana. The Government can well understand the public anxiety upon the subject, and, we trust, will do something to relieve it, by relieving Major Davidson of his charge. As we stated at the opening of this notice, the Nizam is believed to have the Rao Sahib in custody, and we are, in all probability, close to the final act of the great Indian rebellion.

DETAILED ACCOUNT.

About February last three men were sent to Mr. Forjett, Superintendent of the Bombay Police, by Captain Nuttall, Superintendent of the Sholapore Police, for the purpose of giving information regarding the presence in Bombay of certain leaders in rebellion during the late mutinies. These men, however, quarrelled among themselves, and were sent back by Mr. Forjett, but shortly afterwards two of the said three men returned to Bombay, accompanied by two others, who gave information regarding the man supposed to be the "Rao Sahib" of the Hyderabad conspiracy.

The first mentioned two men, Dwarka Tewarry and Gyapashod (or Gya Persaud), informed Mr. Forjett that there was a man in a temple at Poona in the guise of an ascetic, Purshotum Bhut by name, who had been the Nana's pundit at Bithoor, with whom Gyapashod was well acquainted. That the said Gyapashod was a native of Cawnpore, and had frequently done business with the Nana and Purshotum Bhut, and that on meeting the latter accidentally at Poona a recognition immediately took place, and the Nana became the subject of conversation, when Purshotum Bhut mentioned in confidence that the Nana was then living in a temple at Jypoor, where he had been about six months, having come there from Nepal.

On receipt of this information, Mr. Forjett suggested to Mr. L. Anderson, Secretary to Government, that the political officers at Jypoor, &c., be written to secretly on the subject; and that he (Mr. Forjett) should be allowed to despatch the men in search. Accordingly Dwarka Tewarry, jemadar of the 18th Regt. Native Infantry, and Gyapashod, accompanied by three of Mr. Forjett's detectives, were despatched from Bombay, the jemadar being furnished with letters to Colonel Brook, political agent at Jypoor, and other local authorities.

On the 24th ult., about four in the afternoon, a man bearing the outward appearance of a fuker came into Colonel Davidson's court at Ajmeer, and requested a private interview with that officer. This was granted, and the man having produced his credentials in the shape of the letters above referred to, proceeded to explain that he was Dwarka Tewarry, jemadar of the 5th N.I.; that he had been employed for some time on secret service by Mr. Forjett, of the Bombay Police; that, in company with the detectives and Gyapashod, he had joined the Nana near Saloomba, and had arrived with the Nana in Ajmeer about one hour previously. He then indicated the mundah [Hindoo temple] in which the whole party were about putting up, which was only 300 yards from the court. The man was in a great hurry to depart, fearing his absence might be noticed, and begged Colonel Davidson not to attempt any capture till evening; and it was, therefore, hurriedly settled that the place should be surrounded at night. From some reason or other which does not transpire, Colonel Davidson closed his court an hour or so earlier than usual; and about seven in the evening the jemadar again made his appearance, and stated that the Nana, from hearing a number of persons who came to the mundah talking among themselves of the court being closed so early, at once took alarm, and determined to remove, which he immediately did. The jemadar, not knowing Ajmeer, could not give any clear description as to where the Nana had gone, but said it was by a khoond (a bye path), and there are many khoonds around. On learning this, instead of surrounding the mundah with troops as had been previously proposed, Colonel Davidson, Lieut. Repton, Captain Brodigan, with Mr. Bowyer, inspector of police, proceeded quietly in the direction the Nana was supposed to have gone; but on searching the supposed hiding-place, no traces of the party could be discovered. They then searched the mundahs and musjids around, but without success. It was then proposed to search the mundah where it was known the Nana had originally been. For this purpose Lieut. Repton and Mr. Bowyer left, while Colonel Davidson and Captain Brodigan continued to search the neighbourhood of the khoond near the old Tuhseel. Colonel Davidson descended some steps leading into a dark arch, when suddenly the jemadar came out, and on Colonel Davidson asking who he was, gave the pre-concerted answer, "We are so and so, and that is the pundit;" the person he was to point out as pundit being the Nana. He was immediately seized and handcuffed, and two other men then taken, who turned out to be one Naroo Punt and a blind priest. The whole were then taken to the magazine and searched, after which they were left in charge of a European guard till morning.

On the morrow the descriptive roll of the Nana having been procured, a comparison was instituted, and all were struck with the resemblance. The supposed Nana allowed himself to be a Dekhanny Brahmin; his age appears forty-three or forty-four, but he states he is forty-five. His complexion is fair, excepting where bronzed by exposure. He swears he has been wandering as a fuker for twenty-eight years, having spent most of the time in Cashmere; but his feet and hands do not give evidence of any past hardships or rough usage, such as would be the consequence of constant walking.

A strong force of Europeans is now in Ajmeer, as it was within the bounds of probability that a rescue might have been attempted by some of the budmashes [rabble], or disaffected rajahs who appear to have harboured the Nana. He is, however, quite safe, and none but Europeans are permitted to approach him; a threatened obstinacy as regarded taking food being overcome by an intimation that it would be forced upon him.

DEPOSITION OF THE "BLIND BRAHMIN." Evidence of Gopaljee, Deekanee Brahmin, blind from infancy, native of Wassein, near Hyderabad. Taken at Ajmeer, July 11.

"About three years ago I went to Dwarka, and being blind, a man from each village took me to the next. I remained at Dwarka fifteen days, when the other two prisoners arrived, and put up in the same mundah. I asked who they were, and they said they were Brahmins. On the second day the man, who is the Nana, asked me to accompany them, saying that they would take care of me. I consented, and the Nana told me his name was Appa. He told me to say we were three brothers, and on the second day disclosed himself as the Nana. We stayed at Dwarka another fifteen days. He did not reveal himself to the populace, but took me with him to the different mundahs, begging. When we left Dwarka we went to Kutch Bhooj, and remained four months, as the Rao's daughter's marriage was being celebrated. We had an interview with the Rao as beggars, and he gave us Rs. 15. From Kutch we went to Kurrachee, and put up with a subedar of a regiment, by name Bhya, a Mahratta. We remained there two months, begging from the sepoys. Conversation about the English raj was constant, but not in a derogatory way by the sepoys, and the Nana did not make himself known. When we left Kurrachee we went to Hyderabad in Scinde, and put up with a subedar by name Marmuttoo, a native of the Madras Presidency. We passed off as fukers, and from thence went to Sukkur and Shikarpore, and from thence to Mooltan, where we remained two months, and the Nana and I went among the sepoys, but only passed as beggars. From Mooltan we went to Bhahawalpoor, where we stayed a month, putting up in a mundah with one Ramlal, Brahmin. While we travelled the Nana used to talk of the battles during the mutinies, and that although he lost them he would have another chance before long. From Bhahawalpoor we went to Rawul Pindee. I stayed at Rawul Pindee with a Brahmin, named Soobayee, and the Nana and Narroo went to Cashmere, via Lahore and Umritsir. He went to Cashmere with a view of getting aid from the ruler. The Nana and Narroo Punt returned to Rawul Pindee in eight or ten months. He said it was arranged for him to get aid from Cashmere. He said Narroo and himself had lost their teeth from drinking snow-water in Cashmere. From Rawul Pindee we went to Peshawur, and stayed there nearly a year. The Nana had frequent interviews with the native officers of the force. The talk was that when Dost Mahomed died there would be a disturbance; and while there Dost Mahomed came to Peshawur with a son called Hyder, and the Nana had an interview with him. Hyder got service under the British. From Peshawur we went to Nowshera, where the Nana had an interview with a Colonel Dunraj. From Nowshera we went to Attock, where the Nana had an interview with a Subedar, Bowanee Sing, belonging to the regiment there on duty, but I do not know the number. We then went to Hazara, where there was a Rusassah. We then went to Sirsa, Singrade, and on to Bikaneer, where Tania Rao was, who lived in a garden with ten sowars. The Nana told the Bikaneer Rajah he must take great care of the Tania Rao, which he promised to do. The Nana was entertained by the Rajah, whom he asked for aid, telling him Scindiah, and Holkar, and the Cashmere people would support him. The Rajah said, 'Scindiah and Holkar are your servants, but I must aid those who hold Delhi.' From thence we came to Nagare, from thence to Patee, from thence to Dundwarra, and on to Ramghur and Kishenghur, where the Rajah went to meet the Burra Sahib (General Lawrence, Governor-general's Agent for Rajpootena) at Surwar last cold weather. We remained a month at Kishenghur, passing as Brahmins. The Rajah gave us money (Rs. 10), but he did not know it was the Nana. We then went to Nusseerabad, and put up in a mundah. The Nana knew a native doctor, a Brahmin, at Nusseerabad, who gave intelligence. Ettoo, Mussoo Punt, and Bulwunt Punt at Nusseerabad gave us money in charity, but I am not aware that any of these people knew the Nana. From Nusseerabad we went to Oodeypoor, staying on the way at several places, in none of which they knew it was the Nana. At Oodeypoor we remained two nights, and then went to Saloomba. The thakoor there entertained us in great style, and knew it was the Nana Sahib of Bithoor. Tania Topee, the Rao Sahib, and the Begum of Lucknow are living at Saloomba. Tania Topee was not hanged, but another man named Tania. There is collected at Saloomba a large force, from 12,000 to 15,000 men, a great portion of whom are Poorbeas. We remained fifteen days at Saloomba. The thakoor wanted the Nana to remain all the rains, but he would not do so. The Awah Thakoor Koushal Shing is also at Saloomba. There guns and ammunition are also ready for a disturbance, but I do not know if the time is fixed for it to begin. The Dusseerah was talked of, and although it may be delayed there will be an outbreak. The Awah Thakoor is very anxious to regain Awah. The Nana did not wish a disturbance so early as the Dusseerah, but said when they did begin he would be ready. The Nana left Saloomba to come to Pokur. The Rajah of Saloomba and the Awah Thakoor escorted the Nana with a large force almost to Chittore, where they left. We then came on with a small tattoo as fukers, and at Bheelwarra we were joined by the four informers, and came to Buneera, where Gowind Singh is thakoor. Subedar, or Jemadar, Kora Singh lives at Buneera. The Rao Sahib induced the thakoor to keep him. He gets Rs. 5 per month, food, and two servants.

From Buneera we went to Assin, where the Nana had an interview with the thakoor in the garden. Where the Nana goes about as a fukeer the thakoor do not receive him in state, although they know who he is. All Rajpootana knew him wherever he went. From Assin we came to Budwar, and then through Kurwur to Ajmere, where we were caught. At Assin the thakoor had a number of arms collected. The Nana has left his family with the Ram Rajah, with whom he has left 80 lacs."

The foregoing evidence agrees very closely with that of the spies published below. We are informed that the prisoners have been kept strictly separate, and are not permitted to communicate with any natives whatever. The blind priest offered his evidence against the Nana, hoping thereby to screen himself.

DEPOSITION OF GYA PERSAUD.

Statement of Gya Persaud, Brahmin, of Zillah Cawnpoor, village Bharontee, on solemn affirmation.

"I was a resident of Cawnpoor, but at the time of the mutiny in '57 I had a shop at Saugor. At the time of the mutiny at Burhampoor, I proceeded from Cawnpoor to Saugor to join my shop. After the mutiny at Saugor my property was put in the fort, but I remained in the Sudder Bazaar; my shop was known by the name of Davideen's, who was my father's uncle. When the sahib loque (the English) all entered the fort, the country population poured into the cantonments, and plundered everything. Davideen ran away and made for Cawnpoor, and on the way fell in with the Nana's force. He, to escape, left the road and went to Nustulgher, on the Ganges, and died there of cholera. My grandmother and other female relatives after some time reached our village of Bharontee. After this all our property in our village was plundered by the Nana's force, and my grandfather was killed. At the time Davideen left Cawnpoor I escaped to Mhow by Bhilsa. When General Rose's force arrived at Mhow I joined it, and went with it to Saugor. I was employed in the commissariat, and accompanied the troops to Jhansie, when Major Campbell, Bazaar Master, made me his treasurer. I ultimately accompanied the force to Gwalior, and remained there a year and a-half as bazaar chowdree. At the end of that time I resigned my berth, and returned to my village of Bharontee. I there found all my property and houses destroyed, and after the stay of a month proceeded to Benares, where I determined to hunt up the Nana. Hearing he had gone to Nepal, I turned for that purpose a fukeer, and travelled all through Western India for a long period, as I knew Tantia Topee and others were about in the Baroda direction. At the time of the Hoolee, in 1862, I arrived in Bombay, and after staying there five months heard that Captain Nuttall, the police officer at Sholapoor, was hunting up the rebels, so I went to him at Sholapoor, and saw him. He joined with me, for the purpose of obtaining information, Jemadar Dwarka Tewarry, of the 8th Regiment B.N.I. At Sholapoor I fell in with one Hindoo Chobee, who wore a dress similar to what is worn in Nepal. I joined him as a fukeer, and he informed me that the Nana had left Nepal with other chiefs of the rebellion, and had come towards Sind, and that he himself was getting information of the feeling of the people. He also told me the Rao Sahib lived at Poona, and I went with him to that place. We then fell in with a Brahmin, by name Pershotum Blut, who after a time, on hearing I was a staunch friend of the Nana, gave me hopes of an interview with Kishen Rao. After a few days I saw Kishen Rao; I then wrote to the jemadar at Sholapoor that Kishen Rao was concealed at Poona, and the jemadar and Captain Nuttall joined me. Captain Nuttall would not believe me when I told him the real Kishen Rao was in Poona. I, therefore, left Poona and went to Bombay to Mr. Forjett, to whom I told all. He told me to go and get pukka [certain] intelligence, as the man Captain Nuttall had previously captured as Kishen Rao could not be convicted. I then returned to Poona, and from thence to Sholapoor; and again I wrote to Captain Nuttall and told him Kishen Rao was at Poona. He still was doubtful, but sent with me two men of his own who had seen Kishen Rao at Hyderabad in the Deccan. We returned to Poona, and the two men were satisfied as to the identity of Kishen Rao. We then went to Bombay to Mr. Forjett, who gave me a paper and sent me back to Poona with orders to seize Kishen Rao; but at Khandalla I recognised Kishen Rao travelling towards Bombay, whom we seized and delivered to the bazaar master at Khandalla. I then told Mr. Forjett good intelligence of the Nana being at Jypoor. He replied that as I had caught Kishen Rao he would give me letters for the purpose of catching the Nana. Accordingly Jemadar Dwarka and myself left Bombay and went to Burhampoor, where we fell in with three of the Nana's Brahmins doing poaja (religious ceremonies) for him. I told them I had authority from the Arabs and others in Hyderabad to treat with the Nana for a rising in that direction, and wanted to find him to make arrangements to exterminate the British rule. For some time they would not give any information; but on my telling them I knew Kishen Rao, and promising to give them Rs. 600 if I met the Nana, one of the Brahmins took the jemadar and myself to Indore to the brother of the Jaora Nawab. I gave the Brahmin Rs. 600 on the security of another, to be repaid if I did not reach the Nana. We were escorted by some Mussulmans to Jaora, and from thence two men, one in the garb of a fukeer and the other dressed as a bheestie [carrier of water], started with us towards Saloomba. We remained three miles from the town, and the bheestie went into it, and on returning told us we should see the Nana pass. Soon after about 100 sowars [horsemen] and about 150 foot came from the town. We were afraid to present ourselves before the Nawab's attendants, who appeared to have come out to escort the Nana towards Bikaner. We followed the cavalcade at a distance, and reached Chittore, where the cavalcade left the Nana. When the escort went back, only three men appeared a head with small tattoos [horses], and the bheestie told me one of these men was the Nana. We followed the Nana to Sangannaree, at which place the detective and myself overtook the Nana's party and asked where they were going. They replied to Dwarka; we said we were also going there, and would be glad to accompany them. The Nana then said he was going to Pokar, and I replied we would also go that way. As we drew near Nusseerabad, the Nana objected to go by the road, and said if we wished to accompany him we must go through the jungles. We went, and then got more friendly with him; but he searched us, and I concealed the two letters in my dhotie. He asked several times who we were, and I replied at last that I had known him at Bithoor, that I had lost my all on his account, and was now wandering about, endeavouring to restore him, and that I had authority from many people in the south, and had arranged to raise 4,000 men if he would return to Poona. He replied he could not go to Poona, as he was going to Bikaner to meet Tantia Topee, and that the Begum of Awah and Madho were at Saloomba; also the Gondah Rajah and Goorboom Sing of Oude.

"He then invited us to accompany him to Bikaner, the rajah of which place had promised him assistance. He said all Rajpootana was on his side, and that at the dusserah he would again be at the head of a force and burn the cantonment of Nusseerabad, and after that Poona! I suggested, before attempting anything, he should worship at Ajmeer. He agreed, and we went to Ajmeer, but when he heard of the court breaking up sooner than usual, he appeared anxious, and determined to leave. I persuaded him simply to move to some other point. The Deputy-Commissioner captured with him Naroo Punt Bhalla Punt, and a blind man that accompanied the Nana to give the party more the appearance of fukeers. The Nana said in conversation that he had been well taken care of by the ruler of Cashmere, and had come down via Sind and Kutch, where the Rao had given him Rs. 50,000; but the Nana told him he wanted men, not money, which not obtaining after fifteen days he went to the territory of the Ram Rajah, where the Nana's wife and children are. At this place the Nana's attendant, with the cut ear, Chinnun Singh, is also. The Nana said he had given his children eighty lacs of rupees for their subsistence. Naroo Punt Bhalla Punt told us he had been agent for the Nana with the Bareilly force, and was also at Calpee with Tantia. The real Tantia is alive in Bikaner, and the man hanged by Major Meade was a Brahmin also named Tantia. The Bikaner Raja allows him a guard of sowars, and has promised not to deliver him to the British. 5,000 of the old Bengal Sepoys are at Saloomba, and Tantia Topee's force, to the number of 40,000 men, are in the service of one or other of the independent States ready to rise on the first opportunity. The dusserah [a Hindoo festival, falling this year on the 21st October] was fixed for the time of a rising, and the force to be divided into three parts—one to pay off the Patalia Rajah, one for Nusseerabad, and one for the Deccan.

"I personally know the Nana and Bala Rao, but I do not know Tantia Topee. The Nana states that, from drinking the water in the jungles, he lost his front teeth, and his hair has become white. I do not know any particular marks on his person, but I saw him constantly at Bithoor, and he is not easily forgotten: his face is much thinner, his cheeks not so fat, and the hair on his face alters his appearance. His stomach is not so large as it was; but there is no mistaking his face, his eyes, his forehead, and powerful voice. I don't know Naroo Punt myself, only from what he has stated himself; he is most vicious against the English. He is generally called Narroobah, and the Nana is called Appajee Sahib, and the blind man Seedraj. He is only made use of as a blind to the public. All the thakoor (land-owners) and most of the rajahs of the independent States are hand and glove with the Nana. Heera Singh, an old general of the Nana's, is at Buncerah. Numbers of pundits and Brahmins are located in all the States, who do nothing but forward intelligence and pray for the destruction of the British rule. At Nusseerabad a Brahmin named Itoo, who is employed in a government office, and writes English and Persian, went out to see the Nana when he passed Nusseerabad. A native doctor also gives information, also a Brahmin from the Deccan.

"We are now afraid for our lives, and beg we may be taken care of. The Secretary to the Bombay Government told us, if we were successful in catching the Nana, or Tantia, to get the first British officer to make arrangements for our welfare."

On the Nana hearing this evidence, and being confronted with the witness, he became in a violent rage, and declared the Nana was dead long ago, and that the news of the event had reached him at Cashmere. He also asked, if he was, indeed, the Nana, what would be the use for him to deny it, as there must be plenty of people in Cawnpoor and other places who could readily prove his identity. He will not, however, state of what village he is really a native, but contents himself by asserting he is a Dekhany Brahmin.

Statement of Sergeant-major Charles Wilkins, A Battalion 4th Brigade R.A., Nusseerabad, formerly of the 14th Light Dragoons at Meerut.

"While at Meerut I constantly saw the Nana Sahib, and have very frequently spoken to him. The person I saw to-day in the magazine I feel convinced is he. He is, of course, very much changed in appearance, but the form and style of his features are exactly those of the Nana. He also states that, while standing near the prisoner, he was detailing to Inspector Bowyer the circumstance of Captain Chamberlain, of the 14th Dragoons, having been in the constant habit of riding the Nana's horses, and that directly the above officer's name was mentioned, the prisoner gave a start; and again when relating an episode of his, the Nana having taken at Meerut an English-woman into his keeping who belonged to the 14th Dragoons, the prisoner again gave a start, and looked hard at him."

Certificate of Dr. Murray, Civil Surgeon, Ajmeer.

"This is to certify, that I have examined a prisoner in the magazine who is said to be the Nana, and I find that he has the mark of a small wound or cut on the anterior portion of the first phalanx of the second toe of the right foot. The cicatrix is little more than half an inch long, and as fine as a horse-hair; it is slightly oblique, and is precisely the sort of mark that would be made with a lancet or a fine bistoury. There is a small cicatrix on the lower part of the lobe of the right ear. The prisoner is an intellectual looking man, with remarkably full, round, large eyes; he answers in nearly every particular to the published description of the Nana."

Deposition of Ittoo, or Witoba, Brahmin, of Bombay, who resides at Nusseerabad.

"I came to Ajmeer on the 23rd with a picnic party from Nusseerabad. The party consisted of certain non-commissioned officers, all of whom are members of a club called the 'Staff Quadrille Club,' which I joined some time back. I don't know any Brahmin native doctor at Nusseerabad; Ramjee, a Mahratta native doctor, is at Nusseerabad. In February of the present year two men came from Krishnagur; one was a blind man and one with large eyes. They came to my house two or three times for charity, and at last walked up stairs without leave, and I and my brother turned them out. They stayed some time, and received charity from all the bunnas in Nusseerabad. I considered them impostors, not real Brahmins. I don't know the Nana, and no messengers come to my house. I can't write English and Mahratta; there is no one who writes Persian in my house. I have not written to any one except my brother in Bombay about some accounts. I joined the quadrille club, and dance for my own amusement. I dance the polka, quadrille, lancers, and Caledonians. I am a married man, but my family do not go to the dances. I have been in the Commissariat since 1850, and came to Nusseerabad in April, 1859, where I have been ever since."

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.]

DEESA, July 10.

There was a rumour about, which, perhaps, has no truth in it, that a force would be moved from this towards Jeypoor to look after some of the Nana's companions who are supposed to be in that locality. If our Europeans do catch any of those gentlemen, they are in a humour to make very short work of them. The hatred evinced towards the Nana by the European soldiers is most virulent.

NUSSEERABAD, July 13.

All the circumstances surrounding the capture of the Nana tend to confirm the belief that the right man has been taken this time. We have not heard in what direction he goes on leaving this, although most likely it will be to the scene of his sanguinary exploits, Cawnpore. It is reported that the "country" is preparing to rise in his behalf—a report which is considered to be utterly without foundation. I don't believe myself the Rajpootana people feel any interest in him—not enough, at least, to seek an application of British bullets. If, however, they are rash enough to attempt a diversion in his favour, they will find us quite prepared.

I think I told you one of the party is a blind man. When questioned, the only reply that could be obtained from him was, "What he says, I say;" but two days since he turned Queen's evidence, and told all he knew, which in substance amounts to this: That he had no connection with the party beyond acting as a "blind" to the real character of the individuals. He confirms much of Gypersaud's statement, and says the man we have taken is the veritable Nana. I hear, but cannot vouch for the correctness of the report, that the Nana is very ill.

NEEMUCH, June 30.

Major Davidson, the commissioner at Ajmere, reports that he really believes he has the real Nana under his clutches. Captain Brodigan, of the 28th, has the merit of being the first to lay hands on him. He was assisted by Capt. Gleigson and a sergeant, as also by two native spies, who traced the Nana to a temple near Ajmere. This was on the 22nd inst. The informant declares it is the real Nana, and adds that Tantia Topce is still alive, for the Nana was on his way to Bikhaneer to meet him. Strange, then, that a wrong man should have been hung. The marks in the ear and the wound in the foot have been recognised in the Nana. The Saloomber business (of which you have already heard) would seem to have had some foundation if the spies who have been useful in catching the Nana can be believed, for they say that at Saloomber it was all arranged that 5,000 budmashes should first destroy the Europeans in Nusseerabad and Neemuch, and burn these places, after which the native troops were to be induced to rebel, and with their assistance the Nana was to pay a visit to Peona! There are two other fellows caught: one of these is of no moment; "he is blind and can't see," as Paddy Blake would say. The other is a notorious character, no less than Nana Punt, who commanded 5,000 cavalry during the whole of the mutinies. The informants further depose, that up to within three miles of Ajmere, the Nana was accompanied by 300 cavalry. He requested the company of a particular friend at Ajmere, in whose presence he seems quite reconciled. He is passionately fond of music, and is always humming some favourite tune; accompanying himself with snaps of his right-hand fingers. He sleeps soundly during the day, but seems much disturbed after dark. He is fond of exercise, and is generally walking about. His style of conversation is short, quick, and to the point. An experienced photographer has taken his likeness, which, with and without his hirsute appendages, meet the description given of him. He has been recognised by the sergeant-major of the Horse Artillery at Nusseerabad (who knew him at Lahore) as the right man, who seems, at last, to be in the right place. The fort of Ajmere has been reinforced by a strong detachment. After the rains (the roads now are impassable) he will be sent to the Presidency, when you will have an opportunity of describing his personal appearance. The few papers found among his kit (he travelled very light) are being translated. Some of them, however, cannot be deciphered; they are written in characters not known to orientalists. The Nana, among his other accomplishments, knows shorthand, and has a key of his own, and until the spies can put us in possession of this, the papers, of course, are useless.

A strong party, consisting of the principal officers of the station, is about to start for Ajmere directly there is a break in the weather.

Colonel Petrie is expected in to-day to inspect the Artillery. What between two half-yearly inspections by the Brigadier, two more such overhauls by the Colonel-commanding, a yearly review by the General, and an occasional visit by the Chief, I should say this arm of the service get quite enough of inspections. "More drill the better; more parades the better"—so say your stiff commanders. A good soldier, who knows what soldiering practically is, is of a different opinion; he thinks that having parades and inspections oftener than necessary only sickens the soldier instead of teaching him his duty, which he can learn just as well and with a better feeling with less punishment; for parades, when unnecessary, are only looked upon as punishment.

RAJPOOTANA, July 4.

It is reported eight or ten individuals have been captured in the city of Ajmere, having in their possession a large amount of coin for the purposes of the Nana Sahib and his friends; it is also stated the Nana himself at the period of his capture had no less than five different kinds of deadly poison on his person. During the mutinies a large number of budmashes and pandies escaped into the Bhikaneer and Saloomber districts, and it is now said those two localities have become a general rendezvous for these characters. It is quite certain the Saloomber Rajah has been long harbouring the Nana's gang, and it is well a force was not sent out last year, as proposed, against this Rajpootana chieftain. Had such been the case, the gang now captured would probably have withdrawn, and we might not have secured them. It may, perhaps, be recollected that about October last year a rumour was prevalent that forces from Mhow, Neemuch, and Nusseerabad received orders to hold themselves in readiness to proceed against Saloomber. The cause of this anticipated movement arose out of a quarrel between the Odeypoor durbar and the Saloomber chief, the former of whom we were by treaty bound to support. It being understood, however, that the British forces would soon be in motion, the Saloomber Rajah made a verbal amende, probably influenced in this course by the knowledge that he could not harbour the Nana's gang with the "Sirkar's" army in front. However this may be, one thing is very certain, that a British detachment should be immediately despatched to the neighbourhoods of Saloomber and Bhikaneer. If the Rajpoot chiefs are to be allowed to harbour rebels and murderers, and escape scot-free, the future state of Rajpootana will be worse than the past. It cannot, however, be imagined that this will be suffered to come to pass. The attention of the Supreme Government will doubtless be more immediately directed to affairs in Rajpootana; and while making an example of those chiefs who may be proved to have given asylum to outlaws, it will be easy to make such alterations in existing treaties as will effectually prevent much of the confusion which at present exists.

Should troops be moved out against Saloomber and Bhikaneer, little opposition is to be apprehended at either place. The former would, probably, be the most difficult to approach, as it is surrounded by more or less dense jungle. Bhikaneer is situated on the borders of the desert tracts, and although a walled city, could not hold out against an European force. The probability, however, is that both these chiefs would give themselves up on the approach of a British force, and endeavour to save themselves by a disregard of truth. It will be an inglorious yet troublesome expedition for our troops, although none the less required on that account. Let us, however, do the business effectually, and establish a new era of improvement in Rajpootana.

RAJPOOTANA, July 5.

It appears the capture of the Nana is directly owing to the hatred cherished against him by one Naru Punt, a native of Bithoor, some of whose relatives were destroyed by the supposed order of the Nana during the mutinies. This man, accompanied by Mr. Forjett's policemen, joined the Nana when the latter was leaving Jeypoor, and introduced himself as an agent of the Arabs of the Deccan, who, he reported, were ready to aid the Nana. On arrival at Ajmere the party took up their abode in a temple near the kutcherry, but afterwards, in consequence of such dangerous proximity, retired to another building of the kind further away, in which they were taken by Colonel Davidson. It is stated the real Tantia Topce is now in one of the Rajpootana States.

The personal appearance of the Nana is described as corresponding with his appearance of a few years since in every particular, excepting that his hair is now grey instead of black, and the front teeth are gone, which he explains as the effect of the snow water in Cashmere during the twenty years he was a "jogee" there. He strongly denies that he is the Nana, although both his foot and ear are marked in the peculiar manner in which the Nana's were known to be. He states also that for twenty years he has never seen an European, but when excited and talking fast both speech and gesture betray him as one who has been much associated with the "Sahib logue." His feet and hands prove the falsity of his story of having been a pilgrim for many years, neither showing the least evidence of hardships having been undergone. Moreover, several natives have come forward who are prepared to give evidence against him.

It is also reported that he has agents in almost every station in India, and was in daily receipt of verbal news therefrom, conveyed to him by messengers, generally in the guise of fukeers.

LIBEL CASE AT SIMLA.

SIMLA, July 6.—In my former letters I mentioned to you that we have in Simla a small weekly paper called the Advertiser, belonging to Mr. Mahony, and this is the journal which was last week prosecuted for libel on account of publishing two letters full of scandal. These letters were signed "Paul Pry" and "Vindex," and the tenour of their import was that one Mr. R. U. Cosen (some time ago one of the Municipal Commissioners of Bombay, according to his own account in court, and now employed by Major Goad as keeper of his racket court and billiard rooms) was guilty of stealing the letters missed by Captain Andrews. The damages were fixed by Mr. Cosen at Rs. 800. The whole affair is this. In January last a letter was addressed to Captain Andrews, of a private and confidential nature, in which Major Goad's name was mentioned rather discredibly, and Mr. Cosen declares he found this letter on the 6th of May in the portico of the Assembly Rooms, or about twenty-one days after they were sold to Major Goad, and two months after Captain Andrews had left the premises. Mr. Cosen refused to deliver up this letter when called upon to do so, stating that it was Major Goad's property, as Major Goad had purchased the estate "and everything that was on it." Captain Andrews put Mr. Cosen in court for the letter, and got a decree. Mr. Cosen on the trial admitted having other letters belonging to Captain Andrews, and, strange to say, when the latter went and examined his desk all the letters addressed to him by the same writer of that found in the portico were also missing. When this second trial for libel came on, Mr. Spiers, who came up from Cawnpore, appeared for the prosecution, and the defence of the journal was entrusted to Mr. E. P. Moore, who pleaded that the letters of "Paul Pry" and "Vindex" were not libellous, inasmuch as they only contained opinions and comments upon what took place in an open court of justice, and, therefore, were entitled to exemption from prosecution under the fifth exception of Section 499 of the Penal Code. He was, however, overruled by Judge Murphy, and, therefore, under protest pleaded justification and demanded a jury. A jury was formed, consisting of Lieutenant Pogson and four of the leading merchants of Simla, and the case was thoroughly sifted. It was proved that Mr. Cosen had been an almost daily visitor at Captain Andrews' house, where he was often left by himself, and that all of a sudden his visits ceased without any assignable reason or cause; and leaving the question of the portico letter entirely out of the business, the mystery was, why were the other letters on the same subject and by the same writer the only ones missed by Captain Andrews from his bureau? In his address to the jury for the defence, Mr. Moore commenced by expressing his admiration of Mr. Cosen's coolness at coming into court to ask for a pecuniary compensation for having misconducted himself. He argued that a private letter was as much a man's property as his ring, watch, or purse, and that the fact of finding Captain Andrews' private letter, and keeping it, as he did, for his own private ends, was a violation of Section 403 of the Penal Code, and came under the heading of Criminal Misappropriation; that had Mr. Cosen instead of a letter found a ring, a watch, or a purse, on the high road which he knew belonged to Captain Andrews, and kept them as he did the letter in question, would he not be considered as guilty of theft? He concluded by desiring the jury to remember that they were deciding a question of the greatest importance to the press, as, should their verdict be in favour of the plaintiff, every journalist who ventured to print, expose, or comment upon an outrage to society such as Mr. Cosen had been guilty of, would render himself liable to punishment. After a deliberation of nearly an hour with closed doors, and with Judge Murphy to help them, the Court was re-opened, and a verdict given for the defendant. So far this was satisfactory, and Mr. Murphy, as it was late, postponed giving judgment till next day at noon. Next day came, so did the next after that, when finally, to the indignation of all, Mr. Murphy reversed the verdict of the sworn jury, gave one in favour of plaintiff with one rupee damages, and ordered defendant to pay all costs of the suit! Naturally enough all parties were exasperated.

Mr. Cosen's case and character are not much bettered by being awarded two shillings damages for being publicly called a thief, and he is going to appeal. Mr. Mahony (the defendant) is naturally indignant at having to pay a large sum in the face of the verdict in his favour given by the jury, and he is going to appeal; and the jury, furious at being made fools of and their opinions looked upon as a farce, are going to protest, I hear, against Judge Murphy's conduct, as if their verdict were not a legal one. It was his business to have pointed out the law to them before allowing them to decide upon the merits of the case before them. A prettier kettle of fish I never saw before in my life, and it now remains to be seen what Mr. Cust, the Judicial Commissioner, will say to all this.

SIMLA, July 10.

I mentioned in a former letter the case of "Coxen v. Mahony." It would appear that we are never to hear the last of it, as the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. Murphy, has taken the unusual, and (as it seems to me) the very unwise, step of reversing the verdict of the European jury; of course Mr. Murphy's conduct is to be handed up to some higher authority, as the jury decline to sit passive under the stigma of imbecility cast upon them by Mr. Murphy.

A rumour has reached me that a serious accident has happened to a party of coolies engaged in the works for the extension of the Hindostan and Thibet road; two hundred of these unfortunate men are stated to have been blown up by the accidental explosion of some gunpowder. I have no doubt, however, that the number of sufferers is greatly exaggerated, and, indeed, the whole report requires confirmation.

A great many native reports are flying about here, the least important of which is the annexation of Cashmere. One is at a loss to trace such a rumour as this to its source, unless, indeed, it emanates from the unusually large force with which Sir Hugh Rose will be accompanied on his approaching visit to the Peshawur frontier.

DECISION OF THE HIGH COURT OF CALCUTTA IN THE CASE OF HEM-NAUTH BOSE, THE CONVERT, AND DR. DUFF, THE MISSIONARY.

The following is the decision delivered by Sir Mordaunt M. Wells in this important case:—

"According to the constitution of this Court a Christian father may have asked at the hands of a Hindoo judge what a Hindoo father is now asking at the hands of a Christian judge. If I examine this child I must examine him as to his religious belief. Would such an examination give confidence to natives, for whom I sit here as well as for Europeans? If an application were to be made by a Christian parent before a Hindoo judge, would any examination by the Hindoo judge as to the child's religious belief give a confidence to Christians? I do not put the slightest value upon the religious principles of this child. He may grow up a Christian, or he may again relapse into his former religion. It is impossible for me to say whether he is a real Christian at the present moment. (His lordship here quoted Sir Erskine Perry's judgment in the Queen v. Nesbitt, and continued)—supposing a child were sent to England for his education, and the educational establishment came into the hands of the Mormons, would a court of justice refuse to deliver the child up to its Christian parents? The child in the present instance does not keep away from his home because he is subjected to ill-treatment, but merely because he is influenced by the teaching of the missionaries. The case of Rex v. Greenhill supports my view, and is considered a leading authority on this point. Lord Denman there says, 'There is no doubt that when a father has the custody of his children he is not to be deprived of it except under peculiar circumstances, which do not occur in this case, for although misconduct is charged to Mr. Greenhill there is nothing proved against him which has ever been held sufficient ground for removing children from their father.' And further on Lord Denman says:—"When an infant is brought before the Court by habeas corpus, if he be of an age to exercise a choice, the Court leaves him to elect where he will go. If he be not of that age, and a want of direction would only expose him to dangers and seductions, the Court must make an order for his being placed in proper custody. The only question then is, what is the proper custody? and that undoubtedly is the custody of the father." The case came before the Court of Queen's Bench more than twenty years after in the matter of Thomas Hakewell, 11. Com. Bench 223, where it is quoted by Mr. Justice Cresswell, who says: "It has been held, in King v. Greenhill, that the father is entitled to the custody of his children to the exclusion of their mother, although they be within the age of nurture; and that, where a child is in the custody of the mother, the Court will compel her to deliver it into the custody of the father, unless it appear to the Court that the child will be improperly restrained or its morals contaminated by being placed in the father's custody." A mother's claim is ten thousand times preferable to the rights of missionaries. The rights of missionaries are insignificant in comparison to the rights of a parent. The influence of a parent is much better than the influence of a missionary. I know these gentlemen who are now before me, and recognise as much as any man their usefulness; but at the same time I cannot help saying they are most indiscreet. I must decide this case in reference to the actual state of the law, and the judgment of Sir Erskine Perry embodies that law. This decision he sent home to Mr. Justice Patteson for his opinion, on account of the opposite and conflicting decisions of the Courts of Calcutta and Madras. His opinion is priceless, for not only was it the opinion of a learned lawyer, but of a man of strong religious convictions. Mr. Justice Patteson says that a father is entitled to the custody of his child even after the age of fourteen years. That dictum from a learned judge so cautious shows how strong the law is, and clearly shows that no one should be allowed to stand between a child and his parent; and Lord Campbell also has decided that the father is the proper person to have the custody of his child to be educated in his religion; and I am of the same opinion, whether his religion be the Greek, Mahomedan, Hindoo, or Christian. With the greatest respect for the character of the learned and reverend gentlemen, Dr. Duff and his associates, I think they have acted wrongly in not sending back the child to its parents, and I therefore now direct that he be given up to his father."

The child was thereupon given up to the custody of his father.

IN THE CIVIL COURT, LUCKNOW.

BUNDAY ALI v. DR. CANNON.

Claim, Rs. 1,000 damages for assault and battery.

JUDGMENT.—The rule here is that the finding of a majority of a jury is conclusive to all questions of fact; but nothing is said as to how the court is to deal with such questions of opinion as properly fall within the proper province of a jury, and result in nothing more than an assessment of damages. In the present case there were four findings by six persons. I have, therefore, taken the average of the four different sums denoted by them, and decree accordingly.

In this case we have had a special jury of European and Native gentlemen, but of as mixed elements as possible. A civil officer of the Oudh commission; a civil-military officer of the Commissariat; an editor of an English newspaper; three Europeans; two Mahomedans of rank; one Hindoo of the mercantile community; three natives. Total, six jurors.

It would not have been proper to have had more Europeans than natives, as there was a native plaintiff and a European defendant. There could then be no uneven number for the whole, nor (if there were) on a question in which there might be a variety of findings, would it have been in anywise more certain, that, if divided, they would be so divided, as to furnish a majority for any one finding, nor would it have been judicious to have had a larger number, as it is only with great difficulty that the requisite number in any jury can be got together in a place where the European element is so sparse, and every man has so much to do.

The defendant is a gentleman in high position, having various important duties. One of these is that of master of jail-works in Oude, and one of such works is the construction of a central jail at Lucknow on which several lacs of rupees have to be expended. He burns his own bricks and uses as fuel a material well-known in the west—the desicated contents of the city cess-pools. The plaintiff contracted with the Government for the clearance of these cess-pools, and sold the contents to the defendant for his brick-kilns. The defendant and his witnesses represent the plaintiff as having always behaved in a most disrespectful manner, and of having done so with an eye to damages from the Civil Court. What brought matters to a point was the attempt to settle accounts. This took place at the house occupied by defendant and his family, and in which also he holds his public office. Plaintiffs being then on public business constituted no trespass. His side of the story is that he was to be paid only for the quantity of dirt formally measured, which was much short of the stock admittedly delivered; and yet that, because of his refusal to give an acquittance as in full of all demands, he was expelled and assaulted, without the least provocation in manner or language. The defendant's verified statement shows that an acquittance (and not a mere receipt) was demanded of plaintiff; that when ordered out of the office room, plaintiff did go out; and that he was assaulted because he remained looking in from the outside. It is also admitted that defendant called his sweeper to remove the plaintiff if he did not forthwith take himself off the premises. But there are two important circumstances urged for defendant as of an extenuating character. Being a medical officer, and at present acting also as civil surgeon of Lucknow, it appears that a lady friend in a very feeble state of health had come to reside with his family for the benefit of his professional care. It is certain that there was a great noise going on in the office room about plaintiff's business, and that a European servant maid was sent from the inner apartment to caution the people there to be quiet, plaintiff alleging that he was not aware there was a lady inside sick, and that he himself made no noise. I should myself believe the evidence, that spoke to his being noisy, and also to his knowing why quiet had been ordered. Still that was not the immediate reason for the assault. His refusal to give the "acquittance" appears to have been the offensive point in the office room, and his standing inside in (what was regarded as) an insolent attitude, which brought the maltreatment on him. As he is not alleged by defendant to have been making any noise outside, of course the sick lady was not incommode by his being there. Putting that consideration out of account the matter stands thus on defendant's own showing—that seeing plaintiff stand in a defiant attitude outside, he went out to him, boxed his ears, gave him a simple kick on his posterior, and threatened him with removal by the disgracing hands of a sweeper. This not only cannot be justified in law, but manifests a spirit which would entitle plaintiff to substantial damages. Yet considering that from plaintiff's dirty occupation, defendant might have not known the respectability of his connections, and that he held a subordinate relation to defendant, coupled with his habitual insolence, I should not, if myself sitting as a juror, have awarded very heavy damages. The plaintiff, was doubtless respectably connected with native society; but his present occupation ought to have due weight, in an estimate of the injury done to his feelings by a very slight assault, as far as personal suffering went. He wholly failed to prove that either in pocket or social privilege any real damage had been inflicted. The European members of the jury unfortunately took extreme and opposed views, and thus we have two of three votes for damages at one pice, and the third for the full claim at sixteen hundred rupees. I need hardly add that in my own view it would have been better if all these gentlemen could have agreed to discover a golden mean.

The Mahomedan gentlemen voted that Rs. 500 should be granted to the plaintiff; the Hindoo thought Rs. 5 sufficient.

I do not think a better solution of the difficulty presented by this conflict was discoverable than to allow the low votes to qualify the high ones,—that was indeed the resolution which I believe practised jurors adopt in England when they are compelled to be unanimous.

The law bound me, when the matter had been referred to a jury, to abide by their decision. The provision was in no wise affected by the nature of the issue. All that the Court had to do was to apply that provision of the law, and since the remaining provisions were not in terms applicable, to discover the method by which the discordant findings might be fairly construed into a practical result. The taking of the average gave every vote its proper effect; and in no other way could the findings have been turned to account at all. Not being at liberty to reject the findings of the jurors, if the law relating to our civil jurors is at all to operate under such circumstances, and as by general rule it would not be good policy to interfere were the discretion allowed, I must, as judge, decree more than I would, as a mere juror, think requisite; as it is, the present instance tends to confirm the remark I have frequently made, that our special juries never work so satisfactorily as our common juries. For this there are reasons that might be interesting in a theory, but are not necessary to a judgment.

DECREE.

Damages for assault and battery	Rs. 434.2.9
Costs thereon	59.8.0

"MR. THOMAS FROM INDIA."

The Bishop of Calcutta is not the only philanthropist in the field with benevolent views for the education of Christian children, whose parents are unable to send them to Europe. The competitor of the excellent prelate is the notorious Mr. Thomas, who, though his fraudulent devices have been more than once exposed, continues to pursue his base calling, trusting to the credulity, the fears, or the kindly impulses of those who have just arrived from the East. A case that has just come to our knowledge fully explains his ordinary plan of operations. Calling at a very unfashionable hour upon a lady who had very recently returned to England, he was admitted into the drawing-room on representing himself to be an old friend of her husband and her father-in-law, and his subsequent conversation disarmed suspicion. It was clear that he had seen the gentlemen in question, and that he had been himself some time in India, and his manners are described as correct and gentlemanly. His visit, however, became prolonged beyond the usual limits of a morning call, and threatened to become "a visitation," until at last the lady began to suspect that it was not "all serene," and was finally compelled to allude to her personal engagements, and to inquire if he had anything to say to her of a business nature. He then stated that he was collecting subscriptions to establish schools at the Hill Stations, and requested a donation of £10. Though somewhat alarmed, the lady preserved her presence of mind and pleaded poverty, but added that she would ask the landlady to lend her half-a-crown to pay his fare back to town—the scene being laid a few miles beyond the suburbs. Going into her bedroom she carefully put away her purse, after taking out the sum she had named, which she afterwards handed to her guest, with an expression of regret that her poverty and not her will consented to bestow so little. The fellow at once took the money, with the remark that it would not pay his expenses, but that, being a poor man, he would not refuse it—thus throwing off the mask, and showing himself in his true colours. He is, indeed, an old offender; but every ship or steamer from the East that arrives at Southampton or in the river brings him fresh victims, and provides him with "fresh fields and pastures new" in which to disport his craft and duplicity. With a view, therefore, to put the unwary on their guard, we have dwelt at this length upon one of his most recent attempts at extortion; and we would further suggest to our readers that if ever they admit to their presence an unknown "Mr. Thomas from India," they will at the same time take care to call up the policeman from the kitchen.—Bengal Hurkaru.

ANOTHER MUTINY TRIAL.

The trial of the Queen versus Zuhoo-rool Hoosein came on in the Commissioner's Court, Colonel Barrow, C.B., presiding. The following is a copy of the charge:—

(Copy.)

Criminal charge.

"I, William C. Capper, Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow, declare that there is hereby made against Zuhoor-ool-Hoosein, son of Ikram-oolah Syud, formerly a vakeel of Raja Ironee Sing, of Mithowlee:—

"First,—That before the murder of Captain Orr and others by rebels or mutineers in front of Keysurbagh at Lucknow, on or about the 10th November, 1857, and previous to the passing of the Indian Penal Code, he did at or near Mithowlee arrest or instigate the arrest of Captain Orr and party; that he was present as a leader and director at such arrest, and did as leader or as one of the leaders of the armed party escort the said party to Lucknow as prisoners, with the knowledge that such act of his would ensure or was likely to ensure the murder of the said Captain Orr and party, and that Captain Orr and others of the party were accordingly murdered, and that he, Zuhoor-ool-Hoosein, was thereby accessory before the fact to the murder of the said Captain Orr and party, and did commit murder.

"Secondly,—That he did, on or about the 21st and 27th October, 1857, escort as leader or one of the leaders of an armed body of rebels as prisoners to Lucknow, Captain Patrick Orr and other Christians, and did deliver them up to the Rebel Government, they being subsequently murdered, and was thus a leader of rebellion.

"That he has thereby committed offences punishable by the Court of Sessions, and I hereby direct that Zuhoor-ool-Hoosein be tried by the said Court on the said charge.

(Signed) "W. C. CAPPER, Deputy-Commissioner.

"Lucknow, 21st April, 1863."

Captain Orr's party consisted of himself, Sir Mountstuart Jackson, Miss Jackson, Mrs. Orr and child, Lieutenant Barnes, Sergeant-major Morton. The prisoner is defended by Mr. J. U. Sandys. He pleaded not guilty, and the prosecution has called all its witnesses excepting a native, who was not forthcoming when called, and Mrs. W. G. Rose, formerly relict of the late Capt. P. Orr, one of the parties whose murder by Ahmed-oolah Shah's troops is laid to the prisoner's charge. The trial is postponed sine die for the attendance of Mrs. Rose, who has to be subpoenaed from Calcutta. Mr. Sandys, on the part of the prisoner, objected to the reception of three letters to the address of his brothers (Alexander and Adolphus) written by the late Captain P. Orr, when a refugee in the Mithowlee district during the mutiny, on the ground that, if regarded as a dying declaration, such declaration is admissible only where the circumstances of the death are the subject of such declaration; this not being the case with the declaration in question, which only contains expressions of the writer's conviction that Zuhoor-ool-Hoosein was treacherous, and would deliver him and his party to the rebels. The authorities cited in support of this view of the case were Mead's case in 2 B and C 600, and Hutchinson's case 2 B and C 608. The court, however, ruled in favour of the reception of the declaration. Mr. Sandys also objected to the reception, as evidence, of a brochure by the said Mrs. Rose, entitled "The English Captives in Oudh," on the ground that, to render a deposition of any kind of evidence acceptable against a party, it must appear to have been taken on oath in a judicial proceeding, and that the party should have an opportunity to cross-examine the witness, citing several cases in support of his objection.

The Court allowed this objection, and decided upon subpanning Mrs. Rose, the author of the brochure, to give evidence viva voce. That is how the case stands at present.—Oudh Gazette.

TEA CULTIVATION.

The Madras Athenæum supplies us with some interesting facts in connection with the cultivation of tea in that presidency. Whilst Bengal has made such rapid progress in extending the cultivation of tea during the last ten years, Madras has been altogether stationary, and this is traceable, not to the non-adaptability of the soil, but rather to the absence of all enterprise. At present, we are told, only two plantations exist in the whole Madras presidency, although Dr. Cleghorn maintains that there are many localities adapted to the purpose, such as the Shevaroy hills, Coorg, Nundidroog, Bababodeen hills, Neilgherry hills, Pulin hills, &c., &c. Dr. Cleghorn addressed a letter to the Government of India in 1860, in which he detailed the prospects of tea cultivation in the presidency, and made many valuable suggestions. Sir Charles Wood, on the publication of this letter, expressed himself as anxious to do all he could to extend the growth of tea, and acting on a recommendation contained in the letter, sanctioned the introduction from the North-West provinces of skilled tea manufacturers, "in order to assist those who had entered on the cultivation of tea." It appears that this order was not acted upon at the time, "as it was found on enquiry that there was not a sufficient number of plants ready to be picked." The latest information relative to the cultivation is derived from the proceedings of the Madras Board of Revenue, published in the month of April of last year. From this, it appears that Dr. Macpherson called upon the Madras Government in August 1861 "to bring down manipulators of the tea leaf from the North-Western provinces, in order that Madras planters might ascertain the marketable value of tea grown in Southern India." Dr. Macpherson says—"I am acquainted with the plantations of Mr. Mann and Mr. Fisher at the Neilgherry hills and Shevaroy, and am persuaded that a correct system of manufacture is alone necessary to render the former equal, if not superior, to that grown on the lower ranges of the Himalayas." Mr. Ouchterlony, who had charge of Mr. Mann's plantation for some years, supplies much valuable data. On this gentleman's taking charge of the garden, there were twenty thousand trees, "from which leaves were picked and tea prepared to the amount of two thousand pounds weight." Repeated experiments were made by him, with a view to ascertain whether the tea produced was really a merchantable article. These trials resulted unfavourably, and Dr. Cleghorn was obliged to admit that the tea was not palatable. Mr. Ouchterlony expresses an opinion, that defective manipulation is the primary cause of this failure to produce a merchantable article. To use his own words, "There seems much reason to believe that the tea prepared from plants growing on the Neilgherries has been rendered unpalatable because of its defective manipulation; and the acid taste so constantly complained of, even when the proper leaves have been selected for the manufacture, has resulted from the want of a right manufacturing apparatus, and from the ignorance of a necessity of every particle of moisture being removed from the leaves, and of how to effect it." The produce of this plantation, however, commands a fair value in the bazaar at Ootacamund, and is used to a considerable extent by the residents. It is said to possess the peculiar property of improving with age, "and if a pinch be added to the ordinary China tea, it imparts to it a most agreeable flavour." The average yield per acre from the gardens at Coonoor has been four hundred pounds, and it is anticipated that this quantity might be increased. With respect to the amount of capital necessary to commence with, four hundred rupees per acre is held to be sufficient. Our contemporary is not at all disheartened by the fact that the produce of Mr. Mann's plantation has hitherto been of poor quality, and consoles himself with the reflection "that the first essay at tea making by Chinamen imported by Mr. Fortune, in the Himalayas, was a dead failure, having the objectionable Ankoy flavour." The attention of some enterprising speculators is at present directed to the Neilgherry hills, "where land admirably adapted for the growth of tea is said to be obtainable."

COLONISATION IN THE HILLS.

A recent author remarks:—"If colonisation, as America and Australia were colonised, were possible in this country, some instances of the kind would have already occurred. But the melancholy truth is, the European race dies out. Of the numerous pensioners who have settled at our principal military stations, how many have been colonists? There is not a single instance! There is not a great grand-child, or grand-child of these pensioners, retaining their European characteristics. An infusion of native blood is essential to the continuance of the species, and the barrier once broken down, the remoter descendants of a European ancestor become rapidly feeble, astute, passionate, and indolent, as any of the darker races around them."

The colonisation of India is an almost hopeless problem, even upon the Hill ranges; but it was with sincere pleasure that we found much relating to this subject latterly brought forward in the "Report on the Extent and Nature of the Sanitary Establishments for European Troops in India," published in Calcutta in March last. This selection from Government records contains the reports of various officers who have recently explored the hill ranges of Bengal and the North-West. Unlike a former selection, published two or three years back, devoted to "Hill Sanitaria" already existing, the present volume contains, chiefly, a description of hitherto unknown localities.

Children furnish the most delicate test of the salubrity of any place. This is demonstrated by the Registrar-General's returns, in which it is shown that the mortality of children in crowded towns is some three times greater than the death rate which obtains in rural districts. It is also evidenced by the extreme mortality of barrack children on our Indian plains. The delicate organisation of the child cannot withstand the subtle forces of disease, which the adult may overcome. Any locality which admits of the healthy growth of children will be favourable to adults. As proof, then, of the suitability of certain of our Hill climates to Europeans, we will quote Dr. Mackinnon's letter to Sir George Cowper regarding the "Lawrence Asylum" at Mussoorie. Dr. Mackinnon writes:—"By the blessing of God we lost only three boys out of the large number of our charge, during fifteen years. Not one of the three died from disease contracted here. Neither was there any coddling of the boys. As soon as a new arrival was at all able to join the promiscuous crowd, he was sent to rough it. Those who stayed through the winter, benefited amazingly by the frosty weather, and appeared to be never so well as in time of snow."

Reports, more or less favourable, leading to the same conclusion, have also been made from other asylums in the Himalayan mountains. Even the inter-tropical hill-stations, as the Neilgherry and Mount Abo, appear to possess a climate in which the race may be reared without serious degeneration. It is now recommended to Government to establish a number of colonist stations (one or other of the mountain sites; and under proper regulations these endeavours may not improbably be crowned with success. Among the localities which have been recently explored, Captain Rowlett strongly recommends the neighbourhood of Shillong as well suited for a sanitary station, and for the permanent settlement of a European colony. Shillong, on the borders of Assam, is described as having an elevation of 5,000 feet above the sea level, while the want of a sanatorium within easy reach of Assam has been much felt. Owing to the great success attending tea planting, the European population of the district has become already considerable, and is increasing daily. Unlike most hill tracts Shillong is so gently undulating, and free from deep chasms, that no obstructions exist for the indulgence of exercise, or against the ground being brought into cultivation. Indeed, it would appear to present an admirable site for a colony, being well drained by nature, and but a short distance from the River Gowhatty, which large boats may navigate throughout the year. The Nunklow district in the "Jynteah Hills," with an elevation of some 5,500 feet, is also recommended. Here "small agricultural farms, combined with cattle and sheep breeding, would probably answer very well, indeed." Again, in the territory of Khyrum, elevation 4,700 feet, Mr. Stainforth, of the Civil Service, formerly had a farm, now converted into a thriving tea plantation. It is stated that this locality, called Pomriang, is one of the most desirable sites for a colonist experiment.

Reports of these and other places having been submitted to Government, the Governor-General in Council has requested the Bengal Government to keep the question in view, in order that small military stations may be formed as a nucleus, for the protection of the colonist, should the proposal for European colonies be carried out. Colonel Jenkins, Agent to the Governor-General on the North-East Frontier, states that "he is inclined to think, the best means of ascertaining the capabilities of the hills would be to establish a village of selected European invalids, with their families, giving each small tracts of land to farm, and assisting them, besides their pensions, with certain sums to buy the necessary cattle, implements, grain and poultry, to enable them to commence their farms, and construct their houses. The experiment to be made effectually will involve a considerable expense to Government, but there seems no other method of ever adapting this fine hilly country to the purpose of European colonisation."

But the majority of soldiers who have served long enough in India to entitle them to their discharge, are either sickly, addicted to drink, or otherwise incapacitated for the arduous life of a colonist. Occasionally, men may be found, after ten or fifteen years' soldiering, able to enter upon the life of a settler, and with sufficient self-reliance to encounter its hardships. But our army system, our plan of providing everything to the soldier's hand, does not foster the formation of such qualities. The discharged soldier is like an old war horse, who in the squadron at the bugle's sound performs his part satisfactorily, but when away from the ranks he ceases to perform his work with credit, and discovers weaknesses of which we had no previous knowledge. If this be the case with the man who is supposed to be in good health and has only been discharged because he has served his allotted time, the argument must apply with double force to invalids. In fact an attempt to settle this problem by locating invalids in the hills, is absurd. Hill climates are not only not beneficial, but are prejudicial to men organically diseased, and amongst Anglo-Indian invalids but a very small per centage, it may be feared, would not come under such a category. The cold of the hills frequently kills the invalid.

It was not by invalided, or broken-down, or even by discharged healthy soldiers, that America, and Australia, and Canada were colonised. In those countries, with the climate in their favour, the best and youngest blood of the mother country have been absorbed. In India, where the climate is adverse and the constitution depressed, it is gravely proposed to form colonies of invalids and of discharged soldiers, hardly to be regarded as much better. The thing is absurd. Common sense and physiological science alike condemn the proposal, and we protest against public money being frittered away upon such experiments. Let us try hill colonies by all means; but let the colonists be young, strong, and healthy, instead of old, weak, and diseased. If ever a colony in India is to succeed, it must be attempted by a race that would establish itself in other lands. European colonisation in India has never yet had a fair trial, and hence the conflicting opinions which prevail on the subject. Until we have seen the experiment tried by the young and healthy, the problem will remain undetermined. Until then, the answer of Dr. Martin before the Colonisation

Committee of the House of Commons in 1859 is all that can be given to inquiry, viz., that European colonists will live on Indian hills "to a certain extent not yet determined."

Were a healthy European colony, say a regiment without previous residence, detention, or deterioration in the plains, carried at once to the Hills, they would probably retain their health. They would be in a very different condition to others who had become diseased, or predisposed to disease, by a prolonged sojourn on the malarious and unhealthy plains. "Fresh from the West, they would withstand the diluted mountain malaria of the East," and probably produce a healthy and vigorous stock. The children of such parents, being born on the mountain site, would, probably, under a proper sanitary revision, retain their European characteristics; and with an occasional infusion of new blood there does not appear to be any reason why the race should not be indefinitely continued; although several authorities have recorded their opinion that Europeans, even on Hill climates, would not be able to undergo the continued labour of tilling and cultivating the ground. This is a matter which only experience can fully decide, but with systematic attention to the peculiarities of climate it is not unlikely that such a trial will be successful. However this may be, it is certain that the suitability of the Hill climates of India to European colonisation has never yet been satisfactorily tested.—Times of India, June 22.

THE PIFFARD CASE.

The third part of Mr. Edgar Hyde's carefully edited series of "Reports of Cases Decided by Sir M. L. Wells, Knt., in the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal," contains the only too famous case of "Charles Piffard, Esq., B.A., and Edmund George Francis, Esq., Captain of her Majesty's 20th Foot." Nine judges out of eleven held that if "a barrister, offended by the use of a strong expression on the part of a judge while sitting in court, sends an officer to the judge's private residence upon a pacific errand, to ask for an explanation," both "the party sending the message and the party conveying it are guilty of contempt of court." To this extraordinary ruling Mr. Hyde appends the following significant foot note:—

"The power of Colonial Courts to prevent advocates who misconduct themselves from practising before them cannot be disputed. See In re the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas at Antigua, 1 Knapp 267, where Lord Wynford says—'Now advocates and attorneys have always been admitted in the Colonial Courts by the judges only. The power of suspending from practice is, we think, be incidental to that of admitting to practise as is the case in England with regard to attorneys.' As to punishment for contempt out of Court, see Dean's case Cr. Eliz. 689, where Anderson J. says—'There are divers statutes that for private discourtesies one shall not be imprisoned; and therefore I do not see how this custom can be maintained. A man may be imprisoned for a contempt done in court, but not for a contempt done out of court; and therefore he ought not to have been committed for such a private abuse.' By assent of the whole Court the prisoner was discharged. See also Rex v. Faulkner, 2 Mon and Ayr 321, where Lord Abinger says—'Then if the judge had received that letter not sitting in Court it would not have amounted to a contempt;' and again—'I can only say that if I received such a letter I should not consider myself at liberty to commit him.' Alderson B.—'There would be a great many committals if such a course were pursued by judges.' Lord Abinger.—'Do you mean to say that one of the judges has the power to fine a man for sending him a silly letter or an impudent letter, about any matter that he has decided? I can only say that I should be very much afraid of exercising it.'

The Mossulite happily pointed out, at the time, that the apologies made by Mr. Piffard and Capt. Francis, being extorted under duress, were null and void; but the question arises—what would the court have done had those gentlemen declined to apologise? Would they have sent

Capt. Francis to prison for endeavouring to act as a peace-maker? Or would they simply have stultified themselves by pronouncing the defendants guilty, and acquitting them? Their decision, indeed, amounted to that.—Hurkaru, June 29.

ENSIGNS RENNY AND HUTCHINSON.

Lucknow, July 11.—I enclose the charges on which Ensigns Renny and Hutchinson are under trial. The first charge in which Mr. Renny is the alleged principal, and Mr. Hutchinson the accessory, was exhausted yesterday and the court adjourned, after nine days' hard work, to Monday next, when the second charge, in which Mr. Hutchinson is the alleged principal, and Mr. Renny the accessory, will be gone into. The evidence in the second case is expected to be a mere repetition of that already given. The general impression is that the case will be a signal failure. From the reports extant during the past few months, one would imagine the case to be one of deliberate bestiality, and this impression was fostered also by the peculiar construction of the present charges, but the evidence, so far, leads to the impression that the charges are the result of some conspiracy to get rid of disagreeable neighbours. In support of the charge of rape against Mr. Renny we have only one witness, the alleged victim, although the offence is stated to have been committed in a village with the huts close to each other. The police were unable to discover, on a cowdung-floor, any marks of force or resistance. Lieutenant Tottenham, who was of Messrs. Renny and Hutchinson's party, but confined to his tent at the time through indisposition, within fifty yards from the village, was brought in as a witness for the prosecution, and deposes that he heard no noise; no report of a disturbance reached him, and when his companions returned to the tent he did not perceive any disarrangement in their dress or general appearance. These officers appear to have made themselves disagreeable to the inhabitants by poking about the village after such ignoble game as dogs and cats. The evidence against the prisoners is defective, also, inasmuch as there is no medical evidence, and in Mr. Hutchinson's case there is the favourable fact that he was first called on to answer the minor charge of adultery. Only one awkward circumstance occurs in the case; money was paid to the accusers in view to a "compromise;" on the part of the defence, it is urged that the compromise was a suggestion of Captain J. S. Ross, Deputy Commissioner of Gonda, before whom the accusation was first brought for trial. Excepting the testimony of the accuser and Lieutenant Tottenham, the evidence is all hearsay. We understand that very strong testimonials to character are on record in this case. I have already told you that the prisoners have had the assistance of counsel. Would you like to have a copy of the whole case? If so, I shall try and get one. I hear that a most elaborate and effective defence was put in, and though, of course, the finding of the court in the first case is unknown, the general impression is in favour of an acquittal.—Delhi Gazette, July 14.

[From the Athenæum and Statesman, July 7.]

It is both deeply painful and humiliating to every Englishman who has a spark of moral or manly feeling alive in his nature to find the names of two of her Majesty's British subjects, holding the position of gentlemen and bearing commissions as officers of her army, mixed up in a criminal transaction like that below recorded by the Oude Gazette:—

"Our readers will remember the case of Ensign Kenny, 27th Inniskillings, and Ensign Hutchinson, 23rd Royal Welch Fusiliers, who were committed by the Deputy Commissioner of Gonda, in Oude, under Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code, on a charge of rape, so far back as October last. There was much difference of opinion as to whether the accused could be tried by the local Criminal Court, whether they should be sent to the High Court, Calcutta, or whether they might not be tried by court-martial. The matter was referred by the Chief Commissioner to the Supreme Government, who referred for opinion to the Advocate-general, who at length decided that 'the trial can properly only take place before a court-martial,' being 'peculiarly a case which it would be desirable to have disposed of by such a tribunal.' Accordingly, a European general court has been ordered to assemble at Lucknow on Saturday next, the 27th inst., and of which Lieut.-colonel Campbell, H.M.'s 48th Regiment, has been nominated president. Captain Hill, Oude police, has been appointed to prosecute, and Captain Lees will officiate as deputy-judge-advocate."

We well remember the Gazette's former reference to this distressing case, but the particulars then mentioned were of so incredible a nature, that we abstained from publishing them. Even now, we trust that the trial of the accused young men will bring out a state of facts very different from the story told by the accusers.

Why the matter has been suffered to lie over so long, while the military and civil authorities were squabbling about jurisdiction, we are at a loss to discover, because the legal decision as to the competency of a court-martial to dispose of it, which was, after long argument pronounced and acted on in Lieutenant Jackson's case, seems to have sufficiently settled the question, if the terms of the articles of war left it in doubt. The two cases, so far as the newspapers inform us, appear to be strictly liable to the same rule of law. At all events, it is most necessary that some distinct rule of action for the future guidance of judicial authorities should be laid down promptly by Act of Parliament, that no more unseemly interruptions of the course of justice may occur hereafter, to the serious prejudice of all parties concerned.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR HUGH ROSE.—While the British Parliament was expressing its indignation at the cruel and unjust treatment of the late Sergeant Major Lilley, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was enjoying the gaieties of Simla, dancing with all the hilarity of three-score. And while the "mighty chief" is thus disporting himself in the hills, unmindful of the Arab proverb that there are two things colder than ice—the old young man and the young old man—irregular and immoral practices are bringing disgrace upon several stations in the plains. At Meerut, at Fyzabad, at Benares, "scandals" have occurred of a very serious nature, nor does it appear that a very strict discipline is maintained at Barrackpore, or in Fort William. We may mention, however, parenthetically, that the statement of the Burney case given in the Army and Navy Gazette of the 6th June is utterly and entirely wrong from beginning to end. The brigadier has not resigned the service, as there stated, and only brought an action against Captain Eyre after he had failed to obtain a court-martial. The whole circumstances of the case, however, will shortly be brought to light, when it will be seen that Brigadier Burney was the victim of a deep, but ill-laid conspiracy.—Overland Bengal Hurkaru, July 13.

LOCUSTS.—The locusts have evidently been making the grand tour this season. Only a few days ago the people of Delhi congratulated themselves on the fact of every other station in the neighbourhood having been visited by them, and their own spared the honour. On the 1st, however, they made their appearance at Delhi, taking an hour to pass over, and settled in such swarms outside the city that hundreds of Mussulmans were busily engaged in collecting them for food. The birds appear to fancy them best uncooked, for during the flight hundreds of kites, crows, parrots, minahs, sparrows, swallows, and even smaller birds were busy catching them. The scene was one of great animation. The sky wore the appearance it does during a snowstorm. The whirr of the locusts' wings and the deafening noise made by the citizens to prevent them from settling inside the city was, for a time, troublesome, but, as soon as it became known that the flight had descended, the noisy ones all betook themselves to the grass land outside, and commenced collecting for their meal.

THE KING OF BURMAH.—The Englishman states that the King of Burmah has brought from the Calcutta arsenal one thousand smooth bore muskets and a considerable quantity of ammunition. Calcutta seems to be the market for the material of war for the rest of Asia.

ENSIGN STROUD.—We referred the other day to another social squall, in which Ensign Stroud, of the unattached list, barrack-master at Berhampore, and Lieut. Jackson, of the general list, are involved, and for which both officers are under arrest. A Court of Inquiry assembled to investigate the affair and take evidence on both sides, but, as the Court sat with closed doors, the result of its proceedings is not known, and at this stage of the case we think it would be premature to publish the details furnished to us in private letters. We believe, however, that a court-martial on both the officers concerned is probable; on one, certain.—Englishman.

LIEUTENANT JACKSON AND ENSIGN STROUD.—The affair between Lieutenant Jackson and Ensign Stroud at Dinapore appears to have been little to the credit of either party concerned. A court martial, however, will doubtless mete out equal justice to all, and by the severity of its sentence check the irregular and immoral practices which are bringing disgrace upon the Indian Army. The attempt at homicide at Fyzabad is also to be brought before a court martial, and the wronged and wrathful husband may congratulate himself on the faithlessness of his gun—unless that too was a part of the vaudeville. As the story has come to us, it reads more like an episode from Boccaccio, or the Heptameron of Margaret of Navarre. Giving out that he was going on a distant journey and would not return for a day or two, the jealous husband bids a tender farewell to his loving spouse, and goes forth into space with “a smile on his lip and a tear in his eye.” The glad tidings of his absence is quickly conveyed to the cavalier gallant and gay, favoured of the dame so fickle and fair. On the wings of love Lothario sped straightway to his beloved, “as a bird hasteth to the snare and knoweth not that it is for his life.” Over the fatted capon and the sparkling Sillery many a word, many a glance of love, was exchanged, seasoned it may be by sportive allusions to the Absent One. But when the banquet had been removed, and while the enamoured couple lay “emparadised in one another's arms, the happier Eden,” the Absent One stole back in the darkness of night, and “with jealous leer malign eyed them askance.” Then raising his gun to his shoulder he pulled the trigger and—“only that, and nothing more.” Had the Absent One come in accidentally and caught the fond couple as he did, he would have been fully justified in taking the life of either or both, on the spur of the moment. But to go off with a lie upon his lips, in order to afford an opportunity for his own shame, and then to steal back with malice prepense and fire at the Cicisbeo, was the act of a false-hearted coward and a sneaking murderer. Such a man deserves to be deceived. But for all that, these disgraceful occurrences must cause bitter anguish to his stern and ascetic Excellency, the pure-minded Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army. How is it that young men will not follow his excellent example, and walk singly and uprightly in all their ways? It is well that he does not himself dwell in a glass house, and that he can dare to throw the first stone, knowing that he is himself without sin.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 11.

SETTLERS IN INDIA.—The Hills, in discussing the subject of “Settlers in India” in a somewhat lengthened essay, says:—“In a Calcutta newspaper, heretofore all in favour of the European settler, we find an article above all disparaging to that now comer. The writer declares ‘there is no such thing as a settler; no man seeks a grant of land with a view to end his days on it.’ Well, we should hope most settlers have more sensible purposes in ‘view’ than to pervert a grant of land into an instrument of suicide! Men generally, we admit, no more strive to obtain land that they may straightway finish themselves on ground of their own, than they buy knives of their own to cut their throats withal! But that many men strive after grants of land in fee, that they may acquire a possession on which they may securely dwell, and confidently expend their means as a provision for themselves and their offspring after them, we assert as an incontrovertible fact.

Had Canning's rules been in force to this day, the number of ‘settlers’ would have been tenfold the present total—considerable as that is declared by the Friend of India to be, viz., 50,000, a number, let it be remembered, more than sixty-fold greater than that of all the civilians in the three Presidencies.”

EUROPEANS IN INDIA.—At the May meeting of the Colonial and Continental Church Society, the Rev. Dr. Murphy, Cathedral Chaplain of Madras, drew the following picture, somewhat highly coloured, of Europeans in India:—“The European in India was not worse naturally than the European at home; but the unregenerate heart, wherever it was, was prone to give way to the temptations presented to it, and the temptations in India were of the most seductive character. A European living there had to contend with the disadvantage of the climate, which confined him to the house for a considerable portion of the day. Confinement induced lassitude, and this sometimes led Europeans to use stimulants, which certainly did not conduce to the health of either body or soul. Again, there was a danger of constant irritation in dealing with native servants, on account of their habitual fraud and peculation. Again, there was the constant contamination and defiling effect of contact with idolatry and idolatrous practices. When an Englishman first settled in India the sight of an act of idolatrous worship produced a strong feeling of repugnance in him; but after a time his sensibilities became blunted. The European child was left to grow up under the influence of the heathen by whom it was surrounded, and the effect of such contact was most demoralising. The conversation among the native servants was often such as would horrify Europeans not accustomed to it; and falsehood was so constant among them, that it seemed almost impossible for children who lived amongst them to grow up with any idea of truth. Indeed, the Hindoo did not look upon falsehood as being associated with evil.”—Friend of India.

A NOTORIOUS OUTLAW.—We understand that the notorious outlaw Jowahir Sing, an accomplice of the famed Burjore Sing, has given himself up to the authorities at Jhansie. We should like to know whether at such a late period he can be entitled to pardon under the Proclamation. Where was he all this time, and how did he succeed in evading capture at the hands of the constabulary? It is to be hoped that an interest will be taken in the trial of this man's case, which should be well sifted. We have no doubt but several persons will come forward to prefer charges against the rebel.—Allahabad Gazette.—The same journal, in alluding to the death of Baija Baie, the grandmother of Scindiah, relates an anecdote of her:—“While she was Ranees of Gwalior, she travelled through Ojein, where, falling short of oil for torches, her attendants applied at an oil shop which happened to be close by. The oil-man was absent at the time, and his wife refused point blank the request made to her, saying she had seen several such Ranees, for whom she cared not a jot. This fact being conveyed to Baija Baie, raised her ire to such a degree that she had the woman brought prisoner before her, and having had her wrapped in about 100 yards of silk of great value, caused it to be saturated in large quantities of oil, and had fire put to the unfortunate victim, who was soon consumed to ashes. The Baie, however, gave the husband of the deceased one lac of rupees to put him in a position to marry a woman possessed of better manners.”

THE LATE DOST MAHOMED.—During his preparations for the siege of Herat, Dost Mahomed fell sick, and the story is told that to the long faces about his bed he replied, “Do not be discomfited, I will take Herat first, and then die.” True or not, the story is an index of the old man's character, and has proved prophetic. Within one week we have heard that Herat has fallen, and that Dost Mahomed Khan is dead. Death has led the captor captive. The Dost was of the Barakzai tribe, and the fortunes of his family commenced with his father Payandah Khair, who was raised by Taimur Shah to the Chiefship of the Barakzais, with the title of Sarfraz Khan. The succeeding king, however, put old Payandah to death, and the Dost at once went into rebellion. On Shah Mahomed becoming king, he became reconciled to the Government, an elder brother became vizier, and he himself was made a sirdar. Shortly afterwards, having been sent against Herat, and having on the fall of the city offered an indignity to the Sultan's wife, Mahomed Shah had his brother, the vizier, murdered. The Dost himself went into rebellion again, and succeeded in dethroning Shah Mahomed, and seizing for himself the kingdom of Cabul. This brought him into conflict with Shah Soojah, the rightful heir, who had married one of the Dost's sisters. Of the mission of Burnese, of the Persian and Russian intrigues which led us to espouse the cause of Shah Soojah, of our fatal expedition into Afghanistan, of the Dost's capture, imprisonment, and restoration, and his long fidelity to his treaty with us, and of his recent capture of Herat, it is unnecessary for us to write. The character of the Dost exhibited the worst vices of his race. He was treacherous and cruel even beyond Afghan precedent, a drunkard and debauchee. He had a passion for music, and this, with his invariable bonhomie and his faithfulness to the British Government, are the only redeeming traits of a man, bad as it is well possible for an oriental despot to be. His death is not unlikely to involve the Government once more in the affairs of Afghanistan, in the independence of which we are so deeply interested.—Times of India.

ANDAMANS.—We hear that Major F. Crossman, now commanding the 25th Punjab N.I., is appointed to succeed to the throne of the Andaman Islands, vacant by the abdication of King Tytler. We do not think that a better selection could have been made, and are confident that Crossman I. will turn out the right man for the post, and a monarch of great firmness, moderation, and judgment.—Englishman, July 4.

THREE CHOWKEDARS convicted of torturing a prisoner by fire at Calcutta have been sentenced to seven years' transportation each. A European constable, who ought to have prevented them, narrowly escaped.

LIEUT.-COL. NICOLLS, R.E.—We are happy to announce that Lieut.-Col. Nicolls, R.E., superintending engineer of this circle, has been promoted to the higher post of Chief Engineer in Oude.—Allahabad Gazette.

BOMBAY AND BENGAL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY (LIMITED).—We have to announce the formation of another shipping company under the above title. The capital of the concern is to be Rs. 25,00,000, to be divided into 500 shares of Rs. 5,000 each. All the shares have been taken up, and a call of Rs. 1,500 is payable on or before the 23rd instant. The promoters are Messrs. Stearns, Hobart, and Company, and the following directors have been appointed:—Mr. Andrew Grant, Mr. W. F. Stearns, and Mr. Kursondas Madhowdas. Messrs. Stearns, Hobart, and Co. are managers and treasurers. The shares are already at a premium in the bazaar.

LETTER STEALING.—We alluded some time ago to the short-comings of a Post-office Baboo to the extent of stealing hundreds of letters, and destroying them for the sake of the stamps, or of their contents. Jubbulpore was the scene on which the fellow operated so extensively, and we are delighted to hear that he has met with his deserts. Transportation for life to the Andaman Islands has been the well-merited punishment inflicted on this wholesale plunderer.—Delhi Gazette.

MADRAS.

OOTACAMUND.

If we may judge from the report just published by Dr. Rogers, the medical officer in charge at Ootacamund, that favourite sanitarium is rapidly losing its high character for salubrity. Dr. Rogers describes the state of the drains to be worse than when reported on last year, and he is of opinion that disease is on the increase, "and that, too, of a more violent type, producing typhus and typhoid fevers, small-pox, dysentery, and cholera." The description given by him of the station itself is something horrible.

To remedy this disgraceful state of things Dr. Rogers recommends that a health officer be at once appointed, and measures adopted for ensuring the proper conservancy of the station. An artificial lake in the immediate vicinity is made a receptacle for the filth of the town, and the noxious effluvia arising from this is represented as perfectly dreadful. It will be seen from the following extract, that Dr. Rogers apprehends the worst results in the event of remedial measures being longer delayed.

"It would be very sad indeed were it to be said that this beautiful climate of Ootacamund was no longer pure, invigorating, and a desirable place of residence. But unless the measures I have endeavoured to explain as being necessary are very soon acted upon, and made law, I believe that Ootacamund will be productive of serious disease, and that fevers of the worst form, small-pox, and other malignant disorders, will have their origin in that beautiful sanitarium, then no longer a place of refuge to the sick. From nearly four years' experience, I can confidently say that the fevers of late years have assumed a formidable type, and the state of Ootacamund has correspondingly increased in filth and in its number of inhabitants."

The Government have determined upon acting promptly in the matter, and have directed the collector of Coimbatore to place himself in communication with the executive engineer, with a view to devise some means for improving the drainage, and rendering the station more healthy. It is some consolation to find that the present insalubrity of Ootacamund is in no way traceable to a change in the climate, but is solely owing to the filthy condition in which the station is allowed to remain owing to defective drainage, and an absence of any attempt at sanitation.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 8.

MISCELLANEOUS.

OOTACAMUND.—The Madras Athenaeum mentions that a Mr. Taylor is about to take out a patent for a locomotive engine to run up such an incline as it is proposed to make to Ootacamund from the railway. As the branch to Bangalore will be complete at the end of the year, it would be easier to adopt that route to the finest hill station in India.

NEW STAR.—Mr. Pogson, the Madras astronomer, has discovered a variable star. This is the fourth heavenly body, a knowledge of which we owe to him, the other three being planets, according to the Madras Daily News.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARREST OF NATIVES.—NUSSEERABAD, July 3.—The natives are much disturbed about something—no one knows what. Many arrests have been made of high caste natives, who were in communication with the Nana after he came into Ajmere. Amongst the rest the head commissariat clerk from here (Nusseerabad), who went out to Ajmere the day he came in, and was in communication with him an entire day.

BOMBAY LINE OF STEAMERS.—A company, it is reported, has been formed to run a monthly line of steamers of large size, fitted up with the best accommodation for all classes of passengers, and constructed for speed, between this port and Aden and Suez, and also between Bombay and China. The Suez line will be worked in connection with the "Messageries Imperiales," part of the mails and passengers proceeding via Marseilles, and the heavy portion of the mails being conveyed by steamer to Liverpool. We have not heard who are the principal promoters, nor will the shares be allotted to the public until the arrangements for working the line are completed, but that such a company will receive strong public support we entertain little doubt.—Bombay Saturday Review, July 11.

SIR BARTLE FRERE.—POONA, July 18.—Sir Bartle Frere, with council meetings and public visitations, appears to be doing good work in return for his income. In my last I gave you an account of his tour through the city, and since then he has presided at the council meeting, disposed of any quantity of official arrears, and paid a state visit to the Rhani of Tulligaum. This lady is one of the highest of the Deccan noblesse, and owns one of the richest tracts of country to be found in the Deccan table-land. It is, I think, not unlikely that the press will soon hear a good deal of the Tulligaum barony. The young rajah, or chief, is, I need hardly tell you, one of the Deccan sirdars, and is still a minor. His affairs have been, as is usual in India, managed by a native minister. This functionary, who also filled the office of tutor, bears the name of Gopinath Bugganathjee, and was formerly a moonsiff at some place the name of which has escaped me. He had charge of the treasury.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—KURRACHEE, July 4.—A very sad event has occurred, in the death of a native pointsman on the line, caused by an engine driver named Mackinlay, who, finding some fault in the man's performance of his duties, got down from his engine and gave him a severe beating; after which, whether purposely or from inadvertence no one can tell, he drove his engine over the feet of the man as he lay on the ground. The injured party had to be amputated, and death ensued. No doubt great allowances ought to be made for these men, who suffer very severely from exposure to the sun during their trying and arduous work. No European constitution can long stand out against the effects of such work and exposure, whilst natives are from their carelessness utterly unfit to be trusted with the lives of passengers in a train; and this must ever form a great hindrance to railway operations in India.

SEDASHUGHUR.—Sedashughur, by all accounts, is by no means in the forward and flourishing condition which those who have not seen it suppose it to be. Nor are the public works there being carried on as rapidly and vigorously as the "general reader" has been led to believe. The great want there is labour. Under the Public Works Department, Captain Kerr has seven hundred convicts at Beitkul, and three hundred at Urgey. A short time ago a hundred Gujeratee convicts were sent away as useless. The Chinese and Malays, of whom there are three hundred, are the men for work, the only ones of real use to the Public Works Department. Chinese labourers are the best in the East; and two or three thousand of them would have changed the face of Sedashughur long ago. The coolie labour hitherto and at present employed at Sedashughur is not by any means so great as even the authorities on the spot have supposed. There are at present about eight hundred coolies employed there in the various departments of the Public Works; and we doubt very much whether there has ever been a much larger number than that actually employed. The Karkoons of the several departments know well how to make the same set of coolies count to all the departments. As they muster for the different departments at different times, it is easy for them to muster the same men at different times. This they have done; it has been their practice to do so. It is well known that they have not mustered honestly. Of the coolies employed there, only the women are said to be robust and in working order. The men are a miserable set. In regard to the morals of both, the worst accounts are given. It is said, even at this late date, that cotton will not come over the Ghat for two seasons to come. It is a question whether the site for the town has been wisely chosen, after all that has been spoken and written about it. The town lies very low, some say below low water-mark. The officers employed there are being put into very comfortable quarters. Very good wooden houses are now being erected for them in blocks, with corrugated iron roofs, verandahs, storerooms, and bathrooms. The executive administration of the place is in good and efficient hands.

The bazaar is not well spoken of. Anything that is to be had is very dear. The staple vegetables, potatoes and onions, have to be brought from Bombay. The Ghat scenery is very grand and very lovely, and presents a great variety of aspects. As we said at the outset, "the great want of Sedashughur is labour." And it is a matter deserving the immediate consideration of Government, whether the best way of supplying this serious want would not be to arrange for bringing from China, at once, such a supply of Chinese labourers as would bring the works, which at present drag on at a snail's pace, to a rapid and satisfactory conclusion.—Bombay Gazette, July 24.

PURCHASE SYSTEM OF THE BOMBAY ARMY.—We have received a copy of a pamphlet entitled "The Purchase System in the Bombay Army," being an attempt to show that the system was, up to the amalgamation (so called) a privilege openly conceded to the army, and, after it, a right guaranteed by the statute law of England; by a Bombay officer. This little book possesses the rare merit of combining conciseness and brevity with a full and clear exposition of the subject with which the writer deals. We never doubted that the new Government was in honour bound to recognise and take into liberal consideration the purchasing-out system, which had become sanctioned by immemorial custom and the express permission of the Court of Directors, in the Company's armies; but we think that the writer of the pamphlet before us has clearly proved that the officers of these armies have strong legal claims upon the country for indemnification as regards their ruined interests and money sunk before the mutinies in purchasing out their seniors. The whole subject is very ably handled by the writer, who deserves the thanks of his brother officers in the three armies.

TRAFFIC ON THE INDUS.—The Sindian states the value of the traffic on the Indus, conducted by eleven steamers with flats, during 1862-63 at Rs. 65,14,616. The traffic by native craft amounts to the very large sum of Rs. 1,13,08,421, being the estimated value of 12,37,285 maunds of goods borne by 3,195 boats. The gross traffic thus shows a grand total of Rs. 1,77,23,037. In addition to this there is the treasure of which the Indus Flotilla carried Rs. 23,38,346, and the other boats, Rs. 23,07,685. To the general trade, railway material contributes Rs. 12,91,828, and cotton Rs. 63,33,561.

A TERRIBLE STORM.—Kurrachee was visited by a furious rain and thunderstorm last Thursday evening. It burst upon us at about four o'clock, and continued with unabated force till near six. It is said such a volume of water has not fallen at any one time since 1851. The quantity marked by the pluviometer at the General Hospital was nearly five inches. Only three inches and seven cents were gauged at the Civil Hospital, not because the fall was less there than in camp, but on account of the wind which blew very strong across the plain. In the course of the night, twelve cents were registered. The streets had a depth of water varying from eighteen to twenty-four inches over them. It was knee-deep across the Post-office square, and the drains being filled up to a dead level with the surrounding surface, formed dangerous pitfalls, in one of which a native nearly lost his life. He stepped into a ditch and was being carried by the current under a culvert, when he was caught by his clothes and pulled out. We are sorry to hear that an unfortunate native perished on the road to Landi. He attempted to pass a body of water sweeping across his path, when he was taken off his feet, swept away, and drowned. His friends who had started in search of him, found his body among some bushes yesterday morning. The men of No. 10 Company of H.M.'s 100th Regiment narrowly escaped injury. The lightning struck their barrack, and dashed a door open. Walls and outhouses may be seen in ruins in all directions. We regret to learn that the greatest damage caused by the storm was among the goods at the Bunder-head railway station and in the merchants' compounds. The loss of property in these places is estimated at fourteen lakhs. We hope the figure will prove less when the extent of the damage is properly ascertained. The railway line has suffered considerably also, and the traffic has been interrupted. The line about ten miles distant from Kurrachee, was washed away by the torrents which rushed over the ballast. The water was so deep in the vicinity of No. 5 cutting that it actually put out the fires of an engine which was passing at the time. The 9.45 a.m. passenger down-train was detained on the road between Landi and the dangerous places, but the mail bags were brought down in the night in a "trolley," and the passengers were transferred at an early hour yesterday morning to carriages this side of the break. Every exertion is being used to put the line in order, and it is expected the necessary repairs will be completed to-day and the traffic resumed. The Mayting division also gave way, but was put to right by 7 a.m. We are also informed that several telegraph posts were washed down. Water to the depth of four feet rolled down the Lyaree, very much to the delight of the inhabitants, thousands of whom plunged in, and it continued running, the depth gradually decreasing, until between two and three o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the flow ceased. From Kotree we learn that the steam-ferry met with an accident during the storm, the particulars of which have not reached us as yet. We fear we shall have to record serious disasters from the interior. We have learnt since the above was in type that another man, labourer at the Quarries, lost his life by being washed away, and that the Doolie Bearers' lines have been almost demolished.

—Sindian, July 11.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—We find in the Friend of India of June 25th the following paragraph:—"If the promises of Colonel J. P. Kennedy, the consulting engineer, are to be trusted, the Bombay and Baroda Railway ought to be open throughout the month. The line from Bulsar to Ahmedabad, its northern terminus, 185½ miles, has been open since January; that from Bulsar to Bombay is 124½ miles in length. This line has the far from creditable character of being the worst constructed in India." We have reason to believe that Col. Kennedy made no promise of the sort, but doubtless the Friend of India will be glad to know that the railway in question is nevertheless now all but completed; and though railway work that is fresh from the last touch of the workman in the midst of such a monsoon as we have in Western India cannot at once be made available to the public, we have the best grounds for believing that this railway will, throughout its entire length from Bombay to Ahmedabad, be opened for goods and passenger traffic in perfect condition by the first of January next, and probably sooner. We congratulate the community of Bombay on the near prospect of an event which cannot fail to be productive of the highest advantages to every interest connected with the place.

CEYLON.

MR. ANSTRUTHER.

Many in Ceylon will hear with much regret of the death—noticed in our obituary to-day—of Mr. Philip Anstruther, late Colonial Secretary of this Island. We believe that in the able discharge of the important duties connected with his high official position here, Mr. Anstruther has been equalled by few, and surpassed by none, among either predecessors or successors in the Colonial Secretaryship of Ceylon. Among the Singalese, his name will long be remembered with regard and esteem, as that of one who, by becoming thoroughly acquainted with their habits and feelings, won the entire confidence of the people in his administrative position. No better proof could be afforded of this, than the cry of the disturbed natives during the troublous times of 1847-48, for the "One-armed Rajah!" (by which appropriate title Mr. Anstruther was known amongst them), to settle their grievances. This was many years after he had left the island, and, we believe, the remark made at the time of the so-called rebellion, by the then Chief Justice (Sir Anthony Oliphant), was by no means exaggerated:—"That had their 'One-armed Rajah' been in Ceylon then, and stood upon one of the Kandian hills, he might have dispersed the angry multitudes with no greater difficulty than by using the simple and authoritative command of one of old:—

"To your tents, Oh Israel!"

and so have saved so much ill-feeling, trouble, and indeed bloodshed, as marked that unhappy period.—Colombo Observer, July 10.

SUSPENSION FROM OFFICE IN THE SERVICE.

We (Colombo Observer) have just heard that Col. Watson, Provincial Inspector of Police at Galle, has been suspended by the Governor, for, it is said, inconsistent if not untruthful statements. A similar charge, it will be recollected, was brought against this gentleman last year, but a merciful committee acquitted him on the ground of having a "slippery memory." It appears nothing can justify the present hallucination. A rumour is current to the effect that Mr. Power, of Ratnapoora, has also been suspended from office on a still more serious charge.

THE 50TH REGIMENT.—We (Colombo Observer) see it stated by our contemporary of the Examiner that there is a probability of this Regiment being shortly removed from Ceylon to Bangalore. We do not know whether this piece of information is well-founded. Bangalore is a district in the Madras Presidency, the town being situated 3,000 feet above the sea-level, and about 180 miles directly west from Madras.

GAS LIGHT FOR COLOMBO.—We (Colombo Observer) learn that the company for lighting Colombo by gas, and perhaps supplying us with water also, is now in course of formation, under the auspices of a well-known commercial gentleman here. It may be some short time yet before the project is laid before the public.

BENGAL.

BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.
THE STAFF REGULATIONS.

Simla, June 20.—No. 83a.—The following extract from a military despatch from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 171, of May 9, is published for general information:—

2. You have informed H.E. the C. in C. that it was never contemplated to appoint officers of one presidency to the army staff departments or to the corps of the regular estab. of another presidency, and so long as there are officers of the Bengal army available for employment, you cannot sanction the appointment of Madras or Bombay officers to corps on the regular Bengal estab.

3. You have also stated, I observe, that officers of other presidencies have always been freely employed in the Punjab and Hyderabad and other irregular forces under the orders of the Govt. of India, and are of course still eligible for such situations.

4. I approve of the decision you have formed upon the subject.

5. In my despatch, No. 319, dated Aug. 18, 1861, I observed, with reference to the subject, that I should not object to the practice of officers of the staff corps in one presidency being employed in another being extended, on special occasions, but that I concurred in your opinion that ordinarily it would be inconvenient to bring officers of all the presidencies promiscuously into the several staff departments of the armies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

6. I consider, therefore, that so long as there are officers of the Bengal army available and qualified for employment, Madras and Bombay officers should not be appointed to corps on the regular Bengal establishment.

NEW JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES IN BOMBAY.—The mania for joint-stock companies has taken a new direction within the last fortnight, and shipping companies have now displaced the new banks and cotton presses in public favour. The new mania seems to have spent itself however; and it is rumoured that the projects of Messrs. Ewart, Latham, and Co., Messrs. Volkart, Bros., and Mr. Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy, will be withdrawn. The first in the field was the Bombay Shipping Company, projected by Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart and Co. The shares of this company going immediately to a very high premium, brought other houses at once into the field. It is no part of our purpose, however, to give the history of this movement, as it presents little of interest to any but those who are well acquainted with its facts. The heavy preliminary calls made by the shipping companies, Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,500 upon each share, have had a very sedative effect upon the market. To meet these calls, a sum of not less than thirty lakhs will be withdrawn from circulation, and speculative holders in some instances will probably be forced to abandon their shares. Since writing the above, we understand that another bank is projected by the native brokers of Bombay with a capital of £500,000.

KHELAT AFFAIRS.—Trustworthy accounts from Khehat state that Khodadad Khan, in attempting to take the place, was repulsed with the loss of the whole of his guns. The game is now ended, and the chiefs have now offered him a pension of Rs. 1,000 a month, on the condition of his at once leaving the country. If Khodadad Khan be wise he will accept this offer—one made, most likely, out of respect for the memory of his father, who appears to have been a very able and gallant man; for it is difficult to imagine that there could be any loyalty or affection for Khodadad Khan personally, when we call to recollection the occasion on which, having invited the chiefs to a friendly personal conference, he opened all his masked guns upon them, and besides wounding, killed fourteen on the spot.—Our Paper (Kurrachee), July 3.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE RULES.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, under date June 8, 1863.

Financial Department, Fort William, June 8.—Read the following papers regarding rules for leave of absence and pensions to uncovenanted servants:—
A memorial on the subject from uncovenanted servants in the three presidencies.

Letter from the supreme Government to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 42 of June 15, 1861, forwarding the above memorial, and one from officers of the Education Department in Bengal, with other correspondence regarding pension rules for educational officers.

Financial letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State, No. 205 of Dec. 8, 1862.

Ordered, that an extract, paragraphs 1 to 18, of the despatch of the Secretary of State, be published in the Calcutta Gazette for general information, and for the guidance of the several departments of the supreme Government, of the local Governments and administrations, and of all officers and departments concerned.

Extract (paragraphs 1 to 18) from a Financial Despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, to the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council, No. 205 of 1862, dated Dec. 8.

I have considered in Council the memorial from the uncovenanted servants of the several governments in India, praying for modifications in the existing rules which govern the grant to them of pensions and leave of absence, together with your public letters, dated June 8 and 15, 1861, Nos. 37 and 42; August 6, 1861, No. 58, and your financial letter, dated August 4, 1862, No. 110, on the same subject.

2. The great body of the uncovenanted servants of India have always been natives; and it has been the just and wise policy of the Government to employ, as largely as they could with advantage the natives of India in the administration of their own country. It is still the desire and intention of her Majesty's Government that whilst, to a certain extent, European agency beyond the covenanted servants must always be employed in various situations, natives of India should constitute the great majority of the uncovenanted servants in India.

3. Your Government points out the impossibility of making any distinction between Europeans and natives. In that opinion I entirely concur, and whilst, therefore, I cannot but admit that there are differences of various kinds in the circumstances of persons of the different races who are employed in the uncovenanted service of India, it appears to her Majesty's Government to be indispensable that the rules to be laid down should be such as are applicable to the whole of that body, of whom the great majority are, and must always be, of native race and of native habits.

4. I think there is, however, sufficient ground for an exception as regards educational officers, and law officers, and native judges. In those cases a previous course of study, and, in many instances, practical experience is required, and there is, consequently, reason for making a distinction in regard to that class of servants whose claims will, therefore, be separately considered.

5. I now proceed to convey to you the decision of her Majesty's Government as to the general body of uncovenanted servants.

6. It has been decided that no uncovenanted servant shall in future be allowed to count for pension any period of service antecedent to his having attained the age of 22 years, and, in calculating the period of service required by this despatch as a qualification for pension, the period must be reckoned from that age.

7. The allowance to be granted to uncovenanted servants on retirement are in future to be as follows, viz.:

On production of such medical certificates as shall satisfy the Government, under which the applicant may be serving, of his incapacity to serve longer in India:—

1. Under fifteen years' service,—a gratuity not exceeding twelve months' salary.

2. After fifteen years' service,—one-third of his salary (and of his personal allowance, if any), provided that in no case shall a pension be granted exceeding the sum of Rs. 3,000 per annum, whatever the amount of salary, nor of Rs. 2,000 per annum, if the salary shall not exceed Rs. 12,000 per annum.

8. After twenty-five years' service,—one-half of his average salary (and of his personal allowance, if any) during the previous five years, provided, however, that in no case shall a pension be granted exceeding Rs. 5,000 per annum, whatever the amount of salary, nor exceeding Rs. 4,000 per annum, if the salary shall not exceed Rs. 12,000 per annum; after thirty years' service, or upwards, a pension may be granted, without production of medical certificate, of the same amount and subject to the same limitation as that sanctioned for twenty-five years' service on medical certificate.

8. The period of service which is to be admitted in considering a claim to pension must be continuous; but in case of the abolition of the office held by an uncovenanted servant, and his being subsequently employed by Government, his first period of service is to be taken into account.

9. Pensions of the full amount stated are to be granted only as the reward of approved service. In any case in which an uncovenanted servant, without having incurred the penalty of removal from Government employ, shall, nevertheless, in the opinion of the Government under which he has been serving, not to be entitled to the full amount of pension, the local Government will make such a reduction in the amount of pension as it shall consider just.

10. These pensions have hitherto been payable only in India. As a rule, Europeans on being pensioned desire to return to this country, and they are consequently under the necessity of employing an agent in India to receive and remit their pensions. If the pensions are allowed to be paid in England, the delay, risk, and inconvenience of agency will be saved, while the charge to Government would be very inconsiderable. Her Majesty's Government have therefore decided that each uncovenanted servant shall, on retirement, have the option of drawing his pension either in India or from the Home Treasury. After exercising his option on retirement, he may, at a subsequent period, change the place of payment from England to India, or vice versa. This change can, however, be allowed but once.

11. The rate of exchange is an important consideration in regard to payment in England. Her Majesty's Government will not now fix any permanent rate for the purpose, but as a rate of exchange, based on the intrinsic value of the rupee, and the market price of bills, is annually fixed in communication with the Lords of the Treasury for the adjustment of transactions between the British and Indian Exchequers, which rate is applied to family remittances of officers serving in India, the same rate appears to be equitable for the payment in England of the pensions of uncovenanted servants and is therefore to be adopted.

12. I am desirous of being furnished with a list of the uncovenanted servants who are entitled to the benefit of the pension rules; and it must be understood that it is not now intended to grant the benefit of those rules to any of the lower grades of servants who are not at present entitled to pension.

13. An uncovenanted servant may, under the existing rules, be granted, on sufficient cause being shown, leave on private affairs for six months in one period, retaining his office with half salary up to £600 per annum, which is the maximum amount allowed to be drawn. This leave may be repeated after intervals of six years, and is allowed to count for pension. Leave of this description may still be granted, but the period of absence will not be allowed to count for pension, and the option may be given to uncovenanted servants of taking in lieu of the above leave a furlough for one year after ten years' residence, and a second furlough also for one year after eighteen years' residence in India, such absence being limited to two years during the whole period of service. For such periods an absentee, whose salary does not exceed Rs. 200 per month, may be allowed to draw one-half salary; provided, however, that it shall not exceed Rs. 800, or £80 per annum. If the absentee's salary shall be above Rs. 200, and not exceeding Rs. 400 per month, he may be granted an allowance of Rs. 1,300, or £130 per annum; above Rs. 400, and not exceeding Rs. 700 per month, Rs. 2,000, or £200 per annum; above Rs. 700, and not exceeding Rs. 1,200 per month, Rs. 3,000, or £300 per annum; above Rs. 1,200 per month, and not exceeding Rs. 4,000, £400 per annum.

On taking leave on private affairs for the first time after the publication of the new rules, an uncovenanted servant must decide whether he will apply for six months' leave on private affairs, or for one year's furlough, and having once exercised his option and obtained leave accordingly, he will not, during the remainder of his service, be eligible to the other description of leave.

14. In regard to absence on medical certificate, an uncovenanted servant, under the existing rules, may be granted leave of absence for three years during the whole period of his service, of which two may be continuous, and two only can be counted as service qualifying for pension. For one year of the entire period the absentee may draw half, and during the remainder one-third of his allowances, limited, however, to £600 per annum.

15. Instead of the period of leave now allowed, Her Majesty's Government authorise the grant of leave of absence, on medical certificate, with allowances, to the extent of three years, in two periods of which not more than two years may be taken at one time.

16. For the first fifteen months of each period the absentee may be allowed one-half salary, provided that it shall in no case exceed £600 per annum; and for the remainder of his absence, within the prescribed limit, he may be allowed one-fourth of his salary, limited to £300 per annum.

17. If any further leave should be applied for on medical certificate, it may be granted as exception leave, but without any allowance.

18. These periods of absence on furlough and medical certificate are not to count for pension; but privilege leave in India may be allowed for one month in each year, which is not, however, to accumulate, and the grant of which must be always subject to the condition that no inconvenience or charge shall be caused to Government thereby; this privilege leave will count in the period of service qualifying for pension.

[Here follows republication of a Government notification consisting of "Revised Rules for the Grant of Leave of Absence to Uncovenanted Civil Servants."]

ABSENTEE PAY.

20. Absentee pay, if at half salary, shall in no case exceed Rs. 6,000, or £600, per annum,—or if at one-fourth salary, shall not exceed £300 per annum. Within these limitations absentee pay will be given as follows:—

I. To an officer absent on sick leave in or out of India—half salary for the first fifteen months of each period of absence, and one-fourth salary during the remainder of his absence on allowances.

II. To an officer on leave on private affairs,—one-half of his salary for a period not exceeding six months of continuous absence, and for any further period of preparatory leave which may be granted to him. But if an officer, absent on private affairs, obtain an extension of leave on medical certificate, he will be subject for the whole period of his absence to the rules of sick leave.

III. To an officer proceeding on furlough whose salary does not exceed Rs. 200 per month,—one-half of his salary, provided, however, that it shall not exceed Rs. 800, or £80, per annum. If the absentee's salary shall be above Rs. 200, and not exceeding Rs. 400 per month, he may be granted an annual allowance of Rs. 1,300, or £130; above Rs. 400, and not exceeding Rs. 700 per month, Rs. 2,000 or £200 per annum; above Rs. 700, and not exceeding Rs. 1,200 per month, Rs. 3,000 or, £300 per annum; above Rs. 1,200 per month Rs. 4,000 or £400 per annum.

IV. To an officer on preparatory leave—one-half salary before commencement of other leave; and, on return from leave—one-half or one-fourth salary, or furlough pay, according to the rate of salary he may be then drawing.

V. To an officer on privilege leave—full pay.

21. An officer who overstays privilege leave by not more than one month will forfeit pay for the period in excess; but if he exceed his leave by more than one month his office will become vacant. An officer on privilege leave who may resign the service, or who may obtain sick leave without first re-joining, will in the former case forfeit his salary for the period of privilege leave, and in the latter case be subject to the rules for sick leave for the whole period of his absence.

PAYMENTS OF ABSENTEE ALLOWANCES.

22. Officers absent on privilege leave cannot draw pay until they return to duty.

23. Officers proceeding to England on furlough, or on private affairs, or on medical certificate, must obtain certificates from the civil paymaster, in the form given below, for submission to the India-office on their arrival in London:—Name; Service and designation of the party obtaining leave; Nature and period of the leave; Date of intended departure of vessel from Calcutta or other port; Rate of allowance to be drawn in England or not; Date from which the first payment is to commence.

24. But if they desire to draw their allowances through their agents in India, the latter must execute a guarantee to refund over payments. When officers remain in India and draw their allowances themselves, and attach to their bills life certificates, attested by a deputy magistrate or a covenanted district officer, they will not be required to furnish any security.

GENERAL RULES FOR APPLICATIONS FOR PENSION.

The following revised rules for the grant of pensions and superannuation allowances to certain classes of uncovenanted servants are published by order of his Honour the President in Council, for general information and guidance:—

Pension Rules for Uncovenanted Servants other than Educational Officers, Law Officers, and Native Judges, receiving more than Rs. 10 a month, and belonging to classes eligible to pension under the orders of Government.

Applications for pension must be submitted in a letter to Government by the head of the office or department in which the applicant may be employed, who shall certify that the character, conduct, and past service of the applicant are such as to entitle him to the favourable consideration of Government.

2. Every application shall be accompanied by a register prepared according to form A in the appendix. In cases of either than a good service pension every application shall be accompanied by a medical certificate, stating the applicant's incapacity for further service, with the cause thereof, and that it has not been induced by irregular or intemperate habits.

3. Applicants for a superannuation allowance must be examined by the principal Inspector-general of the Medical Department if serving at the Presidency, or by a military invaliding committee if serving elsewhere within a moderate distance of a station at which a military invaliding committee is periodically assembled. It is optional, however, with the Local Government to accept the certificate of a single medical officer or to convene a special invaliding committee at a convenient civil station, if the applicant be serving at an inconvenient distance from the station where a military invaliding committee can be assembled.

4. Good service and superannuation allowances on retirement sanctioned under these rules by the Local Governments will be reported to the Government of India in quarterly returns in the form given in appendix B.

ALLOWANCES ON RETIREMENT.

5. On production by an applicant of such medical certificates as shall satisfy the Government, under which he may be serving, of his incapacity to serve longer in India, he will be allowed,—

I. Under fifteen years' service, a gratuity not exceeding twelve months' salary.

II. After fifteen years' service, one-third of his average salary (and of his personal allowance, if any), during the previous five years, provided that in no case shall a pension be granted exceeding the sum of rupees 3,000 per annum, whatever the amount of salary, nor of rupees 2,000 per annum, if the salary shall not exceed rupees 12,000 per annum.

III. After twenty-five years' service, one-half of his average salary, (and of his personal allowance, if any), during the previous five years, provided, however, that in no case shall a pension be granted exceeding rupees 5,000 per annum, whatever the amount of salary, nor exceeding rupees 4,000 per annum, if the salary shall not exceed rupees 12,000 per annum.

6. After thirty years' service or upwards a pension may be granted, without production of medical certificate, of the same amount and subject to the same limitation as that sanctioned for twenty-five years' service on medical certificate. This pension, as the reward of faithful, efficient discharge of duty for thirty-years, is termed a Good Service Pension.

7. Pensions of the full amount authorised in paragraphs 5 and 6 are to be granted only as the reward of approved service. In any case in which an uncovenanted servant, without having incurred the penalty of removal from Government employ, shall, nevertheless, in the opinion of the Government under which he has been serving not be entitled to the full amount of pension, the local Government will make such a reduction in the amount of pension as it shall consider just.

8. The foregoing rates of pension and gratuity are applicable also, without the production of a medical certificate of unfitness for service, to officers discharged on reduction of establishment.

SERVICE TOWARDS PENSION.

9. Dismissal for misconduct entails forfeiture of the benefit of past service.

10. Service as a substitute does not count towards pension.

11. Periods of service before the age of 22, or of absence on other than privilege leave and preparatory leave, shall not count towards pension.

12. The whole of the service, in virtue of which pension is claimed, must have been passed in an eligible grade and on a permanent establishment; but claims barred by this rule will be specially considered if the promotion from an ineligible grade was bestowed as a reward for meritorious service or for good conduct.

13. The period of service must be continuous, but in case of the abolition of the office held by an officer, and his being subsequently employed by Government his first period of service is to be taken into account.

PAYMENT OF PENSIONS.

15. Payment of pension will commence from the date on which the applicant ceases to be borne on the establishment, or from that of his application, whichever may be the later date.

16. No pension shall be payable in arrear, for a period exceeding six months, without the express sanction of the Government obtained through the civil pay-master, unless the cause of the suspension of payment shall have been the neglect, order, or act of some public officer and beyond the control of the pensioner, when the civil pay-master, on a reference being made to him, shall exercise his discretion in passing arrears for payment, or submit a representation of the case for the information and orders of Government, as he shall consider proper.

17. An officer shall, on retirement, have the option of drawing his pension either in India or from the Home Treasury. After exercising his option on retirement, he may, at a subsequent period, change the place of payment from England to India, vice versa. This change can, however, be allowed but once. The payments in England will be made at the rate of exchange which is annually fixed in communication with the Lords of the Treasury for the adjustment of transactions between the British and Indian Exchequers.

Extract from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, under date the 8th June, 1863.

Read letter No. 111 of 6th August, 1862, to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State, regarding the limitation to £500 per annum of the maximum pension to uncovenanted officers.

Read reply thereto in paragraphs 19 to 24 of the despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 205, dated 8th December, 1862.

Ordered, that the foregoing correspondence be published for general information:—

VIEWS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

To the Right Hon. Sir C. Wood, Bart., M.P., Secretary of State for India.

Fort William, 6th August, 1862.

Sir,—The rules of the 4th January, 1831, regarding the grant of pensions to uncovenanted servants, restrict the amount of pension to half salary for those who have served for thirty years or more (except as regards law officers and native judges, in whose case twenty-two years' service is sufficient) and to one-third for those who have served for a shorter period not less than twenty years (fifteen years being substituted for twenty in the case of law officers and native judges).

2. Referring, however, to the extension of the service and the alteration in the prospects of its members since the rules were passed, the late Court of Directors decided, in their despatch No. 21, dated the 28th February, 1855, that £500 per annum should be the maximum pension to be granted to uncovenanted officers "hereafter appointed to the service." Accordingly, as respects all uncovenanted officers who entered the service prior to that date, the rules of 4th January, 1831, continue to be applied, and with reference to the continually increasing number of highly paid appointments which are now thrown open to uncovenanted servants, the Government of Bombay, anticipating that the State will become saddled with large pensions payable on their retirement from the service, have addressed us proposing that "before any uncovenanted servant who shall have entered the service before the 19th May,* 1855, is promoted to an appointment the salary of which is Rs. 10,000 per annum and upwards, he shall be called upon to renounce formally any claim to pension beyond the sum of £500 per annum."

3. The restriction proposed by the Bombay Government is in itself quite reasonable, and the only doubt we find regarding it is whether it is the proper way of attaining the object in view.

4. The Uncovenanted Service, it seems to us, cannot claim to have any rights under the rules of 1831, beyond what may be considered to arise out of the general pledge which these rules may be taken to give, that a member of that service when rendered incapable of further duty shall not be discharged without some pensionary support. As regards the amount of pension to be given, the rules merely fix a limit, which is not to be exceeded; and although it has, with rare exceptions, been the practice to allow the highest pension of which the rules allow, this practice cannot be admitted to confer on the Uncovenanted Service any right to claim that maximum in all cases without any regard whatever to the original design and scope of the rules.

5. The rules of 1831 were obviously not framed with a view to the duties and emoluments of the high offices which are now bestowed on the Uncovenanted Service.

6. Apart from any question of construction of the rules as they stand, we see no ground for holding that the Government in passing the rules of 1831 pledged the State to allow pensions on the scale, and according to the conditions therein prescribed, to all uncovenanted servants who were at that time in the public service, or who might enter the service while the rules yet remained in force.

7. It appears to us that it was always open to the Government to modify these rules whenever it might in good faith consider that the public interests called for their modification; and when it appeared that the circumstances of the uncovenanted service were becoming rapidly changed, and that the rules which were framed chiefly in reference to natives in India, among whom at that time it is probable that no salary higher than 500 or 600 rupees a month would have been found, were claimed as applicable to a class of appointments for which they never were meant to provide, we consider that the Government would have been perfectly justified in framing new rules and making them applicable to all classes of appointments which were plainly not included within the original intention of the rules of 1831. This would have been a direct, and in our judgment a very legitimate way of attaining the object, which it is now proposed to attain by the somewhat doubtful proceeding of refusing promotion to a deserving officer unless he will consent to abandon that to which it is assumed he has a right under the existing rules.

8. We incline to think, notwithstanding the difficulty which is undoubtedly caused by the proceedings of 1855, referred to in the second paragraph of this letter, that even now it will be better that the Government should assert its right to alter the rules of 1831, as regards all appointments clearly not embraced by the original intention of those rules, and to declare such alteration applicable to all uncovenanted servants whether they entered the public service before 1855 or since.

9. But if this be done it may be right, perhaps, having regard to the expectations which must naturally have been created by the order of 1855, to allow the full advantages of the rules of 1831, with respect to all appointments made up to the present time and held by officers who entered the public service before 1855. Thus, such an officer already holding an appointment of Rs. 1,500 a month will, on superannuation after twenty-two or thirty years' service, according to the class of appointment be able to claim a pension up to £900 a-year; but he will not, if hereafter promoted to higher emoluments, be able to claim a still larger pension calculated on those higher emoluments.

10. The distinction which will thus be made between persons (all having entered the public service before 1855) who have already obtained promotion to high and lucrative employment, and those who are yet looking for such promotion, may possibly appear invidious, but is not unreasonable and will not really affect the latter class more injuriously than will the proposal submitted by the Government of Bombay, and it is a course which, on the whole, seems to us less open to objection than the Bombay plan.

11. We request the favour of an early decision upon this reference.—We have, &c.,

Fort William, the 6th August, 1862.

Extract (paras. 19 to 24) from a Financial Despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, to the Right Hon. the Governor-general of India in Council, No. 205 of 1862, dated the 8th December.

Para. 19. I have also had under consideration your financial letter, dated the 6th August, 1862, No. 111, in which you refer to a proposition made by the Government of Bombay in reference to the restriction on the maximum amount of pension prescribed in the financial despatch of the Court of Directors to the Government of India, dated the 28th February, 1855, No. 21.

20. That despatch fixed the sum of £500 as the maximum pension to be granted to "uncovenanted servants hereafter appointed to the service." The Government of Bombay consider that it would be expedient to require any uncovenanted servant, who entered the service before the date of the orders of your Government on the despatch of the Court of Directors, and who shall hereafter be promoted to an appointment, the salary of which is Rs. 10,000 per annum and upwards, to renounce formally any claim to pension beyond the sum of £500 per annum.

21. In reference to that opinion of the Government of Bombay, you observe that the uncovenanted service "cannot claim to have any rights under the rules of 1831, beyond what may be considered to arise out of the general pledge which those rules may be taken to give, that a member of that service, when rendered incapable of further duty, shall not be discharged without some pensionary support. As regards the amount of pension to be given, the rules merely fix a limit which is not to be exceeded, and although it has, with rare exceptions, been the practice to allow the highest pension of which the rules allow, this practice cannot be admitted to confer on the uncovenanted service any right to claim that maximum in all cases without any regard whatever to the original design and scope of the rules."

22. You nevertheless consider that, with reference to the order of 1855, it may be right "to allow the full advantages of the rules of 1831, with respect to all appointments made up to the present time and held by officers who entered the public service before 1855. Thus, such an officer already holding an appointment of Rs. 1,500 a month will, on superannuation after twenty-two or thirty years' service, according to the class of appointment, be able to claim a pension up to £900 a-year, but he will not if hereafter promoted to higher emoluments, be able to claim a still larger pension calculated on those higher emoluments."

23. I must observe that, under the existing pension rules, an uncovenanted servant is not entitled to claim a pension of the full amount which is only authorised as the reward of approved service, and when the rules were framed it could not have been contemplated that a larger pension than £500 per annum could ever be granted.

24. Under any circumstances, therefore, the full pension should only be awarded in cases of extraordinary merit.

E. H. LUSHINGTON,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

THE AMALGAMATION OF THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT of the Indian army with that of the Queen's army presented so many difficulties in the hard and difficult nature of the two excellent metals, that the Government alchemists have abandoned the task and blown out their furnaces after a terrible loss of quicksilver. In other words, there is to be no amalgamation of the medical officers of the old Indian army and the medical officers of the Queen's army. The former are to constitute a medical staff for India, much to their own satisfaction, and somewhat, we suspect, to their profit. The latter will have to jog on without any chance of sharing in the small droppings of the nearly exhausted pagoda tree. The warrant may be speedily expected "arranging" the matter, and we shall have much pleasure in ventilating the merits of the case when the time comes.—Army and Navy Gazette.

ENSIGN DWYER.—The Englishman was premature in announcing the arrest of Ensign Dwyer, Barrack Master of the Dum Dum and Barrackpore Cantonments. A Court of Inquiry, we believe, is about to be instituted for the purpose of examining Mr. Dwyer on certain matters of which he is quite prepared to give a satisfactory explanation. As Ensign Dwyer is on half-pay, we do not quite understand how he can be made amenable to military law, especially on a question of accounts.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, August 10, 1863.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.

WITH the modesty so truly characteristic of his nature, the late Lord Clyde expressed his particular desire that his funeral should be "that of a quiet country gentleman, and of the most simple and unpretending kind." But his vast circle of friends would not let it be so, for "no quiet country gentleman" had ever such a train of mourners and admirers as will attend this gallant veteran to his last resting place. His executors have been perplexed by the overwhelming amount of notices and applications they have received from persons desirous of taking a part in the funeral procession. They have limited the actual invitations to those who have at various times been members of his staff or who otherwise served with him. But even these are a legion in themselves, and very many others will fall into the train of mourners of their own accord. The funeral is to take place at ten o'clock on Saturday morning. Lord Clyde is to be buried in the Kensal-green Cemetery, though if the wishes of the nation had been consulted he would have been laid in Westminster Abbey, by the side of a true soldier, like himself, brave and modest and gentle-natured—Sir James Outram.

MANCHESTER COTTON SUPPLY ASSOCIATION.

WE are glad to see from the last report of the proceedings of this valuable association that so much has been done to remedy the evils inflicted on the cotton market by the American civil war. The feeling, too, which prompts their great exertions is not a selfish or mercenary one—not even narrowly national, but truly cosmopolitan. This association has distributed to different quarters of the world during the past five years upwards of 6,107 cwt. of cotton seed, and placed in the hands of those who could most usefully employ them 642 cotton gins, sixty-two ploughs, and numerous other agricultural implements of the most approved description, and several sets of horse and cattle gear, with driving wheels for gins where steam power could not be obtained. It has done its best to encourage the cultivation of cotton in all countries in which the soil and climate were favourable to its growth. Turkey, Egypt, Spain, Portugal, Australia, Brazil, Paraguay, and South America have all benefited by its advice and assistance. It is a fact not very creditable to our Anglo-Indian authorities that other Governments in different parts of the world should have been so much more liberal in the disposal of waste lands for the cultivation of cotton. The Turkish Government has granted uncultivated lands for cotton plantations rent free for five years, with an exemption from all taxes for the same period, and with gratuitous supplies of seed. The Portuguese Government in India has exempted waste lands from all contributions to the State for half a century, and in Upper Egypt, such lands, if devoted to cotton cultivation, are granted a like exemption FOR EVER!

"I can't but think 'twould sound more clever,

'To me and to my heirs for ever!'"

The Madras Government had authorised the offer of a remission of assessment for five years on such spots of land (not exceeding thirty acres in each case) as should be exclusively devoted to the cultivation of cotton; but the Secretary of State for India revoked the indulgence.

It is but fair to the Feninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company to mention that they have offered to convey one ton of cotton seed to India by every mail free of charge.

Amongst the subscribers to this association we observe a name that is to be seen in connection with almost every institution that has for its main object some direct moral or physical advantage to the human race. We refer to the name of Miss Burdett Coutts. Great wealth never fell into better hands than hers. This lady has offered to continue her subscription to this association of £100 a-year for a further period of five years.

EDUCATION IN RAJPOOTANA.

MR. E. J. HOWARD'S report on education in Rajpootana is pronounced by the Bengal Hurkaru "a model of perspicuity of ideas and conciseness of expression." He does not give us very flattering accounts of the progress of English education in Rajpootana, and his little history of the college there, known as the Vidya Ghal, at least shows that if the Anglo-Indian Government is very desirous to inculcate the natives of that province with a love of western literature and science, they must hold out more temptations than have yet been offered to them. Mr. E. J. Howard seems to come to a different conclusion, and tells us it is a mere waste of money and trouble to set up schools for natives which, should they want them, they can set up for themselves. If the natives in other parts of India had been left wholly to themselves in this matter, we should not have to boast of the many noble institutions at which the native mind has been so elevated, strengthened, and enlarged. We must not leave semi-savages to find out the value of intellectual cultivation. We should tempt them to taste the sweets of knowledge just as we tempt our own children, whom we coax into acting in the way that is good for them. Colonel French proceeded on this principle to some extent when he persuaded the Maharajah of Rajpootana to spend thirty thousand rupees in erecting the college we have alluded to. As the institution was at a considerable distance from the houses of the students, he induced the Maharajah to employ his own state carriages in conveying the young scholars to and from their studies. When Colonel French left Rajpoo-tana the Maharajah ceased to send his carriages for the students, and the students ceased to attend the college. The college was soon closed for the want of pupils. But the cause of this failure is obvious enough. The Government ought to have coaxed the Maharajah to continue the loan of his conveyances; or such promises of advantage—worldly as well as intellectual—should have been made by Government to the students as would have induced them to use their own legs more freely. Scholarship prizes and honours would soon have refilled the college with eager students of English literature; but for want of such inducements the young natives have deserted the institution, and now, instead of being a temple sacred to Western literature and science, it is devoted to a few Brahmin priests, who are employed to pray for the Maharajah.

DR. DUFF.

WE are very sorry to hear that Dr. Duff has been suffering from an attack of acute dysentery, and that he will be obliged to return to Europe as soon as possible. We are told that if it had not been for this circumstance he would have written and published a pamphlet on the subject of the case just decided in the High Court of Calcutta, respecting the retention by Dr. Duff of the lad, Hemnath Bose, against his father's consent. We fear that Dr. Duff is about to be lost to India; for at his age, and with such a disease upon him—so fatal in tropical climates—it is not likely that he will ever incur the extreme danger of returning to the scene of his long-continued labours. He has done immense service to the cause of Christianity in India, and perhaps no individual Briton has advanced the cause of native education so effectually as Dr. Duff. It is true that David Hare, who generously devoted life and fortune to the same cause, won the lasting gratitude of the educated classes of the people of India by his earnest zeal in the cause of native education, and the affectionate interest which he always evinced, not only in the intellectual and moral welfare, but in the domestic and personal concerns of the students at the Government Colleges, the Hindu College especially. But he was himself, comparatively speaking, an illiterate man, and was quite unable to take any share himself in any instructional department, whereas Dr. Duff is a highly educated and able man, and perhaps the very best teacher in all India. The classes under his own immediate tuition were always singularly distinguished for the extent and exactitude of their knowledge of Western literature and science. But the influence of Dr. Duff on the natives generally is not equal to that exercised for so many years by David Hare, the retired watchmaker, who made India his adopted country, and who looked upon all young Hindustudents as his children. If David Hare was somewhat less respected than Dr. Duff, he was assuredly more beloved. David Hare never interfered with the religion of the people, and therefore never shocked their prejudices; while Dr. Duff has never missed the opportunity to let his pupils understand how much he abhors or despises the religion of their fathers. But if Dr. Duff has hurt the feelings of the natives of Bengal, and touched somewhat harshly on their sore places, they cannot but acknowledge that he is a man of first-rate ability and perfect honesty and sincerity, and that he has never sought to gain converts or pupils by any sort of intrigue or misrepresentation. The Hindu parents who sent their children to his missionary schools were warned beforehand that he would convert them to Christianity if he could. But his schools, like those of the Government colleges, were chiefly filled, not with native Christians, but with native Deists, and David Hare used to boast that the schools with which he was connected had sent into the world quite as many, if not more, native Christians than the professedly missionary establishments.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE LORD CLYDE.—The remains of the late Field-Marshal Lord Clyde were removed from Chatham garrison on Monday afternoon to his lordship's town residence, preparatory to the public funeral, which will take place during the present week. On Saturday, Viscount Sydney, Lord-lieutenant of Kent and Lord Chamberlain, accompanied by Lord Paget, arrived at Chatham for the purpose of making the preliminary arrangements connected with the interment. The removal of the body was conducted in the most private and unostentatious manner. On the arrival of the hearse containing his lordship's remains at the Chatham station, the coffin was deposited in a first-class carriage, and forwarded to London by the 1.18 p.m. express train; Major-General Eyre, at whose house Lord Clyde died, proceeded to town in the same train. In the garrison the usual parades were dispensed with.—Times. We (Morning Post) understand that, in accordance with his own express directions, the funeral of Lord Clyde will be strictly private, and that he will be buried without pomp or ceremonial at Kensal-green. Though there was every desire on the part of all authorities concerned that his obsequies should have been celebrated with military honours in Westminster Abbey, it has been agreed that the nation which deplores her loss cannot pay a more sincere tribute to his memory than by acting in deference to his own wishes.

FRANCE AND CHINA.—The Moniteur of Monday says in its bulletin: "In consequence of a fresh demand from the Minister of the Emperor at Peking, the Chinese Government, at last fulfilling its engagements—the execution of which had been delayed by interior difficulties—has just taken measures for the punishment of the authors of the murder of the Abbé Néel. A new Viceroy has been appointed in Honei-Tcheou; troops have been sent into that province, and orders have been given for the ex-Imperial Commissioner to be immediately brought to trial."

THE CAPTURE OF NANA SAHIB.—A private of the 28th Regiment writes to his brother at Carlington:—"Nusserabad, June 28.—We took Nana Sahib on the 24th inst. at Ajmere, along with some of his co-conspirators, and we have them all in irons. It has caused a great stir here, where we are expecting a break out every day. If they do, they will find us prepared for them this time. We have two big guns planted on the road to give us warning, so that they will not be able to take us by surprise. Nana won't eat anything, so we have to tie up his arms and force it down his throat."

TOURISTS AND TRAVELLERS, VISITORS TO THE SEASIDE,
And others exposed to the scorching rays of the sun and heated particles of dust, will find a most refreshing preparation for the complexion, dispelling the cloud of languor and relaxation, allaying all heat and irritability, and immediately affording the pleasing sensation attending restored elasticity and healthful state of the skin. Freckles, tan spots, pimples, flushes, and discolourations are eradicated by its application, and give place to a clear and healthy complexion. In cases of sunburn or stings of insects, its virtues have long been acknowledged.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATE S, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all accretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

FIRE! THIEVES!! FIRE!!!—C. H. GRIFFITHS having purchased nearly all the best quality of Fire-proof Safes from the International Exhibition of 1862, including those made by Messrs. Perry, Chatwood, Rhodes, and other eminent makers, is enabled to offer them at half the original cost. The patented improvements of the latter maker render it an impossibility for fire to take any effect under any circumstances of time and place. In consequence of the increasing demand for these essential and valuable repositories, which no house of business, or, indeed, private house (where plate, books, and documents are kept) should be without, in these hazardous and dangerous times, C. H. G. has taken additional premises, 3, Pentonville-road, opposite the Angel, Islington, where he also intends to keep a variety of Second-hand Safes by those eminent large makers, Milner, Price, Mordan, &c., at half the price of new. Sketches, with prices, free by post. 23, Cannon-street West, St. Paul's, London; and opposite the Angel, Islington.

TEETH.—PATENT 764, AUG., 1855.—As shown at the International Exhibition, Class XVII.—Messrs. LEWIN MOSLEY and SONS direct attention to their GUM-COLOURED ENAMELLED BASE FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH, and their complete system of Painless Dentistry. Teeth from 6s.; Sets, 5, 8, 10, and 15 Guineas.—30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.—Established 1820. For the efficacy and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth stopped, and rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

TENDER and DECAYED TEETH STOPPED with ANODYNE CEMENT, which instantly allays the most violent pain, and fills up cavities, however large, and answers where every other kind of stopping has failed. Prepared only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta and Duchess of Gloucester, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France, 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from 11 till 4. No connection with any person practising in the same profession.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

For which a Prize Medal was awarded to the Producer at the International Exhibition, 1862.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in furs, and every other species of insect.

SPORTSMEN will find this an invaluable remedy for destroying Fleas in their Dogs, as also Ladies for their Pet Dogs.

Being the Original Importer of this now invaluable article, which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the Public are therefore cautioned to observe that the Packets of the Genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

Sold in packets 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, or post free for 14 or 36 postage stamps, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late BRIDGE'S) ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA is appreciated for its Purity, and marked superiority, daily prescribed by the Faculty for Impurities of the Blood, Affections of the Liver, Constitutional Debility, Attenuation of Body, as an Alternative Medicine at the Changes of the Seasons, and for freeing the system from the effects of Mercury.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incidental to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after Sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"Latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c., subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's Sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparations.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Winter Green. The genuine has "Thos. Wilkinson (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London," engraved on each bottle.

AGREEABLE SEIDLITZ POWDER in one bottle, protected by a case with measure and spoon included. This preparation is highly recommended, not only as a Mild Aperient, but to allay Fever, Thirst, &c.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINIDINE for the prevention of Fever, Intermitting or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria. No person exposed to the influence of or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria. Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by Thos. Wilkinson (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

IMPORTANT TO OFFICERS.—Have all your BOTTLED ALES, WINES, &c., PACKED in SEYMER'S REFRIGERANT STRAW ENVELOPES, which entirely prevent Heating, Fermentation, and Breakage; will use repeatedly as Wine Coolers, prevent all litter on board ship or in quarters, and save 20 per cent. in space and freight.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—

A frequent cause of gout and rheumatism is the inflammatory state of the blood, attended with bad digestion and general debility. A few doses of these Pills, taken in time, are an effectual preventive against gout and rheumatism; but anyone who has an attack of either should use Holloway's Ointment also, the powerful properties of which, combined with the effect of the Pills, must infallibly effect a cure. These Pills act directly on the blood, which they purify and improve; they also regulate the secretions and give tone to the stomach, and thus the whole system is invigorated, and put into a condition which enables it to throw off disease or check its approach.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 19th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have no additional or confirmatory intelligence by the mail on the subject of the identity of the prisoner at Ajmere with the infamous Nana Sahib, nor have we any further reports about the revived Tantia Topee. We take the following paragraph from the Bengal Hurkaru of the 22nd of July:—

There are really some grounds for believing that the notorious Nana Dhundoo Punt is actually in the hands of the police, but there have been so many mistakes made on this subject that the public has become somewhat sceptical. Not content with the capturing of the Nana, the correspondents of certain Indian journals have discovered that Tantia Topee is still alive, and that a wrong man was hanged in his place. It would not be surprising if it were reported, on excellent authority, that Tippoo Sahib had made his appearance in the Mysore at the head of a hundred thousand Mohammedans.

It is understood in India that the supposed Nana will be brought round by sea to Calcutta, and thence sent to Cawnpore for trial.

If the prisoner is not the Nana, it seems likely that he is still a man of no slight importance, and will be found to be connected with the intrigues and conspiracies which have occasionally encouraged malcontents to believe that we were to have another mutiny or rebellion. But we are in a very different position now from that which so exposed us to mischance in 1857. With our 80,000 British troops, and new means of locomotion, we could very easily put down an insurrection fifty times more formidable than the ever-memorable mutiny.

Sir Hugh Rose has issued new rules for what he oddly calls "the cooking of the army," which, it may be necessary to explain, does not refer to the melancholy fact that our Anglo-Indian troops are sometimes grilled or roasted by tropical heat, when martinets expose their men too late in the morning on parade with the thermometer at 120 degrees. His Excellency desires that the British army in India should consist of good cooks as well as good soldiers. Every private is to receive instructions in the culinary art, and be taught to cook from the receipts which have already been found to ensure good messes in the 7th Dragoon Guards, 42nd Highlanders, and other corps. A coffee-shop is to be established near each regimental reading-room, where all beverages are to be sold, except spirits and malt liquor.

Sir Charles Trevelyan is the last man in India to give way to that feeling of languor or lassitude which sometimes subdues even the vigorous Saxon into that wretched apathy and love of idleness so characteristic of the natives in the lower provinces on the Bengal side of India. Sir Charles is as active and hard at work as ever, though his exertions are less open to public notice than they were a few months ago. He is not one of the Queen's hard bargains. He will always do something for his salt,—“for quiet to quick bosoms is a hell.” He has been busying himself lately, amongst other public matters, with drawing up suggestions for the consideration of Government respecting a change in the present system of selecting civil servants by competition. He thinks the age for passing the first examination should be eighteen or twenty-one, and would insist upon each competitor spending two years at Oxford or Cambridge. He fancies, perhaps, that mere bookworms, and persons of low birth and low habits and associations, and of comparatively inferior education may, under the present system, succeed, by mere cramming, in arriving at positions for which they would not be generally fitted.

Mr Maine, the law member of the Imperial Council, seems a great favourite in India, and to have won golden opinion from all sorts of men there. He has prepared Bills to authorize the appointment of official trustees or executors for Englishmen in India who die intestate. Lord Elgin has just summoned him to Simla.

His Excellency, the Viceroy, after the Exhibition at Lahore, is to hold a great Durbar there. His lordship is still resolved, it is said, that the Legislative Council shall meet at Lahore in January next, or earlier.

A code of rules has been prepared to test the qualifications of officers of the staff corps desirous of civil and political employ. It is particularly imperative upon them that they should pass in the native languages, and to qualify themselves to pass their examination they are allowed a period of two years' study. They are also to be well read in the penal, criminal procedure, and civil procedure codes.

Colonel Crommelin, chief engineer in Oude, has been set apart for the special duty of preparing designs for forts, barracks, and cantonments.

Captain Smyth, of the Bengal army, has applied to be appointed to the charge of an expedition to discover the source of the Berhampoota. We hope he may succeed in every way, and that he may rival in fame his old friend and brother officer, Speke, who has discovered the source of the Nile.

The Calcutta Municipality has recommended that a "health officer" should be appointed to look after the sanitary regulations of the town. It is desired that he should be the very best man available in India, and with a really adequate salary. Dr. Ewart has been mentioned as a fit candidate for the office. His "really adequate salary" is fixed at £1,000 monthly.

Really the Parsee gentry seem the most liberal in the world. On the arrival of Queen every successive mail we have to record some munificent donation by a Parsee to advance some noble public undertaking. Cowasjee Jehangeer, hearing that there was a proposition to establish a "Strangers' Friend Society," wrote the following letter to the editor of the Times of India :—

"MY DEAR MR. KNIGHT,—I have read with warm approval the prospectus of your Strangers' Friend Society, and I will myself undertake to build a suitable home for the society, if the cost should not exceed, say, one lakh of rupees, and the Government is willing to meet me half way in it.

"If the cost should be less than Rs. 1,00,000, so much the better. I am willing to subscribe one-half the amount, so long as the call upon me does not exceed fifty thousand rupees.—Yours sincerely, "July 6, 1863." "COWASJEE JEHANGEER."

The Englishman, of July 22, tells us that money still continues easy, and is likely to do so. A large purchase of Government paper, to the extent of some twenty lacs, will necessarily have made money more plentiful for the moment. But there is always at this season of the year a demand for money for contracts for produce now soon expected forward, and this will doubtless tend to keep up a fair demand for money at present rates, the more so as but small parcels of cotton goods are being sold, so that no approximation to a balance between imports sold and exports bought can be anticipated.

The Lieut.-Governor of Bengal was still at Dacca. According to the Dacca News the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal has had to rough it considerably during a portion of his present tour, namely, a visit to Comillah. In the first place, while going to Comillah, a buggy, with Mr. Bayley in it, came to grief in a ditch; secondly, when arrived at Comillah, nothing eatable was to be had,—the sumptuous banquet ordered by the Rajah of Tipperah not arriving till the day after the fair; and last, but not least, the Lieut.-Governor and his private secretary were quietly lodged in a tank by a refractory buggy-horse, who had the impertinence to defy even the exhortations of Government to induce him to proceed. This was crowned by a walk of four miles under a hot sun, and in wet clothes; but we are glad to hear that Mr. Beadon returned to Daudcandy in safety and without any reported injury to his health. Such a series of accidents to the Lieut.-Governor of this rich province speaks very poorly for the capabilities of the inhabitants and their cattle.

The Bengal Hurkaru of the 22nd of July tells us that considerable dissatisfaction still prevails among the so-called Muzbee Sikhs. There is nothing more certain than that these men were enlisted with the understanding that they were to be properly and efficiently armed on their arrival in Ceylon, and treated like any other Sikh regiment, whether doing duty in India or abroad. Private letters from Colombo speak in strong terms of the feeling of exasperation that prevails among the men who have already arrived there.

THE INDIAN EXHIBITION.

We congratulate the native princes and noblemen of India who, in return for the collections presented by them to the late Exhibition, are at last to receive substantial acknowledgments. Though the East India Company successfully managed to obtain, through the influence of the political agents, considerable presents for contribution to the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1855, it appears that on the last occasion considerable objection was taken to this sort of levying black mail, and it became pretty clear that unless contributors got something more than a mere bronze medal, or a copy of the illustrated catalogue, nothing could be expected from the same parties on any future occasion. It was therefore decided that all the contributions of native princes and chiefs should be sold, and the proceeds invested in return presents; but as under the new rules Government neither give nor make any presents to native princes, they are to be called 'souvenirs' sent by the Secretary of State to the parties concerned, each party receiving in return the exact value realised by the sale of his contributions. We learn by the mail now to hand that the fortunate individuals who are to receive these valuable acknowledgments are the Maharajahs of Jyepore, Patiallah, Scinde, and Ulwar; the Nawabs of Bhawalpore, Peshawur, and Furreedkote; Sir Jung Bahadoor, the Rajahs of Travencore, Vizianagaram, Rajah Deonarian Sing, the Nawab of Rampore, his Highness Ali Morad of Khyrpore, the Rajah of Tipperah, the Sultan of Zanzibar, His Highness Inche Wan Aboo Bauker, the Rajah of Triganan, Rajah Goreschunur and Tejkishe of Lucknow; Nawab Shurff-od-Dowlah, and Aga Ali Khan, and Shah Makun Loll of Oudh. These 'souvenirs' consist of such works of art as are likely to find favour with the recipients, and will, owing to their novelty, no doubt be highly prized. We cannot spare room for the whole description of the articles as furnished by our London correspondent, but we may mention the vase intended for his Highness the Maharajah of Puttiallah, which is four and a half feet high, and intended to represent the triumph of science and the industrial arts in the Exhibition. The style is rich Elizabethan. The four statues on the body of the vase are Sir Isaac Newton, Lord Bacon, Shakespeare and Watt, representing Astronomy and Philosophy, Poetry and Mechanics. On the four bas-reliefs, between the figures, the practical operations of science and art are displayed, and their influences typified by the figures on the base, representing War, Rebellion, Hatred, and Revenge overthrown and chained. The recognition and the reward of these ennobling pursuits are symbolised by the figure of his Royal Highness Prince Albert on the apex, who, as originator and patron of the first Exhibition, is awarding the palm of honour to successful industry. Our correspondent, moreover, informs us that the whole of these 'souvenirs' had been selected under instructions from the Secretary of State by Mr. Dowleams, with whom the idea of making returns to contributors from India originated.—Englishman, July 21.

THE MUNICIPALITY.

The meeting of the Justices of the Peace, which took place in the Town Hall on Monday, is not to be regarded, we trust, as a precedent and model for future gatherings of that worshipful but loquacious body. It was only too good an illustration of the familiar adage: Much cry and little wool. Every one spoke, or wanted to speak, at the same time, but the greatest offender seems to have been Dr. Chuckerbutty, of whom it may be said in the words of the Latin Grammar, that he possesses satis eloquentia, sapientia parum. The chairman, however, may be expected after a little time, as the novelty of his position wears off, to keep speakers more to the point, and to enforce a greater degree of order and decorum. Some little irregularity at the outset may be fairly condoned, as comparatively few of the Calcutta

Justices of the Peace have been accustomed to take an active part in public meetings, or can boast of any practical experience of public affairs. But it is very clear, that unless a higher tone is introduced into the weekly discussions of the Municipality, no gentleman of refined feelings will care to attend, as is the case with the Common Council of London, and other great cities in England. Pushing and pretentious nobodies will thus get the entire management of the civic business into their own hands, and will misrule Calcutta as caprice or ignorance may direct. At the very commencement of Monday's meeting, an opposition was raised to a motion of which due notice had been given, that should by all means have been avoided. Mr. Brett had previously signified, in the usual manner, his intention of moving that Mr. Dowleams be appointed vice-chairman, and it is admitted on all hands that that gentleman's ability, energy, and knowledge of business peculiarly fit him for such an onerous post. The motion having been made by Mr. Brett, was of course opposed by Mr. Maitland—the "angel blest" being always ready to take up arms against "goblin t'other." The latter—Mr. Maitland, we mean—wished to adjourn the question for another week, in order to give time for other candidates to come forward, as if they had not already had time enough to enter the lists. In any case, the Act expressly enjoined that a Vice-Chairman should be elected within fifteen days after the appointment of the Chairman, and it is rather strange that Mr. Maitland, as one of our distinguished and most assiduous legislators, should not have been aware of the fact. According to our contemporary's report, indeed, he is represented as having explained that his only object in opposing the motion was to establish the right of adjournment. We confess our inability to appreciate this motive. Did his worship fear lest, like the unfortunate Theseus, the meeting would sit for ever and ever? Or, as Comus threatened "the Lady," that their nerves should "all be chained up in alabaster?" Be that as it may, an adjournment did finally take place, notwithstanding the election of Mr. Dowleams, and on a question quite as important as the choice of a Vice-Chairman.

Calcutta, as we learn from the report of the Sub Committee, is "one of the most insanitary cities in the world," whatever may be the precise meaning of that phrase. Because, therefore, of this "insanitariness"—the Sub-Committee are welcome to claim the parentage of the word—it is unanimously agreed that the health officer should be a man of the highest qualifications obtainable for a salary of £1,800 per annum. Some, indeed, appear to be of opinion that, as he is wanted so much, he will be of no use at all, and that the Chairman will have so much leisure time on his hands that he can easily undertake this special department, in addition to the general supervision of the entire civic machinery. But granting the necessity of having a health officer, no one disputes the propriety of securing the services of the best man attainable for the purpose. The question, however, arises, whether or not he should necessarily be a medical practitioner, or merely an individual of a large and varied ignorance on sanitary matters. After much talk, rather than argument, in favour of either view, and after the meeting generally had lost sight of the question before them, Mr. Maitland carried his grand point of establishing the right of adjournment—in other words, of putting off till the morrow whatever should be done to-day. Amid considerable confusion the meeting finally broke up, and adjourned till next Monday.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 15.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL.

DACCA.—July 11.—The steamer Koladyne, with the yacht Rotas in tow, anchored off Dacca on Saturday afternoon, the 4th instant. As soon as the Lieutenant-Governor's arrival became known, the guns were brought down to the river side, as we have neither fort nor proper parade-ground, and the usual salute was fired. We had been expecting Mr. Beadon and his suite for a couple of days previously; but from Daoodeandee, which is the nearest point to the Station of Comillah that a steamer can reach, his Honour went by land, a distance of 22 miles to the station, where he went through the usual routine, which consisted of visiting the public offices and schools. The excitement created by his arrival among the Natives of the place is described as having been most amusing, and the display of wealth and rank assumed for the nonce, ridiculous. Every landed proprietor, big or small, far or near, expected to be presented to the Lieutenant-governor, and certainly a great many did succeed in getting a bow from the big man, all to themselves at the levee that ensued. Men who had all their lives been accustomed to walk about the bazaars of Comillah in very common and sometimes odoriferous garments, carrying their own chattahs, during the stay of the Lieutenant-governor crowned themselves with shumlas, a head-dress made of a costly shawl, and strutted about with bearers holding huge umbrellas over their heads. This appearance in state vanished with Mr. Beadon's departure, when men returned to their senses and their usual economical habits. The show in which they indulged for a day or two must have been intended for the Lieutenant-governor's eyes; but whether he ever went down into the bazaar to see it I cannot say.

But to return to Dacca. Dacca was indebted for the honour of this second visit to the fact that the Koladyne wanted coals, which could only be had here. On the day following that of his honour's arrival he came on shore, but went no where except to Church, and then to the house of the Judge, Mr. Abercrombie, to tiffin. In the evening he entertained three or four of the gentlemen of the station at dinner on board his yacht, and early the next morning was off for Furreedpore. No preparations were made in Dacca for his reception, as very few people thought he would come our way, Dacca not being down on his programme. The first intimation we, or rather, the officials of the station had of his intended visit, was a curiosity of a letter addressed by the officiating post master of Burrisaul to the judge, which ran as follows:—

TO THE JUDGE OF DACCA.

Backergunge, June 26, 1863.

Sir,—By order of the Commissioner of Dacca division, I have the honour to inform you that the most Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has reached his Honour this station this day at five P.M., and will sail for Dacca within two or three days.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, SOSHEE BHOOSUN MOOKERJEE, Offg. Postmaster.

If it had been true that Mr. Beadon's honour had left him on the sly and "gone out a-wisiting," it must have been very satisfactory to him to have been able to arrest the truant, as he is reported to have done at Burrisaul. I am not aware that the officiating postmaster of that station is a B.A. of the Calcutta University; it is just as likely as not that he is; but if he is, I recommend him to Mr. Atkinson for employment as a deputy-inspector of schools. He will not be the first deputy-inspector that the Post-office has furnished.

THE BURNEY CASE.

Though quite ready to impute the best possible motives for the acts of our contemporaries, we are sorely puzzled to account for the appearance, in yesterday's Friend of India, of a very unworthy extract from the Army and Navy Gazette. Perhaps the most charitable explanation would be that the Serampore journalist was desirous of showing up the malignity, or carelessness, of Mr. Russell, when commenting on Indian topics; but, then, how is this to be reconciled with the fact that the article in question is headed, not "The Russell Blunder," but "The Burney Folly?" We really fear that, in the present instance, our charity is at fault, and that the Friend of India is not also the friend of Brigadier Burney. An enemy alone could have done this. The London journalist may possibly have been deceived by a correspondent interested in misleading him, but we will not pay our Serampore contemporary the poor compliment of supposing that he is ignorant of the real facts of the great Dinapore Scandal. Why, then, has he inserted a version of the case, which he must have known to be a tissue of falsehoods? He cannot, surely, be under the impression that the brigadier has resigned the service, or that he fled from the station to avoid meeting Colonel Willis. Neither can he have forgotten that there was only one letter written to Mrs. Willis, and which turns out to have been nothing worse than a slightly familiar epistle, such as elderly gentlemen frequently indite to young married ladies who do not object to accept of presents, and other little delicate attentions, from beaux of a certain age. There was not a line or word in that letter which could be construed as offensive or insulting to Mrs. Willis or her husband, and if our memory does not fail us, it was the brigadier himself who first wrote to Colonel Willis on the subject, expressing, at the same time, his regret for having offended that lady, and his ignorance of the nature of the offence. Colonel Willis was certainly in no haste to start "from the position he occupied up-country, with the determination of making the brigadier leave the service or stand a court-martial." Equally untrue is it that Captain Eyre was desisted by the Commander-in-Chief to send him a succinct account of all that had occurred. Such a proceeding would have been wholly irregular. And it is altogether false that Colonel Gordon "elicited from the brigadier an apology and a promise not to offend again," or that Captain Eyre ever threatened him with a horse-whipping. These statements are prefaced with the repudiation of all "desire to prejudice the case," and with the assertion that they rest on good authority. It is barely within the bounds of possibility that the London journalist has erred through ignorance, but there can hardly be any doubt that the Serampore journalist has erred through malice. To err is human, but to bear malice is—well, it may also be human, but it is scarcely Christian-like.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 17.

THE MUZBEE SIKH BLUNDER.

We understand that the proceedings of the court of inquiry which met in Fort William to inquire into the conduct of certain men of a Sikh regiment at Barrackpore, elicited, amongst other things, the fact that a native commissioned officer had been tampering with the Sikhs encamped on the plain here, and destined for employment as a pioneer corps in Ceylon. It appears that this man told them that they were not going across the sea as soldiers, but as coolies; that they would not be armed except with digging implements; and that when they got to Ceylon their own officers would be removed and they would be handed over to strange sahibs, with more to the same discouraging effect; a considerable portion of which was, unfortunately, but too true. Finally, he told his auditors that, if they did not believe him, all this was to be read in the newspapers here; which declaration was also in a great measure true. We do not know what will be the probable fate of this man, or what punishment will be meted out to him for this mischievous interference, but it is obvious that any evil influence which he may have exercised on the Sikhs bound for Ceylon could only have operated through the primary error which was committed in the arrangements for officering these men, and setting them to their new work after their arrival in the island. That these arrangements have irretrievably ruined the success of the Ceylon Pioneer Corps experiment is, we fear, almost certain, and we cannot see how much good can result from trying a man before a court-martial the proceedings of which would most probably go to prove that most of what he said was true, whatever may have been his motive for saying it. In matters such as this gross mismanagement, in the first instance, always gives a handle to discontented, mischievous, or seditious men with which to work out evil results; and few things could be more clumsily mismanaged and spoiled than the sending down of this Sikh corps to Ceylon, and endeavouring to utilise it when there.

The more the circumstances connected with the treatment of the Ceylon Pioneer Sikhs after their arrival on the island become known, the less must be the surprise felt at their running restive; in fact, to those who know the men, the wonder would be if they had not cut up rough, and made a demonstration of their feelings of dissatisfaction and disappointment. The impression amongst the authorities in Ceylon was, we must suppose, that these Sikhs were nothing more nor less than Indian coolies such as are sent to Mauritius or the West Indies; for the first thing done with them was to tell them off in gangs, and send them to work upon the public roads, without any semblance of military discipline or organization whatever. Had the Sikhs been put to work upon a purely military road, they would not, perhaps, have minded it so much; but when they found that they were repairing the common highways along which the Cingalese and everybody else passed to and fro upon their daily avocations, they naturally felt indignant; and, we believe attributed their not being armed to an intention of depriving them of the means of resenting the treatment they had received or of refusing to endure it any longer. Having got the Sikhs into this temper by their own injudicious and unfair treatment, the Ceylon wisacres then sent for British soldiers, to overawe them, possibly to coerce them, if necessary. These Sikhs, the Muzbbee portion of them more especially, are excellent military workmen; and at the siege of Delhi, where many of them were killed and wounded, and at several other places during the campaigns of 1857-58, they did most excellent and zealous service for us, carrying on the work assigned to them, in the trenches and everywhere else, vigorously and fearlessly, under the enemy's fire. But with us they were honorably armed, having the musket in reserve whilst using the spade or trenching tools, and the latent spirit of the soldier inherent in the race was sustained and developed by the treatment which they received from officers who knew how to command them, and whom they looked up to and trusted. What these Sikhs did in India their brethren would have done, and doubtless intended to do, in Ceylon had they been at all similarly treated and governed; but, managed by the pure British method, the whole thing has lamentably failed; and we understand that those Sikhs who have gone down to Ceylon will return, and the experiment of repairing and cleaning the Ceylon roads and streets by men of a proud and warlike race will be finally abandoned. We believe that even Major Macmullen now despairs of carrying out the project; and, if so, it may be looked upon as at an end.—Englishman, July 16.

MR. HARRER, OF THE AMRITSAR MISSION.

"He lived two lives in one," has been remarked of the late lamented Sir George Cornwall Lewis. This can only be predicted of the few. The many who are striving to live one life must be content with living it alone. Such a living is, however some may exceed it, after all, a life work, needing all life's energies, and all life's life. Perchance, their strife may be anticipated at times by our doing double work while the opportunity lasts. In our columns of Wednesday there was a notice of the death of the valued lay agent of the Amritsar Mission, Mr. Harrer. Our pages are often open to chronicle notices of the beautiful and the brave, the lofty and the mighty. A commissioner or an engineer, a general or a bishop, a painter or a poet, an editor of a newspaper, or an agent of a railway, a banker or a bankrupt. The words of the heathen poet still remain true—"Pallida mors aequo pulsat pede pauperum tabernas, regumque turres." Though many friends and noble men in spheres beneath us too frequently have their value and their worth buried with them, and their remembrance remaining only in the uncomfortable and ice-chilled hearts of their desolate widows and starving children, whilst the more elevated and influential find their absence the continued theme of prose-lament, and poetic effusion, a few remarks relative to the lay agent of the Amritsar Mission may not therefore be deemed out of place. He was an example of heroism in humble life, such as we do not always meet with. His occupation a shepherd in the fatherland of thought. He sold all that he had, and came out to India, accompanied by his wife and son, and two other German families, at the call of Dr. Procknow, of the Kotgur Mission, to be engaged in missionary labours, somewhat after the plan of the mechanic missionaries of the Chrischena Mission, near Basle. The little property which he realised ere he left his native land was all invested in the Mission at Kotgur, not a farthing of which he ever received again. His and his wife's salaries commenced on some 30 rupees a month. When Dr. Procknow returned home to take the Apostolic Gossnee's place, the bubble burst, and the idea which he had been aiming at resulted in an idea only. The little German colony he had planted remained to do the best it could, the Church Missionary Society not feeling itself called to take up agents whom one of their own missionaries had located in their Mission for certain subjective purposes known best to his own mind. He joined the Amritsar Mission some few years ago, his wife taking the superintendence of the Female Orphanage. Since then a continual sufferer from the diseases of this sun-scorched land, he has, by his consistent bearing and walk, won the esteem of all who knew him. To form an accurate estimate of his character we must mix among those with whom he dealt, more particularly a walk through the bazaars of Amritsar would best aid in this. He died on Sunday evening last, after some nineteen days of fever. His upright life and conversation, his simplicity of character, and above all, his sterling Christianity, were characteristics which would not remain unnoticed. When a man in humble life throws up his quiet life at home for life here, spending his little all in the cause, not fearing the difficulty of having to learn English for the European and Urdu for the native, nobly refusing the prospect of higher wages and less work, we must mark him as being out of the common stamp of men. Content on a salary of 40 rupees per month, his only fear was for his wife and son when gone—provision in the event of death it was impossible for him to make—it is left for others to do. The widow's salary must be added to, and the opportunity afforded of returning home, if desired, by a subscription for the purpose. To such an object many, who would not give to missions, would delight in contributing; 500 rupees would enable her to eke out her small income for some three years to come, and be a fitting "note" of the value in which we hold this heroism in the humble ranks, and the esteem in which we hold the hero, shepherd though he was in days gone by, who now rests from the warfare in life after having breasted many a wave and ridden through many a storm, a spirit noble in its nature, though marred in its work, now free for ever, the conflict past, the warfare over, the work done, the goal reached, the example followed, the pattern left, and the wife bereft. The earth he once loved now embraces her own, and what he has reaped is what he had sown.—Delhi Gazette, July 16.

THE LAST OF THE MONOPOLIES.

That must be either a very terrible evil or a very dangerous reform from which two such men as Mr. Laing and Sir Charles Trevelyan have successively shrunk with what, in other officials, would be considered political cowardice. The system of the Government of India growing opium by means of advances of money to certain cultivators, protected by a stern contract law denied to all private enterprise, has been for years the opprobrium of our administration in the East, has called down the denunciations of England, and has excited the earnest remonstrances of intelligent and conscientious officials in India. The old cry as to the immorality of the use of opium under any circumstances, has been silenced by the two convincing facts, that the abuse of opium in China is less than that of gin in England, and that the use of opium must stand or fall with that natural and, when well-regulated, healthy instinct for stimulants, which exists in every nation, and manifests itself in different forms. Truth will be only retarded by such attacks as have hitherto been made on the use of opium, for nature will assert its supremacy, and those who take a lower view of the subject will be able to retort with effect "physician, heal thyself." Bad as we English are making our subjects by our excise laws and indiscriminate licenses with the view of raising a revenue to be spent on judges and jails, it will be long before India or China approaches in wiliness the degradation of the lower and even middle-classes of the United Kingdom. No opium den comes near a gin-palace. The worst localities of Calcutta and Canton have yet to sink far before they reach the level of St. George's-in-the-East and the back slums of Liverpool and Glasgow. No thanks to either the Indian Governments or Asiatics for this. The former do their best to create in the latter a crave for active stimulants which nature rejects in a tropical country. But the real evil to be removed is the monopoly maintained by the Government of India in the growth of opium, and the consequent moral and national responsibility for all the evils which flow from it.

What we complain of is that, at a time when Mr. Laing knew the Government of Bengal to be investigating the evils of that monopoly, and after they had been laid bare in the Appendix to the Report of the Indigo Commission, he shirked the whole question at issue, and merely defended what no sensible man denied—the crave for stimulants as implanted by nature. What astonishes us still more, is that a financier of the high character and proved fearlessness of Sir Charles Trevelyan should have so ignored all this and remained silent as to public opinion on the subject, going out of his way, in his statement, to endorse all his predecessor had said, and to avoid all his predecessor had ignored. It is true that the question is one which concerns a net revenue of some four millions sterling from Bengal opium, but it is surely the duty, or at least worth the while, of the financial member of council to tell the public whether it is not true that the revenue might be unaffected, while the national conscience would be eased, by abolishing the last of the East India Company's monopolies.

For seven years this course has been urged by such high officials as the Board of Revenue, two Lieutenant-governors of the North-Western Provinces, and the Political Resident at Indore, who superintended the Bombay system of free cultivation, which ought to be substituted for the monopoly. In 1856 the North-West Board of Revenue recommended the Bombay system of licenses in place of the Bengal plan of Government manufacture. Mr. Colvin, the Lieutenant-governor, referred the papers to Sir Robert Hamilton, who reported favourably on the project. In 1857, we believe, the papers were destroyed by the rebels. Peace was restored, and in 1858 the Board of Revenue returned to the charge. The members were at that time officials so cautious and experienced as Mr. E. A. Reade and Mr. W. Muir. Again was the scheme sent to Sir Robert Hamilton for a renewal of his opinion. It was even stronger than before, though the destruction of papers in the mutiny did not permit him to go so fully into detail. What he advocated was the cultivation only by licensed persons, and licenses for manufacturing, as in the case of distilleries. In Malwa, the chief source of the opium exported at Bombay, there is a high rate on cultivation, a duty on the raw material going to the factory, a duty on the manufactured drug when it leaves the factory, and lastly, the pass or export duty for China. Yet, in spite of all these dues, levied in a native state and by purely Asiatic underlings, the Malwa opium competes with the Bengal drug. The Bombay system has practically proved that a high and uniform rate of duty will always secure a high degree of purity in the article that pays it. The only inconvenience to be apprehended is the unsettlement of trade and embarrassment to cultivators caused by a sudden change, and to prevent this Sir Robert Hamilton proposed that, as in the case of the slaveholders, Government should gradually retire from a monopoly which we have frequently shown to be as indefensible in the light of economics as of ethics, while it gives politically the lie to all our professions of disinterested benevolence in governing the natives of India.

Sir Robert Hamilton stated it as his conviction that Government would not sacrifice any revenue if it gradually contracted its sales, by giving timely notice that the amount brought to sale for a certain year would not exceed a specified number of chests, thus gradually extinguishing the monopoly. Meanwhile private cultivators could be licensed within a fixed area, and no difficulty would be found in limiting and controlling both cultivation and manufacture. A special tax of from Rs. 3 to 5 per acre might be levied, and manufacture would go on in licensed factories, which would take the place now held by Government and would make advances within a fixed area. To these factories cultivators would be bound to sell all the poppy juice, as they now do to Government. All opium leaving the factory would pay a duty, which would correspond with the revenue raised by the Calcutta sales. That intended for export would be branded in a manner which would secure its free export. Local sales would be only through licensed vendors, who would be bound to purchase from a licensed factory. No opium would leave the factory but for these two objects. No doubt there would be some fraud, especially in the stage between the cultivator and the manufactory, and stringent penal laws would be necessary to check illicit cultivation, manufactories, and sale. But this is nothing more than exists at present. The system would admit of the cultivation being limited at pleasure, and confined to any localities the Government might indicate. It might also be introduced experimentally into any district in which the Government system at present prevails. Why there should be any greater demoralisation under this plan than under the present, in which the whole influence and resources of Government are brought to bear on extending the production of the article—over the yearly expansion of which the department is at no pains to conceal its exultation—we cannot see.

It may interest those, especially in England, who will not admit even the exceptional necessity for a contract law, to know the stern penalty under which Government recovers its advances. We quote the tenth section of the Opium Act XIII. of 1857. "If it shall be found that any cultivator, who has received advances from Government, has not cultivated the full quantity of land for which he received such advances, he shall be liable to a penalty of three times the amount of the advances received for the land which he has failed to cultivate, and the same penalty may be adjudged by the deputy agent or collector, on the complaint of the sub-deputy agent or other officer as aforesaid. Any person dissatisfied with the judgment of the deputy agent or collector may appeal to the agent, and the decision of the agent shall be final." The cultivator's landlord or creditor is not allowed to distrain the poppy, as he may any other crop for rent, nor is the former allowed illegally to enhance the rent of poppy land under a special penalty of treble the amount of excess. Embezzling opium is punished by a penalty of ten times the price of the drug, or a fine of Rs. 500, while the person who receives opium from a cultivator is liable to a fine of Rs. 1,000. How these clauses are enforced, and how the cultivator is defrauded of a portion of the price paid by Government, Sir Charles Trevelyan will find set forth in the confessions of the opium agents in the Appendix to the Indigo Report, and in the inquiries and minute of the present Lieutenant-governor of Bengal. The question must be grappled with, and no one could do it better than Sir Charles Trevelyan, at a time when our financial credit is so stable, and our financial prosperity is so unprecedented.—Friend of India.

THE SEPOY AS HE WAS.

sepoys mutinied, to the time when the whole native army was fixed at half its former strength, the irregular system was adopted and new Articles of War were discussed, the subject has disappeared from public view. But because certain reforms have been promised or effected, we are not to suppose that all is well henceforth. These reforms were more of a financial than a military character, and nothing but the most incessant vigilance will make a hundred and fifty thousand Asiatic mercenaries at once true to their salt and useful soldiers. How little we know of their disposition, of the motives which actuate them and the principles on which they should be treated, may be imagined from the fact that the best authorities still disagree as to the cause of the mutiny.

In the magazine published by Messrs. Chesson and Woodhall, of Bombay, we are presented with two instalments of what is certainly the genuine autobiography of a sepoy. The facts stated are so illustrative of native life and of the merits as well as weaknesses of the sepoy as he was before 1857, that they may well be pondered in connection with the new army which has superseded the old Bengal sepoys. Seetaram, a native of Oudh, after being forty-eight years in our service, returned to his village. Having "eaten seven severe wounds and received six medals," which he proudly displays on his breast, in the year 1861 he pens his autobiography, that he may prove "there were some who remained faithful and were not affected by the wind of wickedness which lately blew over Hindostan and which blighted the army." He entered our army in 1812, and after eight months' drill, was pronounced fit for the ranks. His first difficulty arose from the great curse of Asiatic life—he omitted to present the usual bribe of sixteen rupees to the drill havildar. Of this sum five rupees went to the European sergeant, who was attached to each company in the old army. This class of sergeants is truthfully described as containing a few who treated the sepoys well because they could speak the vernacular, but as consisting generally of men who struck and abused them in vile terms. Seetaram complains of the tight uniform and heavy accoutrements of the sepoys. Of the eight officers in his regiment, the "real saheb, such as we had imagined all sahebs to be," was the captain of his own company. He is compared to Hunooman in height, and bore the name of the Pelwan Saheb, from his superiority as a wrestler to the men of his company. All the officers bore similar nicknames, one being the "damn" saheb, "because he always said that word when he gave an order." Most of the officers were good sportsmen, "but now a-days the sahebs do not go out all day in the hot weather; formerly they bore the heat as well as, if not better than the black man." Most of them kept Hindustani women, who had great influence in the regiment. The Mussulman and low caste sepoys often induced the officers to take their female relations, and the latter pretended to great influence, which they used to exact bribes from the sepoys.

"The sahebs then could speak our language much better than they can now, and mixed more with us. The officers have now to pass the chota ya burra imtiham (the P. H. or P.), still they do not understand our language so well, although they have to read books. I seldom have seen a saheb who could read a book or a letter after he had been before the committee. The only language they learn is the pajee bole, which they hear from their servants, and which is not fit to be used before ameer (gentlemen). In those days the sahebs often gave nautes to the regiment, and attended all games; they had the men out with them while hunting—at least all those who liked to go: since then they seldom attend nautes, for their padre sahebs have told them it is wrong, and they have done, and still are doing, many things to estrange the saheb from the sepoy. When I was a sepoy, the captain of my company would have some of his men at his house all day, and talked to them. Of course many went with the intent of gaining something for themselves—to induce him to recommend them to the colonel for promotion, or this or that appointment in the regiment; but numbers went because they liked the saheb, who always treated them as if they were his own children. I am a very old man now, and my words are true; I have lived to see great changes in the saheb log;

I now have seen that many officers only speak to their men when obliged, and evidently show that it is irksome to them, and try to get rid of them as soon as possible. One saheb told me he never knew what to say: the sahebs always knew what to say, and how to say it, when I was young. If I speak boldly, your lordship will grant me pardon."

Seetaram complains of the harsh treatment of the "lall-coatie," or Queen's officers, since the mutiny. The Company's, and not the Queen's officers, he says, alone have a right to execrate the mutineers for their brutal conduct. Seetaram was called a "black pig," when in the force which relieved Lucknow; but when he made chupatties for the officers of the 13th and 41st Foot in Cabul he was a "good fellow." He ascribes the sad deterioration of officers in these degenerate days to "julturungees," or hastiness of temper, but "who can combat against fate?" The good days are gone. The common soldiers, who used to be comrades of the sepoys, and get the latter to take sentry duty in the heat over their rum casks, and supply them with food, are "a different caste" now. They are smaller and inferior men, and speak only Hindustani abuse. The newer a regiment is the worse it is. The 17th Foot called the sepoys brothers, and the 10th Lancers avoided their cooking places; but now, alas, is it not said that all the best English soldiers were killed by the Russ? Old Seetaram has seen only boys in regiments of late years, and it was thought during the mutiny that the Russ having killed all the Sirkar's soldiers, only boys could be found in Belait. How different in the olden days! In the Nepal war, the first Seetaram was engaged in, "the gora log lost nearly two whole companies; still they never became dispirited, but went again and again at the fort; they were like young cocks." When, in the Pindaree war, "Hindostan was tormented by demons from the lowest hell (Ram! Ram! Seetaram!—may they never come again!)" our Sepoy considered himself a tried soldier. He comes to the conclusion that the English are always invincible, because they do not care for defeat.

"Four times have I seen a European regiment driven back with terrible slaughter, yet their fifth attack was as fierce as the first. A wonderful thing is, they do not get into confusion when their leader is killed—another officer takes his place, and the men obey him just the same. Now, in a native army, if the sirdar or leader is killed, the whole army falls into confusion, and generally takes to flight—the men will not follow the next leader. And the chief reason for this great difference is, that rajahs or nawabs generally fight for their own benefit, and they collect all the plunder in their own to-ahkannas (collars) to spend upon themselves and their favourites alone, not for the good of their subjects; so of course the people do not care about the war, any further than by it there is the chance of getting plunder, or of rising to power. Another reason is, few princes of Hindostan ever regularly pay their troops, and when an army is allowed to pay itself by plunder there can be no real discipline, although every individual may be brave. Princes seldom grant pensions to the families of those killed in their service, and care but little about the soldier when once he is disabled."

The fighting propensity of so ill-paid an animal as the English soldier so astonishes Seetaram, that he ascribes it all to the love of drink—to the "umrit panee," the water of life, which he believes the doctors put in the soldier's grog. Of this he is certain, that the English soldiers "worship grog, give their lives for it, and lose their lives by it."

To the close of the Pindaree war the last published instalment of Seetaram's autobiography extends. Could any revelations be more instructive, whether in a moral or military sense? What is true of the sepoy is true of every pure Hindoo, that the gulf between him and his English ruler is wider than ever it was. The old man bewails that officers do not now live with women of the country, do not attend nautes, and wrestle with their men and shoot tigers all day long in the sun, and fraternise with the heathen by degrading themselves to his level. "Their padre sahebs have told them it is wrong." Yes! Seetaram, this may be beyond your philosophy, but come what may, the sahebs must do what is right to themselves, as well as to you and your countrymen. At the same time, they ought to do what is right in the right way, and, we believe, the consequence of such a course of action will be not only for the good of the English power, but for the elevation of those to whose level in a godless age officers degraded themselves. Our experiences in the Punjab prove that the Asiatic does not fear what he understands, and is not too stolid not to admire earnestness combined with manliness. What the sensuality of half a century ago strove to effect, the fascination of the character, the devotedness of the life, and the almost fanaticism of the faith of such officers as the Lawrences, Nicholson, Edwardes, Lake, Abbott, and others, have in less than a decade accomplished. And in proportion as these qualities are displayed by the English in India, and as our systems, whether of civil or military administration allow them full play, will our power at once be stable, and our subjects become the inheritors of a future which must issue in a Christian Church, and national independence.—Friend of India.

ROGONAUTH PUNDIT v. RAMDHONE SHAW.

Sir Mordaunt Wells had good reason to say that the case of "Rogonauth Pundit v. Ramdhone Shaw" was a very difficult one, because of the weakness of the evidence on both sides. We wonder if the learned judge is altogether satisfied with his own decision. For our own part we have read the report of the trial again and again, without arriving at any definite conclusion either way. The outline of the case is easily sketched, and some of the incidental details are quaint and picturesque. In the year 1825 there died a Brahmin named Koober Pundit, of whom nothing more is known than that he was the owner of two cottahs of land in Dhurmatollah Lane, on which he established a Takoor, or Idol, and let out the rest of the ground to tenants for the support of his graven image. He acted, in short, like "the man Micah," who "had an house of gods, and made an ephod and teraphim, and consecrated one of his sons, who became his priest," only that instead of a son he chose a nephew, one Panchoo Pundit, to be the Sabayet of his Takoor. There is nothing indeed to show how this plot of ground came into the possession of Koober Pundit, but in all probability the antecedents of the pious Brahmin were quite as good as that of the "man of Mount Ephraim, whose name was Micah." The establishment of an idol does not seem to be altogether a bad speculation. The daily expenses are estimated at seven pice a day, but the offerings of worshippers frequently amount to a considerable sum, and it must be rather a pleasant sensation to possess a sort of pocket edition of a Special Providence. Panchoo, as the defendant deposed, used to carry the idol about and sing, and lived by the gifts he got. In the pre-Jovian era, as Juvenal tells us, each of the gods took his meals by himself,—prandebat sibi quisque deorum,—and the same unsocial practice appears to prevail with the gods of the Hindoo mythology. But though its meals were solitary, Panchoo's Takoor seems to have enjoyed a fine healthy appetite, and to have disposed—vicariously—of rice, plantains, and other good things to any given amount, especially when the small-pox was raging—the favourite means adopted by the idol of informing the pious that it was hungry, just as an elephant in a menagerie rings a bell for cakes and oranges. The present Sabayet candidly admitted that he acted as the idol's "digestor," eating and enjoying the offerings of the pious. But the most extraordinary statement made in connection with this absurd and childish affair, was to the effect that the idol was originally endowed by a Mr. Beretta, who is described as "a well known Portuguese gentleman of strict Roman Catholic views." The views of this very tolerant Portuguese gentleman may have been strict enough, but his practice savours of the very lax notions of the old Jesuit missionaries who first came out to India and out-brahminised the Brahmins. Our up-country readers will be reminded of a late popular character at Delhi, who "hedged" by building a church, a mosque, and a temple, so that in any case, come what might, his "book" was safe.

But let us return to the case itself from which we have wandered only too far a-field.

Koobar Pundit dying in, or about, the year 1825 left his nephew, Panchoo Pundit, in possession of the Takoor, and of the lands and tenements pertaining thereunto. After a while Panchoo associated with himself one Tarrachund Pundit, to whom he made over his religious "properties" some twelve years ago, and then quitted Calcutta. Tarrachund was gathered to his fathers about this time last year, after bequeathing the idol and its endowment to Rogonauth Pundit, the plaintiff in this action, who asserts that he has ever since acted as landlord and collected the rents. A claimant, however, to the possession of half a cotta of this quasi-consecrated land came forward last February in the person of Ramdhone Shaw, the defendant in the present action, who alleged that he held certain deeds of mortgage and absolute conveyance granted to him by the deceased Panchoo Pundit. The plaintiff, of course, declared these deeds to be forgeries, and it is admitted by Mr. Justice Wells that the evidence on one side is nearly as strong as that on the other. The defendant's statement is that Panchoo borrowed 24 rupees of him on the 27th May, 1851, on the security of a mortgage on a part of the land, and that being unable to repay this small sum he sold a certain quantity of land equal in value to 124 rupees. To this extent he has been endeavouring to enforce payment of rent to himself, and to prevent him from doing so this action has been brought by the plaintiff. The learned judge was very naturally surprised at a mortgage being given for so small a sum as 24 rupees, and is reported to have made the very irrelevant remark that in England I. O. U.'s are given for the smallest sums. Undoubtedly, and in India cowries enter into the national currency; but what has one or the other statement to do with the case in point? There is really nothing more astonishing in effecting a mortgage for £28 than in selling land to raise £12-8. Either instance is simply an illustration of the infinitesimal division of landed property in India, and of the scarcity of currency in proportion to population. The learned judge further lays great stress on the fact that the witnesses to this deed are still alive, whereas in most cases forged deeds purport to have been witnessed by persons who are dead and gone. It is hardly safe, however, to lay down such a rule as this in Bengal, where witnesses can be procured for a trifle to attest any statement. At the same time far be it from us to insinuate that recourse was had in the present instance to any subornation of evidence. A judge who tries a case is far more competent to estimate aright the character of the witnesses than an unprofessional reader, who merely draws his inferences from a necessarily incomplete report. But we cannot think that Sir Mordaunt Wells was justified in saying that Bissonauth Doss, a clerk in Mr. Goodall's office, drew upon his imagination for the fact that he had seen a tenant, named Jadub, paying his rent to the plaintiff. There is no place for imagination in a Court of Law. This man deposed either to a truth or to a falsehood. Which was it? It is useless to throw up a cloud of dust round this part of the case, by citing "a saying by a very great man." In classic times when gods and goddesses descended upon earth and took an active part in human affairs, they are said now and again to have carried off in a cloud some favourite hero over-matched in single combat. But it cannot be permitted any judge, however able or trustworthy, to assume such a dangerous function, and to gloss over the statement of a credible and respectable witness.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 13.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR MORDAUNT WELLS.—We are very glad to see that both in the European and the native sections of our community there exists an honourable desire to recognise in some public manner the important services which have been rendered by Sir Mordaunt J. Wells, now that he is about to retire from his arduous labours. The length of the proceedings of the municipality prevents us from writing at any length this morning on the subject. But we put forward a statement, more effective in its figured details than could be any mere figures of speech, as to the extent and efficiency of the labours, which have necessitated that resignation which will deprive India far too soon of such a zealous and sound administrator of the law. We say sound upon the best of grounds. Only six appeals, and out of those only two reversals of judgment show how close has been the application of "the legal mind" to all the enormous mass of heterogeneous cases which have passed before Sir M. L. Wells within a single year.

OFF-RECKONINGS.—A point of great interest to officers of the staff corps has been settled by a letter just received in this country from Sir Chas. Wood, the purport of which will soon, we should suppose, be published in the three presidencies. A lieutenant-colonel in the staff corps becomes entitled to his off-reckonings, as they are still called, with his promotion to colonel, after twelve years' service in the former rank. It has now been ruled by the Secretary of State for India, that a lieutenant colonel in the staff corps can, after six years' service in that rank in India, retire to England on lieutenant-colonel's pay—£365 a year—and there, during the next six years, await his promotion and off-reckonings. We suppose that this move is intended to quicker promotion in the staff corps; at any rate it is one of the few rational and liberal concessions which have emanated from Sir Charles Wood.—Englishman, July 22.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—We regret to state that an accident, attended with loss of life, occurred at the Mullarpore station, on the East Indian Railway, on Wednesday last. The particulars, as far as we can learn, are as follows. The 6 A.M. goods train left the Synthia station at the proper time, and was followed by a ballast train. On the arrival at Mullarpore the goods train had to attach some waggons for another station, and when stopping for that purpose, the ballast train came up at fair speed, and ran into the goods train. The driver of the ballast engine, named Waters, had his leg severely crushed, and was taken into Ramporehant, where his leg was amputated; but the unfortunate man died, from the injuries received, about midnight. Two or three coolies were also slightly bruised from the collision. From inquiries made, we understand that at the time of the accident, about 3 P.M., there was a storm of rain beating into the face of the driver of the ballast train, and this, it is supposed, prevented him from seeing the goods train until too late to stop. There is, we think, some blame attributable to the unfortunate driver who met with his death, as he should have stopped at the Mullarpore station to inquire if he could go on. The railway authorities are, we understand, investigating the case.

STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.—A society designated the "Strangers' Friend Society" has been originated at Bombay, for the express object of affording pecuniary assistance to deserving destitute Europeans. The undertaking has the support of Sir Bartle Frere, who is the Patron;

* The sum of Rs 38,50,600 claimed in the suit of Olly Bukh Khan and Co., against the Secretary of State in Council for India has been omitted, the sum claimed being exceptional in amount.

† In four cases decrees were affirmed, and in the other two cases decrees were reversed.

the Chief Justice and the Commander-in-Chief being Vice-Patrons. The Committee include the names of the leading men in the Island,—merchants, bankers, barristers, medical men, and traders being fully represented. Relief will be afforded by this Society to all Europeans, irrespective of creed or country,—the aim of the undertaking being, to quote the words of the advertisement, "not to allow any deserving European stranger to opprobrium that now rests upon the European community in India, of allowing its deserving poor to depend upon casual alms." It is a noticeable fact, that the Bombay residents make no appeal to the Native section of the community for aid in carrying out their benevolent purpose, but it is announced that donations, if tendered, will be gratefully accepted. The object of the society is exclusively to benefit our own countrymen, and if the European portion of the Bombay community can effect this without calling in the help of the natives, so much the better—at any rate, it would for many reasons be more desirable. A short time since the question of European vagrancy in Bombay attracted much attention, and more than one scheme was suggested to meet the difficulty. We are glad to find that, at length, a society has been formed, which, from the influential position of the gentlemen associated with it, promises not only to relieve all real distress among Europeans, but to accomplish that end in a thorough and far more satisfactory way than could possibly have been hoped for, had their relief depended upon the individual help of the charitably disposed. Our local Benevolent Society and District Charitable Society work wonders in relieving the distress among our countrymen in this city, when we consider the very limited means at their disposal; but that there is ample room for a society identical with that at work in Bombay cannot for a moment be questioned. We fear that the project started a few months ago by some benevolent individuals, for the purpose of providing employment for deserving Europeans, or, failing that, procuring passages for them to Australia or England, has been allowed to drop altogether. At any rate, we have been unable to ascertain whether or not anything has been done. We feel satisfied that if the matter were taken in hand energetically, the most influential men in this presidency would gladly come forward in support of such a worthy undertaking. That aid is urgently required cannot be denied, for European distress in this city has for some time past been increasing. We commend the subject to the attention of those who have leisure and means to work out the problem.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 16.

SIMLA, July 5.—The night of Monday last was perfectly beautiful; the incessant rain had ceased, the moon shone bright, the stars were brilliant, and the air was cool and refreshing. His lordship the Governor General had recovered from his late illness, and her ladyship received her friends, for she was "At Home" on that evening. Perhaps of all the "At Homes" as yet the one on Monday was the most successful. The members of the Glee Club were invited, and their voices cheered and charmed the noble host and hostess, as well also as their honoured guests. Dancing was kept up with much spirit, considering the enormous difficulties which stood in the way of it. Prodigious crinolines, long trains, small rooms, and a crowded assemblage militate somewhat against the delights of a dance, and on this occasion they stood forth as stumbling-blocks in the way of true enjoyment. There are those who, in a ball room, and especially when the room is crowded, start off on a "round" dance like galvanised rabbits, rush full tilt the one against the other, politely beg each other's pardon, and hate each other for the rest of the evening. Spacious apartments are, therefore, required to prevent collision, and to secure ease and comfort to those so "passionately" fond of dancing. This entertainment at Government House lasted, so report has it, to an unusually late hour, when the Earl and Countess of Elgin graciously bowed their guests away, and the moon shone a heavenly smile upon those who wended their way thence to their own homes.

CAPTURE OF THE NANA.—Major Davidson's official account of the capture of the Nana Dhundoo Punt is still deficient in actual proof of the identity of the prisoner with the miscreant of Bithoor. It will be observed that the only person who has recognised the Nana is a Sergeant-Major of the Royal Artillery, who professes to have frequently seen him at Meerut. As the real Nana may be fairly supposed to have greatly changed in appearance during the last six years, we can only accept this identification for what it is worth. We may be sure that the Sergeant-Major, whose name is not given, was quite disposed to discover a likeness, and great caution is necessary in receiving the testimony of any European to the identity of a native whom he has not seen for many years, and even formerly only at considerable intervals. However, should the prisoner eventually prove to be the real Simon Pure, we presume he will, if convicted, be hanged in front of General Wheeler's entrenchments at Cawnpore. At best, it is but a sorry satisfaction to have caught the miserable wretch, whose life must have become an almost intolerable burden to him. And even when he is hanged other pretenders will arise, as in the case of Tantia Topee, whose "double" is reported to have been seen at Salumba at the head of 5,000 followers. Unable to contradict the latter statement, we must content ourselves with expressing our entire disbelief in its veracity.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 22.

POLYGAMY AND EARLY MARRIAGES.—A native correspondent informs us that a number of influential native gentlemen have drawn up petitions for presentation to Government for the abolition of Kulin Polygamy and the prohibition of infantine marriages. Our correspondent wishes the movement every success, and deems well of it, holding, however, that unless the native community numerously backs it up, Government will be unable to do anything. The institutions referred to, evil as they are, cannot be put down by Government action, nor is it likely Government will attempt to try to so put them down. Government might just as well essay to suppress idolatry by special enactment as polygamy or early marriages. If there are really many natives sincerely desirous of the reforms they speak about petitioning for, they may do much by combined action among themselves. Let but a hundred or even a score heads of families join, and pledge themselves against polygamy and early marriage, and a promising beginning will have been made. But if the influential leaders of an influential caste were to prohibit the practices by the members of that caste, the first death-blow would indeed have been struck. If a few castes could even be got to pledge themselves that their daughters should not be given in marriage until they had attained the age of puberty (when the tenets of Hindooism require they shall be married), great and beneficial, physically and morally, would be the reform indeed. We have, however, little faith in the efforts of people who have not the moral courage to set an example. Baboo Trannauth Chatterjee sets himself up as a reformer, and yet writes himself down an encourager of all he condemns, vide his letter in our correspondence columns. Government cannot interfere to put down the practices our correspondent would see abolished, until native public opinion is ripe for the legislative condemnation of those practices. The evil institutions are indigenous, and the people themselves must uproot them, or at least display an unmistakable desire to see them uprooted by others.—Phoenix.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.—The Observer, in reply to the attempt of the Friend of India to prove Calcutta the proper seat of the Supreme Government, says:—"The Friend of India is seriously alarmed lest the capital of India should be removed from Calcutta, and has published a remonstrance against the step, which is one of the most curious specimens of reasoning we ever met with. We insert it below, that the reader may judge for himself. The Mogul emperor Toghluks placed the seat of his empire at Toghluksabad. Toghluksabad was at a distance from the sea—and is now in ruins. Therefore, if we place the seat of our empire at a distance from the sea, we are preparing the way for its extinction. 'Even Indian history,' says our contemporary, 'teaches by examples!' We might pursue the same line of argument further. The Mogul emperors wore beards—we must on no account allow our Viceroy to do the same. Even Indian history teaches by example. We might with more reason attribute the fall of the Mogul empire, among other causes, to the attempt to establish a capital of India at all—to unite all its distant Provinces under one government. This has always failed; and the present system of a 'Supreme Government' only weakens the administration of the great Provinces which are subordinated to it. But if our Serampore contemporary is right, and it is of great importance that there should be a capital of India near the sea—then the argument is conclusive against Calcutta and in favour of Bombay. Calcutta is not very near the sea—there is a river of tedious and difficult navigation between. Calcutta is notoriously unhealthy. Calcutta is half as far again from Europe as Bombay. Calcutta has no hill sanatorium within reach; the nearest being separated from it by a pestilential region which it is sometimes fatal to attempt to cross. Calcutta is not in itself situated so as to be a great emporium of international commerce, as Bombay is; for Bombay receives the imports and exports exchanged between Europe and Asia; and even with the advantage which Calcutta possesses of being the seat of empire, its population is probably not greater than that of Bombay is now. The attempt of the Friend to trace the change of policy pursued by Sir Charles Wood in this respect to personal and little causes is not, in our opinion, at all successful. It is not because Lord Canning had a grudge against the European residents there, or because Mr. Beadon wants to have no superior by his side, that the seat of administration is being changed. It is because a conviction has long been growing among the public in general, and public men, that Calcutta is an unsuitable place—unhealthy, inconveniently situated, and too remote from Europe. Governor-generals will not live there, and cannot, with safety to their lives; and for purposes of commerce, the merchants are talking of establishing another port nearer the sea—at Mutlah. What, then, remains to be said in favour of Calcutta?"

OFFICIAL MOVEMENTS IN THE PUNJAB.—We (Lahore Chronicle) mentioned in our last that Mr. McLeod would retain office as financial commissioner for two years beyond the period when he would have had to vacate it had the provisions of the "thirty-five years' order" been enforced in his case—and we have now to add that Sir Robert Montgomery has been asked to retain office as lieutenant governor for one year beyond the usual period. Mr. Roberts (on dit) will continue to act as judge of the High Court in the room of Mr. L. S. Jackson, but vacates his seat in the Legislative Council, which will be taken in October next by Mr. R. H. Davies. We have heard that Mr. Thornton is likely to become secretary to Government in the Punjab on the present officiating incumbent going home a few months hence.

PETITION FOR MR. GLINN.—Our readers will be glad to hear that a petition is being filled up rapidly with signatures, praying the Viceroy to commute to a free pardon the sentence of one month's imprisonment and 200 Rs. fine, passed upon Mr. Glinn, the railway engineer, for causing the death of a native. The circumstances are such that we feel confident Lord Elgin will not deny the prayer. There was a great fire at the Nulhaty Railway Station, and much valuable property belonging to the company was endangered. The deceased native was seated a short distance from the conflagration, enjoying the sight with philosophic equanimity. Mr. Glinn remonstrated with him on his apathy. He leisurely replied that as he had saved his own property he did not consider that he was bound to assist in saving any belonging to the company. The patience of Job himself could not have stood this. Whether European or native, the ungrateful servant who could utter such words deserved instant punishment.

Mr. Glinn gave him one slap and kick. He moved hastily away, tripped over some rubbish, fell—and was taken up dead. For this, the pures accident, a gentleman to whose benevolence and unflinching gentleness thousands of the work people under him spontaneously testify—is subjected to an ignominious punishment, because, forsooth, the justice who tried the case is "under the impression" that Glinn had kicked the native repeatedly when he was down. Mr. Glinn declined to enter any defence or to cross-examine any of the witnesses, hence this deplorable result.—Delhi Gazette.

COAL IN BORNEO.—The second attempt to work coal profitably in Labuan, off Borneo, has been successful. The Coal Company of which Sir J. D. Elphinstone, Bart., is chairman, have chartered a screw collier, capable of delivering about 1,000 tons each voyage, to ply between Labuan, Singapore, Hong Kong, and other eastern ports. They will thus be enabled to carry out the contracts made with her Majesty's Government and the Peninsula and Oriental Company. Our ships-of-war stationed near Borneo approve highly of the coal shipped from Port Victoria. Like the Assam coal, it is good for gas, and the company expect to supply the new gas companies at all the ports of the East. There can be no doubt that a quarter of a century hence our children will wonder at our want of enterprise in getting all our coal from England. Cheap coal on the spot means high speed and low fares.

BURMAH.—Thus far it cannot be said that the prospects of English trade in Burmah under the Treaty are brilliant. The King dreads to see Englishmen in his country, and is evidently determined to do all he can, short of active opposition, to keep them out. By making every article of produce a monopoly he is destroying the industry of his fine country, and may perhaps bring on a dispute with us. The Treaty allows British subjects "to purchase whatever they may require," and unless the Burmese were to announce openly that particular articles are a Government monopoly, we must uphold a British subject in possession of what he has bought. We doubt if they will make this public announcement. They will think it beneath their dignity to do so, and must either resign the monopoly or come into collision with us.—Friend of India.

THE SIKH CORPS.—It is confidently said the Sikh Corps at Barrackpore is to go to China. We (Phoenix) mentioned a confident report that Government intended the Sikh Regiment at Barrackpore should go to China. We are inclined to think this report will have its origin in the not unlikely circumstance of the Government of India having been directed from home to send some eight or ten Sikh, or other corps, to Japan. If so, the expedition will be a popular one. The memory of Chinese loot still survives in the minds of the Sikhs and other natives who formed the last China expedition, and should a Japan expedition be ordered, it is likely that more regiments than one will be wanting; and more than one will be found desirous of forming part of the force; that is, unless something mischievous should get into the wind.

THE DINAPORE COMMAND.—His Excellency the Governor-general has been pleased to appoint Major-general Sir Stuart Corbett, K.C.B., of the Bengal Infantry, to the Divisional Staff of the Army, in succession to Major-general George Campbell, whose tour expires on the 6th August. Major-general Campbell will retire with the respect, esteem, and good wishes of all who have served under him, and are capable of appreciating his merits as a gallant soldier and most honourable gentleman.

MUSSOORIE.—The Allahabad Gazette gives some interesting information respecting the railway. Plate-laying has been finished to Mirzapore, and it is expected that the whole line from Benares to Allahabad will be completed by the end of the year, with breaks at the Tonse and Juma bridges. Plate-laying beyond Allyghur has advanced fifteen miles, but has now stopped, owing to the want of ways—a scarcity for which the railway authorities are likely to be severely censured. We hear that the railway will be open to Delhi by October next.

THIBET.—Lord Elgin and Sir F. Bruce have, with what we cannot but think an excess of prudence hardly becoming the latter, who lately explored Mongolia, objected to Captain Smyth entering Thibet, even on his own charges. Surely, if Lord Elgin means to keep his promise to the Royal Geographical Society, he will not stop this expedition, when Colonel Phayre guarantees its probable safety. For it is not only trade and science which are interested in it. Colonel Phayre, who is the first living authority on the Indo-Chinese countries, asserts that, however visionary Captain Sprye's railway project may be, his proposal of an electric telegraph from Rangoon to Canton is "worthy of support" and "practicable at an outlay comparatively small." The line would run, in continuation of the Indian system now extending to the frontier, to Esmok, Canton, Hong Kong, and up the coast to Shanghai and Peking. Our merchants in China are sure to assist him eagerly. Lord Elgin has too much experience of both India and China not to support it. The Persian Gulf cable is to be laid in the autumn, and would form the only sea portion from Peking to Calais. If the proposed expedition were at once sanctioned, and the support of Sir F. Bruce and the Foreign Office obtained, there is no reason why the end of 1864 should not see Peking and Shanghai, and ultimately our Japanese ports, in instant communication with Calcutta and London. Surely the difficulties of the five hundred miles from Shwayyee to Canton are less than on the Mekran coast, where we have already laid down three hundred miles of wire. Political events too sadly teach us at present the danger of depending on Russia for our China intelligence, any more than on America for communication with our colonies on the Pacific.—Friend of India.

THE MUZBEE SIKHS AGAIN.—We (Delhi Gazette) hear that a party of H.M.'s 50th Regiment, now stationed in Ceylon, was sent up from Colombo to Trincomalee to "take care of" a detachment of the Muzbee Sikh Ceylon Pioneers, to whose conduct since arriving on the island we have before referred. This event justifies us in calling attention to the remarks which we made at the time, that these Sikhs were sent down to Ceylon in charge of only two officers, who, on arrival at Colombo, were to make the Muzbees over to some other "party," and return to India. The Muzbee Sikhs are, when understood and properly managed, a very easily governed class of men; but how on earth any rational person could for a moment calculate upon their being efficiently commanded and utilised by British officers who do not understand a word of their, or of any other Oriental language, and have never set foot in India, is more than our powers of imagination can conceive. It is a pure case of mismanagement and absurd action from the commencement, for had a proper proportion of Indian officers been sent down and retained with these men, all would have gone smoothly and satisfactorily. Is this, we would ask with some anxiety, the way in which matters of this kind will be generally managed some years hence when the officers brought up in the Company's school shall have passed away, and Indian affairs shall be managed by English rules? We sincerely hope not; but we have our misgivings.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—The proceedings of the last meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, which we print elsewhere, will be found of unusual interest at this time. The Company's contract with the Pacha of Egypt expires next year, and then they hope for better terms. A sensible shareholder of the name of Jones, grieved at the success of the French line, urged the importance of "low rates." He also called for more speed in the company's passages, instancing the Holyhead and Dublin steamers which run at twenty miles an hour. The chairman's reply, that these vessels were tied down to minutes was an evasion, for India would be content with an average speed of fourteen miles an hour, and on no line is the weather so bad as in the Irish Sea. The company offers to convey troops overland as cheaply as any other. This is a fortunate thing for officers, for another company is prepared to convey soldiers and their wives at £25 a head, and officers and their families at £50 a head overland. If only the thin edge of the wedge were admitted it might be found that civilians could be taken at the same rate as officers, and the present high charges would be reduced.—Friend of India.

SOLDIERS' WORKSHOPS.—We are glad to hear that Sir Hugh Rose's attempt to establish regimental workshops has not wholly failed, though it cannot, on the other hand, be said to have brilliantly succeeded. The Sindian points out one or two drawbacks that mar the project. The Board appointed to fix the rates for work done is composed of officers, whose awards are the source of much dissatisfaction, more especially as some of the work is done for themselves, and the suspicion arises that they consider their own interests. We do not think there is any ground for such an imputation; but in managing soldiers it should never be forgotten that it is not sufficient to treat them with justice—they should also be convinced that they are so treated. Another fault in the present system is, that the men are not allowed personally to buy the materials for their work; but are compelled to procure them through the Quarter-Master, who is suspected of irregular dealings, in consequence. In reference to the subject of workshops, the Madras Athenæum strongly deprecates a proposal made by a correspondent, that a committee of officers' wives should be formed, to establish and regulate a workshop for soldiers' wives. Any such attempt would be regarded as officious meddling. The plan is, to procure work privately for those willing to take it. The soldiers' wives will never submit to dictation as to prices at the hands of ladies who, in nine cases out of ten, are no judges of work done.

ST. JAMES'S CHURCH AT DELHI.—The Delhi Journal regrets that the memorial windows of stained glass, recently arrived from England for St. James's Church, Delhi, were so carelessly packed that they are broken to pieces. The proprietors of the Skinner Estate presented Rs. 1,000 towards these memorial windows in their ancestor's church. The ball and cross of the church, which the rebels could not dislodge in 1857, and which are perforated with scores of musket balls, have been taken down, the cupola which supported them having been found unsafe from the effects of shot and shell fired during the siege.

SCARCITY OF BEEF AND MUTTON.—According to accounts prevalent in almost every station where troops are quartered, beef and mutton is getting so scarce, owing to the enormous consumption consequent upon the increase of the European forces, that ere long it will prove a serious source of trouble to the Government to provide for them. We have frequently drawn attention to this, and to the inevitable result. If Government do not take the matter in hand, and that soon, it will not be many years before the expense and difficulty of feeding the European portion of the army will almost amount to an inability to retain it in the country.

HINDOO WIDOWS.—Polygamy may have its pleasures, but it has also its penalties. It is a serious drain upon a man's estate if he happen to leave half-a-dozen widows behind him. In this country, ladies bereft of their lords have, besides, an expensive taste for going on pilgrimages like the wife of Bath. Fortunately, the sons usually undertake to do Pooja for their widowed parents, or otherwise it would fare badly with the property left by an uxorious sire. No wonder is it that the Brahmins should be so well affected towards an institution that fills the world with pious widows, eager to lavish their wealth on the priesthood, in the hope of assuring a happy future for themselves and their departed husband. It sounds rather oddly, however, in English ears to hear a witness allude to his six mothers, as happened the other day before Sir Mordaunt Wells. Another curious peep into the inner life of the Hindoos is afforded by the evident reluctance of the sons to allow their mothers to dwell apart by themselves. All the reliquets of their deceased parent, no matter how numerous they may be, continue to live together, and very likely on better terms with one another than during his life-time. It is thought not quite respectable for a widow to separate herself from her co-mourners, and set up housekeeping on her own account. Such a one has her head still running upon vanities, and would be shunned as dangerous by Uncle Toby or Mr. Weller, Senior. Monogamy, though a decidedly selfish institution, has at least this advantage, that a man can leave only one widow behind him, whose only pilgrimage will be a second visit to the hymeneal altar, as soon as she finds a decent opportunity.—Bengal Hurkaru.
